MR. JOHN LONG'S NEW BOOKS

GENERAL LITERATURE.

BRITTANY TO WHITEHALL: Life of Louise Renée de Kéroualle, Duchess of Portsmouth. By Mrs. COLQUHOUN GRANT, Author of "French Noblesse of the Eighteenth Century," "Mother of Czars," "Queen and Cardinal," "Quaker and Courtier." With Photogravure Portrait and other rare Portraits and Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. (Illustrated Prospectus post free.) [Just out.

This is the Life of Charles the Second's famous mistress, Louise Renée de Kéroualle, whom he created Duchess of Portsmouth, and who has left a long line of descendants in England to the present day. She was not merely a beautiful woman, but was a distinct influence on the history of her time. She came from the Court of Versailles, to rule for several years that of Whitehall, and she swayed Charles to suit the plans of the astute Louis XIV.

THE MAGIC OF SPORT; Mainly Autobiographical. By NAT GOULD. With Photogravure Portrait and over 50 Illustrations of notable Sportsmen, Horses, and Places. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. (Illustrated Prospectus post free.) [Just out.

This is the autobiography of "The Prince of Sporting Writers," as Mr. Nat Gould has justly been called. The countless multitudes of readers who have followed him in the field of romance will now see something of the actual life, strenuous and brimful of happenings, of a man of letters who is also a man of action. Mr. Nat Gould has written freely of all that he has seen, and about men, horses, and subjects from first-hand knowledge, and nothing from hearsay.

THE GILDED BEAUTIES OF THE SECOND EMPIRE. By FREDERIC LOLIÉE. English Version by BRYAN O'DONNELL. With 34 Portraits. Demy 8vo, 15s. net. (Illustrated Prospectus in preparation.) [In the press.

THE REAL FRANCIS JOSEPH: the Private Life of the Emperor of Austria. By HENRI DE WEINDEL. English Version by PHILIP W. SERGEANT. With numerous Portraits. Demy 8vo, 15s. net. (Illustrated Prospectus in preparation.) [In the press.

THE SECRET HISTORY OF THE COURT OF SPAIN, 1802-1906. By RACHEL CHALLICE, Author of "Vexed Questions," &c.; Compiler of "Spanish Protestants in the Sixteenth Century," "Mystic Links of Life," &c., and Collaborator in "The Historians' History of the World." Illustrations by JUAN COMBA, Artist by Appointment to the Court of Spain. Demy 8vo, 15s. net. (Illustrated Prospectus in preparation.) [In the press.

ETON MEMORIES. By an OLD ETONIAN. With numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. (Illustrated Prospectus in preparation.) [In the press.

RECOLLECTIONS. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY. With Photogravure Portrait and a number of Original Letters. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. [Ready.

MEMOIRS OF EDWARD VAUGHAN KENEALY, LL.D. By his Daughter, ARABELLA KENEALY. With Photogravure Portrait of Dr. Kenealy, and several other Portraits and Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 16s. net. (Illustrated Prospectus post free.) [Ready.

Saturday Review.—"No more interesting biography of a lawyer has ever been written."

MORE SOCIETY RECOLLECTIONS. By an ENGLISH OFFICER. Author of "Society Recollections in Paris and Vienna, 1879-1904." With 44 Portraits of Celebrities. Demy 8vo, 12s. net. (Illustrated Prospectus post free.) [Ready.

EDWARD FITZGERALD AND "POSH," "HERRING MERCHANTS." Including a number of Unpublished Letters from Edward FitzGerald to Joseph Fletcher, or "Posh," not hitherto published. Elucidated by JAMES BLYTH. With 16 Illustrations, specially taken for the work, including two of "Posh." Crown 8vo, 4s. net. [Ready.

Academy.—"Mr. Blyth has brought to light many new facts with regard to the famous partnership of FitzGerald and 'Posh,' in the herring-boat Meum and Tuum, and has been fortunate in discovering several letters from FitzGerald to 'Posh' which have never before been published. We are grateful to Mr. Blyth for this truly fascinating record."

The British Constitution for Twopence

IN a ceaseless shower small ephemeral things come fluttering from the press like leaves in autumn; "unnoticed and unknown" is the epitaph for most of them. There are lots of people in the world with nothing to do and lots of time to do it in; why do they not start a society for the Quest, Rescue and Reprinting of Literary Waifs and Strays? What miles and miles of thought and experience have to be re-thought and re-experienced for the want of such a society!

Political pamphlets form a large part of these ephemeral productions of the press; but one has to be careful how one deals with politics in papers like the P.C. Some time ago we had occasion to put in a good word for The Westminster Gazette, recommending particularly the Saturday issue as a capital week-end budget of news, literary and general. "Sir,—If there is any more recommending of Radical rags in the P.C. I shall stop my subscription!" This must have been from one of those hot and strong weak-minded politicians who are afraid to read the other side of the question lest they be converted. Then, more recently, we quite innocently referred to the fact that the Evening News had for over two years been publishing every evening articles by people still alive about things in London when good Queen Victoria's reign was young, and said what a capital paper it is. "Sir,—If I catch you bending the P.C. knee to that Baal of rabid Toryism, The Evening News, again, I shall—stop my subscription!"

It is therefore with fear and trembling that we approach the subject of "OUR GOVERNMENT: IMPERIAL AND LOCAL," an anonymous pamphlet, published at TWO PENCE by Messrs. R. Gibson & Sons, of 48, Queen Street, Glasgow. If we lose any subscribers in consequence of recommending it heartily and strongly to the attention of our readers we shall conclude they are enemies of the British Constitution—and have not paid their subscriptions. Yes, there are even people who have not paid their over-due subscriptions—a few, not many. They go on taking the paper when the postman brings it; they take no notice of the most delicate reminders, and if we stop it—"Sir,—Why has my P.C. not arrived this week? If this gross negligence is repeated I shall stop my subscription. P.S.—Postal Order enclosed." Then we feel like the angels in heaven, who have more joy over one subscriber who repenteth than over ninety-and-nine just men who pay in advance!

> "From what has been stated in the preceding paragraphs it will be seen that while Parliament, through its grants-in-aid and through its responsible ministers, retains effective control over the administration of the law in every corner of the British Empire, yet excessive centralisation has been avoided and local initiative left unimpaired—a characteristic of the genius of Anglo-Saxon nations; for, as noted in Chapter I., there is a continuity in our Constitutional history from its very beginning, and to the children of to-day will fall the task of continuing to-morrow the history of that delicately balanced yet effective machine the British Constitution."

This is the last paragraph in this little Twopenny forty-page non-party pamphlet on "Our Government: Imperial and Local" already referred to. Here are the titles of the chapters:—

I.—The Growth of the Constitution.
II.—Parliament.
III.—Parliament and Legislation.
IV.—Parliament and the Executive.
V.—Local Government.

In this little work there is no Preface or Introduction, not a word as to the author, nor any explanation as to its object or for whom it is intended; nothing but the one word, "Citizenship." So we may infer it is an attempt to explain the machinery of the Empire. Being published in Scotland it is probably part of a series intended for use in educating the youth of Scotland, where the art of education is better understood than in any other country; being English, we are sorry to say so. Anyway, this little work gives far the best mind's-eye glance at the British Constitution that we have ever come across. If there is a better we should like to see it. We do not think if £1,000 had been offered a better little work on its great subject could have been produced than this. Whether the author's statements are correct in every case, not knowing, we cannot say; it seems to us they are as absolutely impartial as they are admirably clear, and we wish every citizen of our Empire could have a copy. They would be all the better citizens for it, if for nothing else, then for an admirable lesson in the use of English for imparting knowledge—and all for "tuppence!"

Notes and Announcements

WILL the Trade kindly note that in consequence of the Easter Holidays our issue for next week, April 10th, will be published on Wednesday afternoon, April 7th. All matter intended for insertion in this issue should be sent in by Monday, April 5th.

Mr. Marion Crawford's new novel, "The White Sister: a Story of Rome," will be published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. on May 4th. They have arranged to publish Mrs. Percy Dearmer's new story, "Gervase," on April 20th.

Mr. Hope Moncrieff is supplementing his volumes on "Bonnie Scotland" and "The Highlands and Islands," by another entitled "The Heart of Scotland," that is, Perthshire and its borders. This part of the country is so called not only as containing its most famous scenery, but as best blending Highland and Lowland charms, and as having made the focus of natural life and history. The illustrations, which are by Mr. Sutton Palmer, will mostly be drawn from "Bonnie Scotland," and Messrs. Black will publish the book.

Mr. J. Lane has published a shilling edition of Lieutenant Bilse's "Life in a Garrison Town."

Mr. Arthur H. Stockwell announces for immediate publication a novel, entitled "In the Long Run," by Robert B. Moreno; and a volume of poems, bearing title, "The Dawn," by Douglas Carswell.

We learn that another new firm of publishers, E. Woodhouse & Co., 133, Salisbury Square, Fleet Street, are starting their career with "Inez, the King's Page," the second novel by Mr. Arthur Maltby, whose first book, "Queen but No Queen," had a success in the winter of 1907.

Industrial Insurance is a subject of which we are likely to hear much before long. A work on the question by Mr. Charles Richmond Henderson is published by Mr. Unwin. It is substantially an English version of the author's "Die Arbeiter-Versicherung in den Vereinigten Staaten von Nord-Amerika" (published as Part 17 of Dr. Zacher's "Die Arbeiter-Versicherung im Auslande"). Much new material, however, has been added, including a summary of European laws. In the Appendix are given the details of several important schemes of insurance, some of which have already stood the test of actual use.

Mr. Unwin includes in his Sociology Series a volume by the Rev. A. W. Wade-Evans, entitled, "Papers for Thinking Welshmen."

A third brood of "Sparrows," Mr. Newte's capital novel, is already announced as hatching by Mr. Alston Rivers.

The next volume in Mr. Werner Laurie's Leather Booklet Series will be "Canterbury Cathedral," by T. Francis Bumpus, illustrated with a number of interesting photographs. Mr. Laurie is also just publishing an illustrated volume, "Stories from the Greek Legends," by C. Gasquoine Hartley.

The publication of the new Pocket Edition of the English Men of Letters Series commenced on April 2nd, by the issue of the first 5 volumes, viz., Addison, Bacon, Bentley, Bunyan, and Burke. Five volumes will be published in each succeeding month until the list of 39 volumes is completed. The books are neatly bound in green cloth, with gilt lettering, and are published at 1s. net each (Macmillan).

Many lovers of poetry will welcome a collected edition of the Poems and Sonnets of Mrs. Chandler Moulton, whose poems were read by Robert Browning (as he wrote in a letter to the author) "with flowers before his eyes, music in his ears, and thoughts across his brain." The book will be issued by Messrs. Macmillan & Co., and will contain the poems which have previously only appeared in separate volumes, entitled "Swallow Flights," "In the Garden of Dreams," and "At the Wind's Will."

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. will publish immediately a novel, entitled "The Mystery of Frances Farrington," by Miss Elizabeth Banks.

The Hampstead Reader's Review for April, price one penny, will contain a paper on "The Letters of Edward FitzGerald," by the late Canon Ainger, and a centenary article on Edward FitzGerald by F. Hadland Davis, accompanied by a portrait of FitzGerald, and an illustration of Farlingay Hall as it was when Carlyle visited FitzGerald.

In view of the interest which is being taken in Indian fiction, as recently reported in the columns of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. have secured the copyright of Alice Perrin's novel, entitled "The Spell of the Jungle." It will form the second volume of Stanley Paul's new shilling series. "Idolatry," the last novel by the same author, is now in its third edition.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co. publish "The Struggle for Imperial Unity," by Colonel George T. Denison, the well-known Canadian soldier. In this book he recounts in a most interesting manner his political recollections and experiences as distinguished from those relating to military matters, which he dealt with in an earlier volume on "Soldiering in Canada." Colonel Denison describes in his twenty-eight chapters all the movements and incidents that have assisted the growth of the Imperial idea, from the condition of affairs in Canada before Confederation to events of quite recent date, and his informal but highly interesting pages are likely to attract the attention of many readers here as well as in Canada.

"Studies in Mystical Religion," by Mr. Rufus M. Jones, which is shortly to be published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co., deals with the mystics from the days of primitive Christianity to the end of the English Commonwealth. The book is intended as an introduction to a series of historical volumes on the development and spiritual environment of the Society of Friends. It is written without sectarian cast or bias, and the author hopes that his studies will throw positive light on some of the problems of mystical religion.

Messrs. Jarrold & Sons have just issued several new titles in their Popular Penny Stories. We understand over 7,000,000 copies have been sold of these books in their various editions.

Messrs. Jas. Clarke & Co. have just added to their Sixpenny Series the following volumes:—"Between Two Loves," by Amelia E. Barr, "Margaret Torrington," by Emma Jane Worboise; and "Studies of the Soul," by J. Brierley.

Mr. Heinemann will publish immediately a volume which has a peculiarly timely interest, entitled, "Servia by the Servians," in which the head of almost every department of the State has written on his own department.

The Art Journal for April (Virtue & Co.) contains articles by Frederick Wedmore, R. Ll. B. Rathbone, Lewis Lusk, and Frank Rinder, in addition to other interesting features. The frontispiece is "Checkmate," by C. M. Webb; the Exhibition of "Fair Women" of the International Society at the New Gallery is also dealt with.

The latest addition to Cassell's Sixpenny Novels is Max Pemberton's recent successful work, "Wheels of Anarchy." This series is one of the most popular of the many cheap editions of famous novels published by the La Belle Sauvage firm, and comprises some of the best works of our most popular authors. The volumes are printed in clear, readable type, and well bound in attractive pictorial covers. Among the authors whose most successful works are included in the series are —H. Rider Haggard, R. L. Stevenson, Eden Phillpotts, Max Pemberton, Warwick Deeping, A. T. Quiller-Couch, Silas Hocking, Guy Thorne, A. W. Marchmont, and Keble Howard.

The issues of Cassell's Saturday Journal and The Penny Magazine next week will be special Easter Holiday numbers. In the former a striking new series of articles will commence on the workers in the Black Country, whilst the cover of the latter will be particularly attractive. The new Sentence Competition in the former is, we understand, creating considerable interest.

The contents of The World's Work for April are as follows:—Premium Bonds as Investments; A Model Indian State (Illustrated); The Servian Struggle for Economic Liberty; Some Random Reminiscences of Men and Events (Illustrated), by John D. Rockefeller; Shocked Crops (Illustrated), by "Home Counties"; Industrial Accidents and Workmen's Compensation; The Newer Suburbia (Illustrated); The Chewing Cult and Cheap Living; New Developments in Advertising, by W. Clifford Poulten; The Royal Farms at Windsor (Illustrated); Noiseless Rifle Fire (Illustrated); How Ocean Travelling is Made Safe (Illustrated); Chicken Raising by Electricity (Illustrated); Re-Aligning Railways at £30,000 a Mile (Illustrated); A Novel Railway Ticket Printing Machine (Illustrated).

Messrs. Bemrose have published a neat little penny People's Guide to "The Children Act, 1908," with explanatory comments by G. F. Emery, LL.M.

The Queen and the Archbishop of Canterbury have accepted copies of "Tinkling Cymbals: an Appeal to All Christians," issued from 8, Tufnell House, Pleasant Place, Canonbury, at 6d. net. The booklet protests against sectarian bitterness, and a plea for brotherly co-operation. The author is Mr. Harold Murray, a member of the staff of Smith's Publishing Company.

The Honorary Secretary of the South African Races Committee has received from Sir Richard Solomon, the Agent-General for the Transvaal, the following appreciative acknowledgment of the volume on "South African Natives," published recently by Mr. Murray. He says: "I have no hesitation in strongly recommending it to all who take an interest in native problems. Not only does the book contain most useful information, but it expresses with moderation the views of those who have always shown their deep interest in the progress of the natives of South Africa, on the treatment of problems whose wise solution is so essential to the prosperity of South Africa. These views are put forward in no dictatorial spirit, but with the earnest desire of getting consideration for them from the people of South Africa, on whom the responsibility of solving these problems rests."

Among the April books published by Mr. Murray will be one from the pen of Mr. Algernon Cecil, entitled "Six Oxford Thinkers." The book is an attempt to trace (something in the manner recommended by the late Lord Acton) the origin and development of certain ideas of history bearing upon the Christian religion, by means of studies of representative men who acted towards them as foster-parents. The representative Oxford thinkers chosen for the purpose are Gibbon, Newman, Church, Froude, Pater and Lord Morley of Blackburn.

Mr. C. H. Chomley and Mr. R. L. Outhwaite have collaborated in writing a book on "Land Values Taxation," to be published soon by Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson. The book, which will be issued at a popular price, shows the justice and necessity of Land Values Taxation, and formulates on this basis a constructive policy of economic and social reform to meet existent needs.

"The Psalms and Paraphrases," by Rev. Thomas Young, B.D., Ellon, is a new volume in the Church of Scotland Guild Library, for which Messrs. Black are the sole agents in England. It will contain an account of the Psalters of Coverdale, Wedderburn, Marot, Sternhold and Hopkins, as also the old Scottish Psalter of 1565 and the versions by King James, Sir Wm. Mure and Zachary Boyd. It deals with Rous' version, telling of the revisions which it underwent, first by the Westminster Assembly of Divines and then by the General Assembly, before it was finally accepted for public use in Scotland in 1650.

"Oud-Nederlandsche Sleden in haar onstan, groei en Ontwikkeling" is an important work in 2 vols. with 500 illustrations, describing the origin and development of the towns of the Netherlands. It is by Dr. H. Brugmans and C. H. Peters, and will be published (Vol. 1) probably in September next, by M. Martinus Nijhoff, of The Hague.

Will our readers please note that No. 2 of the Publishers' Representatives Series—Mr. J. H. Crane—which we had hope to give this week, will be published in our next issue.

Report of the Council

During the past year, under the Presidency of Mr. Edward Bell, the Council has transacted what may be regarded as a normal amount of business, though special circumstances have thrown an unusual amount of responsibility on certain members of it.

The "Times" Book Club

The settlement of the difference with The Times Book Club was effected chiefly by the aid of the Hon. Treasurer (Mr. Wm. Heinemann) and Mr. F. Macmillan, who acted as representatives. The arrangement arrived at was approved at a special meeting of the Council in September and submitted to a general meeting held at the end of that month, at which it was favourably received. It has continued to work satisfactorily, and the Council is glad to note that The Times Book Club is being conducted with a due regard to the general interests of the trade.

The Association and the Booksellers

There has been a good deal of correspondence with the Associated Booksellers in reference to two matters in particular. The first was with regard to the arrangement made with the Circulating Libraries by which they are held to be justified in selling off secondhand copies of subject books after three months from the date of publication; the second was with regard to the free delivery of net books. In respect to the latter, the Council informed the Booksellers that, whilst they discountenanced free carriage, they were unable to regard the point as covered by the Net Book Agreement, and in both matters we are glad to believe that the Booksellers have now accepted the views of your Council. Several cases of the infringement of the Net Book Agreement have been brought to the notice of the Council, and have been dealt with satisfactorily.

The Madrid Congress

The Sixth International Congress of Publishers, which assembled in Madrid at the end of May, is generally regarded as one of the most interesting that has been held. It was exceedingly well managed, and the business transacted, especially in reference to the impending revision of the Berne Convention, was of considerable importance. It is only to be regretted that the British Associations of Publishers and Music Publishers were not more largely represented. The Publishers' Association was represented by the President and Mr. Wm. Heinemann as delegates, Mr. G. Duckworth, and Messrs. A. Pitman and A. D. Power (Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Limited).

The Berne Convention

The most important event of the year has been the Conference held at Berlin in October and November for the revision of the Berne Convention. A gloom was thrown over its close by the lamented death of Sir Henry Bergne, who had taken part in previous Conferences and who on this occasion also, together with Mr. G. R. Askwith, K.C., and Count de Salis, represented the British Government. Some of the provisions of the new Convention are of far-reaching effect, and of the highest importance for all who are interested in literary and artistic property. It is, however, unfortunate that our participation in its benefits is dependent upon legislation which is complicated

The International Congress

Amongst the proposals emanating from the Milan Meeting of 1906 is one for a general technical dictionary for the publishing and allied trades. The French Cercle de la Librairie has already nearly completed such a dictionary for the French language, and the Council of the German Börsenverein has undertaken to print a dictionary based on this work, with German, English, French and Italian equivalents, if the materials are supplied. This will no doubt be found useful in an increasing degree with the development of international relations. A classified International Directory of Publishers and Booksellers is another project which has been approved by the Central Bureau.

American Copyright

The Council is glad to note that the new Copyright Bill of the United States passed both Houses of Congress on the 3rd inst. Under its provisions a book printed abroad in the English language is temporarily protected. If a complete copy of such book is deposited in the Copyright Office not later than thirty days after foreign publication, a copyright is granted for thirty days, and if during this interval an authorised edition of the book, printed in type set in the United States, is produced and properly lodged with the authorities, then the full term of the copyright is secured. It is also to be noted that the full term of copyright is extended from 42 to 56 years. For the adoption of this 60 days' period of grace copyright owners are largely indebted to the laborious negotiations of Mr. Heinemann when he visited America in 1905.

The Educational Books Committee

The Educational Books Committee has during the past year been constituted more formally than hitherto and charged with the consideration of all business connected with educational books. It has met five times, and on its recommendation delegates have been appointed to represent the Association on the Committee which arranges the Publishers' Exhibition at the Easter Conference of the National Union of Teachers.

A Members' Circular has been issued at intervals during the past year with the object of keeping the members better informed as to current business. It is not improbable that in course of time it may become increasingly useful in this respect, though it to some extent anticipates the Annual Report.

The Council has noted with regret the sudden and premature death of Mr. Warner Circuitt, of the firm of Appleton & Co. His character and personality were such as to make his death a severe loss to his friends, and following as it did so closely on that of Mr. Sidney Appleton, is the more to be regretted by all.

*The Association have to thank the Copyright Association for the Revised Text of the Berne Convention, with Mr. Cutler's translation, a copy of which has been sent to every member.

Colonial Duties on Advertising

Members will have received a circular in August last respecting the duty on advertising matter levied by the Commonwealth of Australia. The question has been further considered by the Council and the following resolution, accompanied by a request that the Government of the Commonwealth would reconsider the matter, has been forwarded to their representative in London:—

> "That the Council of the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland express their regret that the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia should have again imposed duties on publishers' advertisements and advertising matter, as any impediment to the free distribution of information concerning new publications is against the interests of trade and the propagation of knowledge."

Messrs. Kelly & Walsh, Limited, and their several managers for the time being, have now been appointed Copyright Agents of the Association for the Straits Settlements, Federated Malay States, and Hong Kong.

It is satisfactory to note that the membership of the Association steadily increases. Eight firms have been elected since the issue of the last Report, and the present strength is 85, there having been no withdrawals.

On behalf of the Council,

EDWARD BELL,
President.

March 18th, 1909.

The PRESIDENT said: My first duty is to move the adoption of the Report, of which every member should have received a copy. If no one objects, I will as usual take it as read, and merely refer to a few special points in it.

The termination of our difference with The Times Book Club will excuse my going back for a few moments to our past history. If at some future time the annals of our Association should ever be collected or summarised it is not improbable that the last three years will stand out as the most critical period of its history—a period in which its constitution was put to a severe test and its existence amply justified by the result.

At the date of our foundation the retail book trade of the country was in a very unsatisfactory state, and we were still rather blindly looking for some basis on which to rebuild it. The Association was to a great extent founded with this object, and one of our first acts was to appoint a Committee on Trade Terms, which were being adversely affected by the troubles of the retail trade. After a false start, in the shape of a proposal to limit discounts, it was decided to try the system of net prices, which was first advocated by Mr. Macmillan and was being adopted, for special classes of books, by other houses. This system had the great advantage that it was possible to adopt it tentatively without disturbing the current system when, as in the case of educational books, it seemed to work satisfactorily.

The result has fully justified the arrangement arrived at with the Booksellers' Association, and as it could not have been carried out by any individual or partial efforts it is a striking testimony to the practical value of our two societies. The net system sprang so quickly into favour, and has become so general in the country, that it is not easy to realise that only ten years ago, in our Report for 1899, the proposal for a net book agreement with the booksellers was first put before us.

The system has now stood the test of an attack by a powerful organisation which claimed to act on behalf of the public against what was represented to be a selfish monopoly.

The situation thus created was to some extent a repetition of that which existed in 1852, when an attempt was made to check underselling by limiting retail discounts. The Booksellers' Association of that day, which included both branches of the book trade, was opposed, not only by The Times, but also by a large majority of the authors; and it was defeated partly by want of unanimity but chiefly by want of confidence in its own cause, for the leaders of the Association agreed to refer the matter to independent arbitrators, who gave a decision adverse to the trade. In those days of Cobdenism and laissez faire no other result was to be expected. The ideas of literary proprietorship and authors' rights were still only partially grasped, and even Macaulay, who probably owed more than any author of his day to the law of copyright, descried it as a monopoly, and in the House of Commons successfully opposed Talfourd's bill for increasing the term to sixty years.

Since those days a juster view of literary property has begun to prevail; but even now there are still some who rgeard copyright as an infringement of public rights for the benefit of individuals rather than—what it really is—a curtailment of the author's right for the benefit of the public.

It is unnecessary to dwell longer upon this subject. I have mentioned it for the purpose of indicating the real bearing of our recent difficulties, of emphasising the facts that our success has been due to confidence in our cause, and confidence in each other; and, lastly, as evidence that it is only by mutual trust and unanimity that our Association can be really useful and effective. I hope that the matter may now be regarded as finally disposed of.

Apart from this the most important event of the year has been the meeting of the Berlin Conference for the revision of the Berne Convention. Many improvements have been introduced, and the new Convention has to be ratified by the Contracting Powers before July next year.

Amongst the alterations that affect us is the abolition of the necessity of registration or other formalities before acquiring copyright in another country of the Union; another, more practically important, is that the author's right of translation shall be protected for the full term of copyright, instead of being subjected to the condition that a translation shall be authorised within ten years of publication of the original work.

The most important is the suggestion that copyright shall extend to a uniform period of 50 years after the author's death, as it does now in France, Belgium, and several other countries. Though there may be some publishing firms to whom this provision seems a doubtful advantage, it appears to me that anything which increases the commercial value of literary property must, in the long run, be advantageous to those who deal in it, and I believe it to be to our interest to do all we can to secure the benefit of this alteration. But the benefit of most of these proposals is dependent upon their adoption by the internal legislation of each State, and it is obvious that our own Government should be urged to take the matter in hand without delay. A resolution will be moved after the ordinary business for which I hope you will all remain.

The only Article of the Convention to which we have serious reason to object is that which expressly gives to citizens of non-Unionist nations the privileges of Unionists provided that they publish, firstly or simultaneously, in a Unionist country. This provision, which is made more emphatic in the new Convention, gives American authors, who choose to issue a book simulanteously in the United States and in any Unionist country, all the rights of members of the Convention, and in certain cases more than an English author enjoys, and has consequently diminished the inducements to the United States to join the Union.

This leads me to add a few words on the new American Copyright Bill, which will become law on the 1st July next.

The chief point in respect to which it is an improvement, from our point of view, is that it grants a delay of 60 days before a book published here need be produced and copyrighted in the United States; and for this concession, as stated in the Report, I believe we have chiefly to thank Mr. Heinemann, who unsparingly devoted time and energy to interviewing officials when he visited America in 1905.

Another good feature is that it prolongs the full term of copyright from 42 to 56 years.

On the other hand the manufacturing clause is made more onerous; for whereas we have hitherto been able to print in England from plates made in America, and issue the impression there without losing copyright, under the new Act books must be printed and bound as well as set up in the United States. But there is this peculiar exception to be noted—viz., that this manufacturing clause is made to apply only to books printed in the English language; so that any foreign nation obtains in America more favoured treatment than the British Empire. I do not for a moment mean to imply that this indicates any studied disregard of our interests. It is more probably due to a desire to adhere as closely as possible to the provisions of the Berne Convention without sacrificing the interests of the powerful labour Unions of the United States.

I do not think that I need make any further remarks on the subject of the Report. Mr. Heinemann will say something as to our finances.

It only remains for me as a personal matter to express my most sincere thanks for the support, encouragement, and goodwill which I have received from every member of the Association with whom I have been brought in contact during the three years in which I have had the honour of presiding at your meetings.

MR. W. HEINEMANN presented the Balance Sheet, which he said was a more favourable one than that he was able to lay before them last year.

MR. ARTHUR MILES seconded the motion, and the Report was adopted.

MR. W. POULTEN (Secretary) announced that the following firms had been elected to the Council:—George Bell & Sons, Adam and Charles Black, William Blackwood & Sons, Cassell & Co., Ltd., Chapman & Hall, Ltd., Wells Gardner, Darton & Co., Ltd., William Heinemann, Hodder & Stoughton, Hutchinson & Co., Longmans, Green & Co., Macmillan & Co., Ltd., John Murray, Smith, Elder & Co..

Mr. W. Heinemann was elected President for the ensuing year, Mr. Edward Bell, Vice-President and Mr. Arthur Waugh, Treasurer.

MR. HEINEMANN then took the chair.

MR. MACMILLAN proposed the following resolution: "This meeting requests the Council to take such measures as they think proper to urge upon the Government the promotion of legislation to amend the Copyright Laws in conformity with the provisions of the new Berne Convention."

MR. REGINALD SMITH seconded the motion, which was carried.

The CHAIRMAN said that as most of them were aware there was to be a Congress of Booksellers in London in June, and a suggestion had been made to the Council that the Association might very fittingly entertain the delegates one day. Personally he thought it would be a very nice thing, but of course it rested with the members to say whether or not they would be willing to allow the funds of the Association to be expended in that manner. After some discussion a resolution was passed authorising the Council to arrange an entertainment for the booksellers out of the funds of the Association.

MR. POULTEN read a letter from Mr. John Murray expressing his regret that owing to being confined to his bed he would not be able to be at the meeting and take part, as he had hoped, in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. Bell on his retirement from the Presidency of the Association.

MR. SPURGEON said it would give him great pleasure to move a very hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Bell for the services he had rendered the Association during the three years he had acted as President. There was no doubt, as Mr. Murray had said in his letter, they owed a great deal indeed to Mr. Bell for what he had done in keeping the Association together during the past three years.

The CHAIRMAN, in seconding the motion, which was carried with enthusiasm, said that no one knew better than he (Mr. Heinemann) the splendid work which Mr. Bell had done for the Association, and he was sure they all felt particularly happy that he was to continue his services as Vice-President.

MR. BELL, in thanking the meeting for the vote, said he had always tried to do his best, and he was only thankful to know that his services during the past three years had met with the approbation of the Association. He would like to take advantage of that opportunity of calling attention to the fact that Mr. C. J. Longman was now retiring from office after thirteen years' continuous service. Ever since the formation of the Association, Mr. Longman had been one of their officers. He had filled the office of President twice, and he had also acted as Treasurer and Vice-President, and this year for the first time he would be relieved of official duty. When they also took into consideration that during part of that thirteen years he had also acted as Chairman and President of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, he thought they would agree that the whole trade owed Mr. Longman a very great debt indeed, and he would like to propose a very hearty vote of thanks to him for his services.

The CHAIRMAN, in seconding the resolution, said he most cordially associated himself with every word that Mr. Bell had said in regard to the extremely valuable services which Mr. Longman had rendered their Association, and the whole trade.

The resolution was carried and appropriately acknowledged by Mr. Longman, who said there was not the slightest doubt but that the Association had done a splendid work in bringing the publishers together, and providing a means whereby they could act in unity for their common benefit.

A vote of thanks was passed to the Stationers' Company for granting their Hall for the purposes of the meetings of the Association.

The International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers

THE second Smoking Concert of this young and thriving Association took place at the Holborn Restaurant on March 25th. The attendance was not quite so large as at the first in consequence of a number of members being absent at a Sale at Rome and through several cases of illness, but as a concert, thanks to Mr. Karslake's excellent arrangements, it was even better than before. Mr. W. J. Leighton, the President, was in the chair, and among those present were:—Messrs. Tregaskis, Henry Stevens, F. E. Murray (of "The Clique"), W. V. Daniell, Muller, Sawyer, Fagg, R. E. Stiles, J. Edwards, Dobell, Harold Brown, G. Johnson (Reeves & Turner), Rayson, Buchanan, Jacobs, Godwin, Karslake, &c., many accompanied by parties of friends. With two exceptions the artists were all professionals, and provided a varied programme of songs, violin and pianoforte solos, and sketches, the humorous element largely prevailing. Mr. Ernest Sewell again presented his inimitable Living Marionettes, with two different characters than at the first concert, and his exceedingly clever examples of conjuring. Mr. Cyril Tyler and Mr. Harry Hearne gave humorous sketches and songs, each receiving a double encore, and an "extra" was forthcoming by Mr. Fred. Grove, of the Drury Lane, Lyceum, and other London theatres, who gave a comic lecture by a peripatetic Professor of Medicine which brought down the house. Miss Dorothy Fagg gave two humorous recitations, "Fezziwig's Ball" and "Joe and I at Hamlet," the latter of which brought an enthusiastic encore, and, last but not least, Miss Kathleen Kelly (Mrs. Henry Stevens) sang more "Songs at the Piano," to which much piquancy was added by her genuine American accent—for Mrs. Stevens hails from the "other side"—and she also was rewarded with a big encore. The stewards were Messrs. Fagg, Good, Hextall, Lent, Rayson, Sawyer, Stevens, and Stiles. Miss Madge Karslake and Miss Dorothy Karslake again kindly gave their assistance.

Fitz Khayyám as Letter Writer

FITZGERALD reveals himself at his best in his letters; from these the eccentricity, the slipshod negligence, that interweaves itself into so many of the personal reminiscences about him, slip away and leave us face to face with the real man; we look into his heart and mind, and are enabled to perceive its wistful tenderness, its fine subtlety, its delicate insight, its shrewd humour. FitzGerald was weak in his preferences, and indiscreet in his emotions; but in his letters he is artistic and restrained, and never loses his faculty of incisive judgment. Merely regarded as a work of art, the letters are among the best in the English language. In the first place they are letters, communications from one human spirit to another. FitzGerald never loses sight either of himself or his correspondent; and thus they have the supreme merit of appropriateness; they are neither treatises nor lectures. They are, in a sense, like conversation, with the inflection and intonation of speech; yet one degree more deliberate in their calculated effects, their precise phrasing, their inimitable poise. The very mannerisms have their charm—the rounded paragraph, the capital letters so lavishly interspersed. When he wrote to Lowell in 1878, "I don't think letter-writing men are much worth," he was pronouncing a just sentence upon the type of letter—the literary document, which he himself was never guilty of composing. Had it not been for the fact that FitzGerald was also the writer of Omar Khayyám, the letters would probably never have seen the light; and yet I am not sure that of the two, one could not more willingly forego the Omar. Then, too, in the Omar itself, FitzGerald, by a supreme felicity, found exactly the right subject for his pen. The strength and the weakness of Omar are the strength and weakness of FitzGerald. It was the same outlook upon the world, the same poignant consciousness, side by side, of the power of beauty and its evanescence. "I think," he wrote to a friend, sending him a copy of a book, "you will feel a sort of triste plaisir in it, as others beside myself have felt. It is a desperate sort of thing, unfortunately at the bottom of all thinking men's minds; but made Music of." Beside that deft and beautiful summary of the poem all analysis seems harsh and crude. The truth is that FitzGerald saw and faced the nameless fear that lies behind all activity and vitality, and enriched with sweet and solemn harmonies a subject suggested rather than presented by the old Persian poet. It is the unplumbed abyss, the unanswered riddle, the mysterious secret of the world that is here touched into life by the magic of art.—From "Edward FitzGerald at Woodbridge," in the Cornhill Magazine for April.

Palgrave's "Golden Treasury"

THE first and second series of Palgrave's "Golden Treasury of the Best Songs and Poems in the English Language" are to be issued in one complete crown 8vo. volume, with gilt top, at the price of 3s. 6d. net. Attention is directed to the fact that no edition of the first series, except those bearing the Macmillan imprint, is complete as Palgrave left the book, and as it has been sold for many years. The Macmillan editions, in fact, contain a considerable number of copyright poems which cannot be published elsewhere. It may be of interest to many to recall the fact that Tennyson suggested the preparation of the work to Palgrave, and there can be no doubt that the advice and assistance of the poet in its compilation have had their effect in placing "The Golden Treasury" so high among selections of English poetry.

Thin but Opaque Envelopes

DOES any British firm of envelope makers make a good, cheap, thin opaque envelope? We ask because we have not been able to find in this country envelopes such as are in use on the Continent—thin, tough, and opaque. The opacity is obtained by coating the inside of the paper with a colour of some kind, deep red orange or Oxford blue seem favourites; in some cases the envelopes have an inner lining of coloured paper—a double envelope. We could save our Empire Post Offices many thousands a year if we did not use such unnecessarily thick paper and envelopes.

Germs in Old Books.

THE bookseller, according to a representative of the Philadelphia Bulletin, displayed a kind of muzzle—a contrivance of silk and wire to fit over the mouth and nostrils.

"Reading mask," he said. "Latest thing from Paris. It is worn at the Bibliothèque Nationale by the students of old books and manuscripts to prevent the inhalation of disease germs.

"Those aged volumes are nests of germs. In the great French library masked readers are as common as masked motorists in the boulevards."

ABERDEEN

The following books of local interest helped us well at Christmas and New Year, and have continued good sellers:—"Johnny Gibb," by Dr. Alexander. Illustrated by Sir George Reid, a former P.R.S.A. "Deeside Tales," by Rev. J. G. Michie. "The Lone Shieling," or the Authorship of the Canadian Boat Song, and other sketches by G. M. Fraser, the gifted chief of our Public Library, and Dean Ramsay's "Reminiscences," with illustrations in colour by Kerr. The latter, a charming edition of an old and tried favourite, and only required showing to find a buyer. Dr. Hastings' Bible Dictionaries are selling well, also Nelson's 7d. and 1s. Libraries. Local industries on the whole are dull, the book trade not excepted.

BANGOR

Messrs. Jarvis & Foster, Lorne House, have been honoured with an order from the Royal Library, Windsor Castle, for a set of their series of reprints of the Sixteenth, Seventeenth, and Eighteenth Century prose works, published under the auspices of the Guild of Graduates of the University of Wales. A number of these volumes have also been ordered for the Marlborough House Library. It may be remembered that His Majesty the King, who is Protector of the University, laid the foundation stone of the new University College Buildings at Bangor some eighteen months since. The Prince of Wales is the present Chancellor.

BLACKPOOL

Easter will, it is hoped, bring a large influx of visitors from all parts of the country. The windows of the leading firm of booksellers give small space (compared with past years) to the display of 6s. and 3s. 6d. novels. Attention is now devoted to showing the many attractive reprints in cloth and leather bindings, priced at 1s. upwards. Maeterlinck, Thomas Hardy, George Meredith, R. L. Stevenson, Jefferies, Scott, Dickens, and Thackeray—to mention a few of the pleasing pocket issues—which evidently attract the bookbuyers' eye. Copies of the classics in artistic leather bindings always command a ready sale. It may be worth mentioning that the book-buying public seem to consider that the present-day novel is simply a manufactured article, primarily to supply the circulating library with new covers and new titles; and the true bookseller sympathises—to his own detriment! If sales are pressed—no success; and the novel of inspiration, of real genius perhaps, has no chance. Former buyers have been choked off by rubbish. "Once bitten—twice shy" is the frequent reply to an endeavour to excite interest in a book like "Joseph Vance." Over production is the key to depression in our own trade as well as that of the Lancashire Cotton-Spinner. Authors must surely be realising how pernicious this dealing in "futures" is becoming!

BRISTOL

A Novel Window Attraction.

A window attraction of a very novel description was to be seen here this week at a well-known bookseller's shop. A regiment of soldiers, accompanied by a band, was in procession, and one of the assistants got into the window and seated himself upon a box to watch the somewhat lengthy procession. The music had charms to soothe, and the assistant quickly fell asleep. A crowd was soon drawn to the window—the slumbering assistant happened, unfortunately, to be a somewhat dramatic slumberer. He snored vociferously, and his grimaces and distorted features would have made a study for Gustave Doré. The strange part was that no one inside the establishment had any knowledge of what was going on until a friend entered and then, to the horror of the principal the tragic event was discovered. Trade was quiet during the procession, and no one had entered the shop.

CARLISLE

Messrs. Chas. Thurnam & Sons have bought all the remaining copies of "In the Border Country," with 25 plates in colour, by James Orrock, R.I., and historical notes by W. S. Crockett. It is edited by W. Shaw Sparrow, and is a book of great interest to all lovers of the English and Scottish borders.

EDINBURGH

The business of booksellers and publishers, established over forty years ago by Messrs. Edward and Stuart Livingstone, has been bequeathed to Dr. Alexander Walker. Dr. Walker, who has retired from practice, is carrying it on with his son under the management of Mr. H. M. M'Kechnie, who is thoroughly experienced in every department of the business, having been for four years as assistant with Mr. Young J. Pentland, as well as having served in other bookselling and publishing houses in this city. The firm has hitherto enjoyed a high reputation, not only as publishers of standard medical books, but also as medical and general booksellers, both new and second-hand. It is the intention of the firm to maintain that reputation for the production of high-class medical literature, and for careful and prompt attention to the bookselling business.

Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack entertained their Edinburgh staff at an "At Home" in Hill Street Hall on Friday evening, March 26th. Tea and coffee were served on entering and thereafter the company adjourned to the dancing hall, where the first part of a most enjoyable programme of dances interspersed with songs and games was successfully carried through. At 10 o'clock between 50 and 60 guests sat down to supper, after which dancing was resumed, and at 1.30 a most delightful evening was brought to a close by the company joining in "Auld Lang Syne," and giving three cheers for "The House that Jack Built!" Mr. W. H. Anderson acted as M.C.

FOLKESTONE

Business has been almost at a standstill for two months, the weather being largely responsible for this. Folkestone, like most provincial towns, has suffered very much from cheap books, and it is very difficult to make a fortune out of new books just now.

HASTINGS

The partnership existing between Mr. P. J. Bateman and M. Kiddie at 37, Havelock Road, Hastings, has been dissolved. The business, which has been removed to 41, Robertson Street, will in future be carried on by Mr. P. J. Bateman, by whom all debts and liabilities of the firm will be paid and discharged.

LUTON

The Free Library is this week transferring its books and business to rooms at the Town Hall, where it will be carried on during the pulling down of the old and erection of the new building which will be better adapted to present needs. The book trade here is very quiet and uneventful. For instance, the other day I received from the publisher of the Second-hand Booksellers' Directory the copy which related to Luton for correction, and I had to return it without an alteration since their last edition.

NORWICH

Mr. E. Stanley Russell of Manchester College, Oxford, delighted a huge crowd at the Octagon Literary Institute on Tuesday evening last by his clever rendering of Selections from Dickens. The audience tendered a hearty vote of thanks, amidst great applause, through the Rev. Rowe, Mr. G. A. King, and Mr. James Mottram. A full report of the FitzGerald Centenary celebrations at Woodbridge, Suffolk, makes interesting reading in Daily Press. At the Technical Institute on Saturday, M. Privet gave his ninth lecture on the "French Poets." The subject of his address being Paul Verlaine (1844–96). He is obliged to return to the Continent after Easter, and a farewell social evening in his honour will be given on Saturday. At the Training College on Saturday, Mr. A. W. Daynes gave a capital lecture on "The Production of a Daily Paper." The book trade is apparently good. The usual stereotyped terminology, viz., "Rotten" to enquiries as to business has developed into "Not bad."

OXFORD

Oxford booksellers are realising that membership of the National Book Trade Provident Society, besides those benefits for which it primarily exists, gives opportunities for social intercourse between employers and employés as were not so much as thought of before the Society came into existence. The influences which work through these gatherings can only be productive of the highest good to all concerned. A few weeks ago we recorded the annual meeting of the Oxford Committee of the N.B.T.P.S., with its attendant "Social"; this week we have to chronicle a meeting held at the private residence of Mr. Joseph Colegrove on Tuesday evening last, which proved both pleasant and instructive. Upwards of twenty members assembled to hear what Mr. Blackwell, with characteristic modesty termed "A Familiar Discourse on some Points in Heraldry." Mr. Blackwell, in a lecture of an hour and a half's duration, dealt with his subject in so instructive a fashion that no one who was present ought any longer to plead ignorance of at any rate the elements of the heraldic art. However dry and uninteresting the matter appeared before, the lecturer (with the aid of blackboard and sketches) illuminated his subject in such a manner as to disclose to the minds of those who heard him depths of interest hitherto unsuspected. Votes of thanks were given both to the lecturer and to Mr. and Mrs. Colegrove, who dispensed hospitality during the evening, which was brought to a pleasant termination by songs rendered by Messrs. A. J. Colegrove, F. Wood, F. J. Hanks, W. Hunt (Local Secretary), and others.

Messrs. Alden & Co., Ltd., of the Bocardo Press, will publish about Easter, through Messrs. Simpkin & Co., a new work entitled "Which Is: or, The Unknown God," By an Unknown Man. The book marks an absolutely new departure in Christian apologetics. The daring originality of the conception is only equalled by its reverent application to Christianity. This novel theory is likely to stir thought to its depths, and may work nothing less than a revolution in the present attitude of science to religion.

READING

Mr. Jas. Golder, bookseller and stationer, announces that he has left the Market Place for more convenient premises at 21, King Street.

The Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908

THREE books have just been published dealing with the above Act which came into operation on April 1st. Messrs. Chas. Knight & Co., Ltd. (227–239, Tooley Street, S.E.), are the publishers of "Notes on the Companies Act, 1908," by L. Worthington Evans and F. Shewell Cooper, M.A.

It is published in one volume of about 500 pp., containing full text of the Act, with concise notes on all important sections, very full index, table of cases, and all forms required by secretaries.

The second volume is published by Messrs. Butterworth & Co. (11 and 12, Bell Yard, E.C.), and is entitled, "The Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908," by Frank Evans and H. H. King, B.A. This includes a general survey of Earlier Enactments, Notes on the Act, and a Comparative Table of the Old and New Acts.

The third is published by Messrs. Jordan & Sons, Ltd. (116 and 117, Chancery Lane), and is the third edition of the A.B.C. Guide to The Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, giving information in alphabetical order, on the points most frequently arising with reference to the administration of companies, and the legal requirements relating thereto by Herbert W. Jordan.

A Pirate Patron

[From The Literary World.]

"Among the 'patrons' of the FitzGerald Centenary celebrations in Suffolk we notice the name of Mr. T. B. Mosher, of Portland, Maine, U.S.A. (who is described in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR as 'the American copyright pirate of works by British authors'), just after that of Mr. Andrew Lang. The juxtaposition of these names recalls to us a spirited controversy that once took place, if we remember rightly, between Mr. Lang and an American 'pirate' publisher on the ethics of American reprinting of British copyright books which, for some reason or other, had failed to be copyrighted in America. The subject might form an interesting topic of conversation during the forthcoming 'drive' through the 'FitzGerald country,' which is one of the forms the celebration is to take."

[From The Pall Mall Gazette.]

"THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR deserves well of all English lovers of literature for its recent and systematic exposure of one of the worst of these book-pirates."

You are invited to assist the circulation of three clean and wholesome 6/= Novels by three young writers of exceptional talent, by ordering an early copy of

Cassell's Shilling Editions

WE reproduce a block of the cover of Rider Haggard's very successful novel, "King Solomon's Mines," just published in Messrs. Cassell's series of Popular Shilling Novels. Of the many series of cheap editions of famous novels, Messrs. Cassell's are well to the fore. All the works have enjoyed remarkable success, and besides being illustrated and printed in clear type on good paper, each is bound in an attractive pictorial cover. Among the books already included in the series are —"The Woman of Babylon" and "A Flame of Fire," by Joseph Hocking; "Benita," by Rider Haggard; "The Spanish Jade," by Maurice Hewlett; "By Their Fruits," by Mrs. Campbell Praed; and "The Plains of Silence," by Alice and Claude Askew.

Mr. Robert Culley has done a good thing in publishing at one penny a popular description, entitled "The Children Act Explained"; it is by the Rev. Henry Carter, and explains how the Act attempts to afford protection to Children against Cruelty, Carelessness, Drink and Smoking, and Prison. This "Children's Charter" came into operation on April 1st, and is perhaps the best weapon ever forged by man in defence of the defenceless.

"At Home" of the Funk & Wagnalls Co.

ON Saturday, 27th ult., the London Staff of Funk & Wagnalls Company, Salisbury Square, Fleet Street, E.C., were "At Home" at the Holborn Restaurant. A pleasing innovation from the hackneyed form of outing was adopted, for earlier in the day the party, comprising not far short of fifty, paid a visit to the British Museum, where they made a tour of some of the most interesting galleries. They had the advantage of being accompanied by the Rev. William Durban, B.A., the European Editor of The Homiletic Review, who brought to bear on the national treasures inspected his ripe and varied knowledge of archæological matters and history in the dim ages, and thus made doubly interesting this tour through the treasure house of the world's vanishing past. At four o'clock the party proceeded to the Holborn Restaurant, and after discussing the good things provided, the most interesting event of the day took place—i.e., a presentation to Mr. A. Bain Irvine, who, as is known, has just taken up the managership of Cassell & Co.'s Subscription Department. Mr. E. Page Gaston, F.R.G.S., the genial Chief of the British and European business of the Funk & Wagnalls Company, was in the chair, and those present included:—The Rev. William Durban, B.A., Mrs. Gaston, Mr. and Mrs. A. Bain Irvine, Mrs. Graham, Miss N. Durban, Messrs. W. Norton Chappelle, A. Cranston, &c. Amongst other telegrams read one from Mr. R. Hall Caine conveyed congratulations to Mr. Irvine. In referring to the special object of the gathering, the Chairman said that during the eight years Mr. Irvine had been associated with the Company he had made for himself a firm place in the hearts of all the staff by his invariable kindness and co-operation, and speaking personally he could not wish for a better lieutenant.

In a few well-chosen words Miss A. L. Winter, on behalf of the firm and the staff, asked Mr. Irvine's acceptance of a magnificent lever watch, with massive gold case, bearing his monogram on the back and inscribed on the dome "Presented to A. Bain Irvine, Esq., from Funk & Wagnalls Company and Office Staff, March 27th, 1909."

Mr. A. Bain Irvine, who was deeply moved, paid a high tribute to the help he had always received from his chief, the Chairman, and referred in affectionate terms to the cordiality of his relations with the whole staff. Following, other ladies of the staff, in the name of their colleagues, presented Mrs. Irvine with an exquisite wrist bag of leather, and a charming bouquet of choice carnations and lilies of the valley. The proceedings throughout were characterised by great cordiality, and terminated shortly after presentation.

"Small Holdings in England" is the title of a little booklet published by Messrs. P. S. King & Son. It is a paper read by Mr. Frederic Impey at the meeting of the British Association at Dublin, 1908, with additions.

A Book Belonging to Sir Martin Frobisher

A MOST interesting memento of Sir Martin Frobisher, the famous navigator and leader in the fight against the Spanish Armada, is at present on exhibition in the retail department of Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. This is the great Admiral's copy of "Macchiavelli," which he presented to his friend, George Day, an Essex gentleman whose name is found among those who contributed money towards the defence of England from the Armada in those stirring days of the Spanish invasion of our seas.

Frobisher's autograph is of excessive rarity and but very seldom to be seen even in the great public museums. This example is especially interesting, being written on the fly-leaf of the book in a most characteristic Elizabethan hand—"To Maijster George Daye this book of Machiavell His woorkes ffrom his grte (great) ffrende Martin Ffrobisher ye 26 March 1585."

The little book, which is remarkably well preserved, is entitled "I Discorsi di Nicolo Machiavelli," and is the very rare edition printed at Palermo in 1584. It was, therefore, a "new book" when given in the next year to George Day. The book is bound in a fine contemporary brown calfskin with a gold cartouche sunk in the centre of both front and back covers, with gold-tooled panels on the covers; and, save for the slight tarnish and appearance of age, is in as fine condition as the day it came from the binder's hands.

Sir Martin Frobisher was a most picturesque character even in those days of picturesque characters. He is principally known to posterity by his three voyages in search of a North-west passage, and his name had been perpetuated in Frobisher Bay in Canada. He was in command of the Triumph, in the great Armada fight in 1588. On Sunday, the 21st of July (Old Style), in conjunction with Drake in the Revenge, and Hawkins in the Victory, he first beat the Spanish Rear-Admiral; and later in the day he, with Hawkins, engaged Don Pedro de Valdez, leader of the Andalusian squadron, who, however, did not yield until Drake came to their assistance next morning, very much to Frobisher's annoyance. On Wednesday, the 24th, when the English fleet was augmented from the Thames, Frobisher led one of the four newly-formed squadrons. On Monday the 29th, Frobisher with Drake and Hawkins gave their final blows to the remains of the Armada while in difficulties on the shoals off Gravelines.—The New York Book Buyer.

Easter Holiday Number of the Story-Teller

THE Story-Teller for May will be a special Easter Holiday Number, for which is anticipated a particularly heavy demand on account of its exceptional literary features, and the extensive publicity work that is to be carried on.

It will be published on Wednesday, April 7th—two days before Good Friday—thus enabling the Trade to reap full advantage of the holiday traffic.

From a literary point of view, it will be the strongest number issued, including complete stories by such well-known and popular authors as Jerome K. Jerome, K. and Hesketh Pritchard, Phillips Oppenheim, F. M. White, Israel Zangwill, Mrs. Baillie Reynolds, Charles Garvice, Keble Howard, &c., while the advertising arrangements will be equally comprehensive. In addition to large 16-sheet posters (reproduction of the cover), which will be exhibited on the hoardings in London and the principal towns throughout the British Isles, attractive double-crown posters, show cards, drop cards and counter cards will be issued.

The number will be fully on sale or return, and Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd. will give prompt attention to all applications for advertising matter.

A SPLENDID ADVERTISEMENT.

This is not a bevy of suffragettes from Holloway, but a photograph of the coach and four which was driven through he streets of London on the publication day of the "New Magazine." Messrs. Cassell & Co. are certainly to be congratulated upon this unique advertisement and the attention it attracted

Business Books

THERE never were so many books intended to help young beginners in their business career. We have before us as we write three recently issued works of this class. "How to Compose Business Letters," by Max Rittenberg, published by Guilbert Pitman, is calculated to be of service to many. "Business, Practical Hints for Master and Man," by T. Sharper Knowlson, and "Business Success," by Walter H. Cottingham, published respectively by Messrs. Warne & Co. and Grant Richards, will both repay perusal.

£32,000 for a Library

THE sale of the late Lord Amherst of Hackney's famous collection of books and manuscripts concluded at Sotheby's on Saturday, when the amount realised was £3,941 17s., this sum bringing the total reached during the eight days' sale to £32,592 11s. The principal prices on Saturday were:—

£1,210 for a well-written, complete, and interesting English Codex of Wycliffe's original version of the New Testament. All other manuscripts of this version, except perhaps the Banister and Phillipps' copies, are now in public libraries.

£225 for a manuscript copy of the New Testament, Wycliffe's English version, by Purvey, Fourteenth Century.

£250 for a rare copy of the last edition of Tyndale's New Testament, revised by himself, dated 1534–5.

Miss Corelli and Shakespeare Discoveries

The Country Home for April contains an article on Miss Marie Corelli's home at Stratford-on-Avon, with its many interesting features fully described and illustrated. A reference of peculiar literary interest is made to the Peter Heylin MS. in Miss Corelli's possession, which contains a reference to "Venus and Adonis," Shakespeare's first published poem. No allusion to Shakespeare appears in Heylin's published works, but the authenticity of the MS. is assured, as it bears Heylin's signature and is dated 1618. Many collectors have made tempting offers for this valuable literary "find," but Miss Corelli has no intention of parting with it or of publishing its contents at present.

"You see," she said laughingly, "the learned dry-as-dusts who rank as Shakespearian scholars in this country have made up their minds that I know nothing about anything! So it is pleasant to feel that I may perhaps have some facts to add to Shakespearian scholarship, and some 'Shakespearian discoveries' of my own some day."

MENTION THE "P.C."—Our readers who order books &c., they see mentioned or advertised in THE PUBLISHERS CIRCULAR will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

Letters to the Editor

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our Correspondents.

BOOKSELLERS' AND OTHER PEOPLE'S BLUNDERS

DEAR SIR,—The word "howler" which appears at bottom of page 485 of this week's P.C. has been used this week by a writer in the Daily Mail of the 23rd, when complaining of three blunders in one issue of a provincial newspaper. This correspondent to the Daily Mail asserts that "an elementary knowledge of Latin and Greek is absolutely essential if we are to read and write intelligently our own language." But his letter should have been without its final paragraph, for it makes the writer—doubtless an educated man—go a terrible howler, almost a worse one than the three writers put together of the newspaper he finds fault with.

This sentence is, "In spite of Francis Bacon's (Lord Verulam) dictum that 'a little knowledge is a dangerous thing,' a rudimentary knowledge of Latin would have prevented the writers from perpetrating such 'howlers' as those to which I have alluded."

Poor man! Poor Bacon! Poor Pope! And, further, did not Pope in the 215th line in his "Essay on Criticism" put "a little learning," without mentioning the word "knowledge"? Two bad blunders in two lines for a would-be critic is not bad!—Yours faithfully,

W. PUGIN THORNTON.

Broadstone.

"HOW TO SKATE ON ROLLERS"

SIR,—It is a very rare occurrence for an author to take pen in hand and answer his critics, except perhaps through the medium of a preface to a new edition; but as your reviewer seems to me to go out of his way to pick holes in my little book, "How to Skate on Rollers," which otherwise has received nothing but praise from both the press and the public, I feel compelled to point out at least some of his inconsistencies.

May I point out, in answer to his complaint that too much space is given up to figure skating, that practically only the very simplest and most elementary figures are included in the book, one or two of the more difficult being introduced only where they are analagous to simpler figures.

With regard to the statement that there is no room for figure skating on the London rinks of to-day, and his plea for Grape Vines, the Lancers, the Spread Eagle, trick skating and whatever else he may infer by his indefinite "&c.", may I ask (1) where will he execute continuous figures and combined figures if he cannot find room for the simple evolutions he finds me guilty of describing? (2) Can he safely advise skaters to essay trick skating, the Lancers, Grape Vines, without first mastering the elementary movements to which he complains too much space is given up? (3) Has he noted that for the Spread Eagle, which he advocates as a figure not requiring much space, the National Skating Association in their tests require a curve of at least thirty feet with a sixty foot radius? He will find this information on page 112.

As in dancing, the best method of learning waltzing is to get a partner who can "take you round." Can your reviewer imagine the efforts of a couple who have never waltzed reading up the movements in a book and starting operations together, whistling a tune? The effect in the ballroom would certainly lead to comedy, but on the rink it would mean disaster and probably tragedy. Had my little book required "padding," a description of "How to Waltz on Rollers" would have made admirable copy.

Let your reviewer go again to the "somewhat confined and crowded rinks" and he will find the centre portion of the rink occupied by figure skaters. I have always found this the case at Olympia, Earl's Court and the Rinkeries, Aldwych. Backward skating, I feel certain, has not been included in the National Skating Association's speed tests, hence there are no reliable records.

I feel it necessary to state these few facts, as the review as it appeared is such as to prejudice the book in the eyes of just the person for whom it is written—viz., the beginner. While asking your pardon for trespassing at such length on your space, I feel you will grant that I have shown reason for doing so.—Yours faithfully, "RINKER."

[We think most skaters will agree with our reviewer that the majority—the great majority—of those who take up roller skating do not go in for figure skating, and that a work entitled "How to Skate on Rollers" which is practically confined to figure skating will disappoint the majority who buy it on the strength of its title. Those who want to learn figure skating will find it useful.—ED.]

Trade Notes and Changes

Mr. Edward Howell, Liverpool

MR. EDWARD HOWELL writes: "I am pleased to inform you that from and after March 31st my manager (and comrade for thirty-five years), Mr. Edward S. Arthur, and my son, Mr. Frank R. Howell, will jointly assume the control of the business. They have intimate knowledge and experience in the book trade."

The trade is warned against the Karlton Publishing Co., of Chicago, and its representative, Karlton P. Day, of New York City. This concern buys books through its agent, who requests the victim not to ship the books until his firm send a cheque for the amount of the purchase. Frequently the victim sends the goods immediately upon receipt of a cheque, to discover at his leisure and to his sorrow that the cheque is no good and that the goods are no longer get-at-able. —The Publishers' Weekly.

The business of Messrs. E. & S. Livingstone, established over 40 years ago, has been bequeathed to Dr. Alexander Walker. For further information see "Notes from Provincial Towns."

Obituary

THE LATE
MR. C. J. WHITTINGHAM

MR. CHARLES JOHN WHITTINGHAM, second son of the late Charles Whittingham, printer (of the Chiswick Press), died at Tunbridge Wells, March 19th, 1909. Mr. Whittingham, who formerly took an active part in the management of the Chiswick Press, was born at Chiswick, May 28th, 1840, was really the last link (male) in the Whittingham family connected with the famous Press, which was established in London 1789 to 1810, transferred to Chiswick, 1810 to 1828, was in both Chiswick and London, 1828 to 1852, and since 1852 has been in Took's Court, Chancery Lane, near the former home of The Athenæum.

Notices of Books

From Mr. Edward Arnold.—"Rambles in Bookland." An English Reading-Book for Junior Forms, edited by C. E. Byles. An excellent collection of extracts from Longfellow, Pope, Tennyson, Macaulay, Scott, Evelyn, Thackeray, &c., arranged as far as possible in chronological order of subject, and furnished with suitable illustrations.

From Messrs. Baker (Clifton).—"Sacred Poems," by T. W. Morgan. A collection of twelve short poems which are more remarkable for earnestness than for any poetical merit.

From Messrs. Barnicott & Pearce (The Wessex Press, Taunton).—"Folk Songs from Somerset," gathered and edited with pianoforte accompaniment by Cecil J. Sharp. This is the fifth series and contains 26 songs, making with those already published 130 songs, chanties, carols, wassails and ballads. Many are quaint, and the collection is in some respects unique. Messrs. Simpkin & Co., and Messrs. Schott & Co., are the London publishers.

From Messrs. Burns & Oates.—"Little Angels: a Book of Comfort for Mourning Mothers," by the Rev. Matthew Russell, S.J. The original inspiration of this book came from the early death of the first-born child of Lord Russell of Killowen, many of its pages date from forty years ago, supplementary chapters having been added. We know of few anthologies more likely to bring consolation to the bereaved, and though it is, of course, on distinctly Roman Catholic lines, there is no mother of any creed but will find something to strengthen and enlighten her. This is one of the books one looks back to with reverence, that one rarely speaks of, but never forgets.

From The Cambridge University Press.—"Italy, from 1495 to 1790," by Mrs. H. M. Vernon. The learned authoress, known also as Miss K. Dorothea Ewart and as writer of "Cosimo de 'Media" in the "Foreign Statesmen Series," has been assisted by Mr. Edward Armstrong, author of "Lorenzo de 'Medici" in the "Heroes of the Nations Series," who read her proofs in this history of "Italy in Disunion" which forms volume 4 in Dr. George Walter Prothero's "Cambridge Historical Series." Its sequel, "The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Era, 1789–1815" (volume 6) and "The Union of Italy, 1815–1875" (volume 9), by Dr. J. H. Ross and Dr. W. J. Stillman, have already appeared. The first sixty-five years of the period of "Italy's Disunion" are most interesting and eventful, but have been chronicled in so many works that Mrs. Vernon has only devoted ninety-four pages to them, giving 412 pages to the 230 years ending 1790, about which hitherto the historical student has known little, the general reader less. It is difficult to give a clear account of the happenings in the several independent States into which the "geographical expression" Italy was subdivided during this period; but by not hesitating to repeat herself again and again, in treating of the same event in different surroundings and from different points of view Mrs. Vernon has managed to make her work both lucid and interesting. Seven pages of bibliography, an excellent index in nearly 40 pages, and four good maps, not overcrowded with names, increase the usefulness of the books. Present-day political parties can doubtless find useful lessons in the book, but it is not for us here to point them out.

From Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd.—"Mind and Work," by Luther H. Gulick, M.D., Director of Physical Training in the New York City Schools. Like the good mouser, in Chapter I. on "The Habit of Success," the best way to teach, the author cleverly shows, is by gradually teaching—as the cat teaches its kittens to catch mice. Find work an apparently dull child can do and gradually she is conscious of ability to do it, and then she, her parents, and her teachers are happy, for she becomes a success instead of the dull child she seemed. This book, with its fifteen chapters, is one for most of us to keep by us to take up occasionally and read its excellent common-sense teachings.

From the Same.—"Polly of the Circus," by Margaret Mayo. As a study of circus life in an American travelling show this little story is not without interest. Polly is reared by two rough but honest showmen; at sixteen she meets with a severe accident in the ring, and is carried into a neighbouring minister's house. The minister is very young and very human, and Polly very young and lovely, hence the alarm of the deacons and old maids of both sexes when Polly's stay is unnecessarily prolonged. The truth is that having seen other things she is loth to return to the paper hoops and the sawdust ring. We will not reveal the dénouement, but there are pages of pathetic human interest in the book that dwell in the memory. The eight illustrations by H. M. Bunker are fairly satisfactory.

From Messrs. Chatto & Windus.—"The Road of No Return," by A. C. Inchbold. The story of "The Road of No Return" opens with some dramatic incidents of the Russian Revolution, woven round a young couple who are united in a "Nihilistic marriage." The heroine is soon forced to escape to the Holy Land as a member of one of the large Russian peasant pilgrimages which form marked a feature of modern life in Palestine. Arrived in Jerusalem, she is drawn by one Basil Godunov into a largely religious and partly political revolutionary movement, the secret headquarters of which are in that city. Hilarion, the Nihilistic husband, who has been reprieved on condition of becoming a monk, is seized with the ambition to effect a revolution in the Church, and for a period of probation he is sent to a Russian monastery in Palestine. Some love-interest is maintained throughout, but we are obliged to confess that there is a great sameness in these stories of evolution and revolution in Russia.

From Mr. Y. S. A. Drumkey (75, Fairfax Road, S. Hampstead, N.W.).—"Drumkey's Year Book for East Africa, 1909." Being a complete Calendar, Directory and Gazetteer for the Brit. E. Africa and the Zanzibar Protectorates, and containing information about Uganda and German E. Africa. It is published by authority.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—"Plays: The Silver Box, Joy, Strife," by John Galsworthy. We are glad to see these plays in book form, for they bear the test of reading and give us a grasp of Mr. Galsworthy's point of view, which is a singularly interesting one. He is one of that small band of serious playwrights which is striving to lift the stage from the dead level of the musical comedy and the conventional society play. If the English public once acquired the habit of reading plays it would help, perhaps more than anything else, to encourage young authors to turn their attention to the difficult task of writing for the stage. We hope that Mr. Galsworthy's book will have a large circulation.

From Messrs. S. Greenwood & Son.—Handbook to the Technical and Art Schools and Colleges of the U.K. Compiled from official information, with Index to courses of instruction. A useful and handy volume.

From The Hong Kong Daily Press Office (131, Fleet Street, E.C.).—Directory and Chronicle for China, Japan, Corea, Indo-China, Straits Settlements, Malay States, Siam, Borneo, &c., for 1909. This is the forty-seventh year of publication of the Directory, which is indispensable for all having business with the Far East. It is well illustrated with coloured maps.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—"Every Woman Her Own Dressmaker," by Madame Berge. This little book with 134 illustrations should be found useful by many who desire to make their own frocks. Madame Berge explains her moulding method of practical dressmaking (of which she is the inventor) very clearly, and her explanations are simplified by photographs of some actual fittings.

From the Same.—"Queen Kate." This is a "present day romance" by Charles Garvice. Some charming spot in Devonshire has been the scene of many of the present day romances. Some writers seem to delight in going there to spy out the nakedness not of the land but of the people, and when they cannot find any they imagine it out of their own hearts. There are villains in Mr. Garvice's bit of Devonshire, but they are from foreign parts, thank goodness, and only serve to bring out the virtues of the natives. It is a healthy sign of the times that Mr. Garvice has an ever-increasing circle of readers for his capital books—fresh and wholesome as an Exmoor breeze. His story of charming "Queen Kate" runs on bright and sparkling like a Devonshire stream with no great depths, but depth enough. The description of the trout fishing lesson proves that the author is as clever with his rod as with his pen. We wish him heartily good luck with both.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack.—"A Complete Guide to Heraldry," by A. C. Fox-Davies, with nearly 800 designs and several plates in colour specially executed by Graham Johnston. The aim of the work is to give in a convenient form and at a price not hitherto attempted a comprehensive and accurate guide to the law and practice of heraldry. The author deals first with the evolution of the science of heraldry, treating this most methodically; but the main part of the book consists of a practical exposition of the science as practised at the present day. Every part of the science and each "charge" is dealt with and explained, both as to its meaning and the rules which govern its use. Grouped under each heading will be found the rules applicable thereto and explained with a fulness of knowledge which will render the work a standard one in time to come.

From the Same.—"British and Foreign Arms and Armour," by Charles Henry Ashdown. The demand for books upon Arms and Armour is accentuated by the fact that the so-called standard works, produced with much cost and care in the early part of the Nineteenth Century, abound with anachronisms and errors of various kinds, and are therefore misleading and unreliable; while some of the works issued since that period deal with miscellaneous collections of all descriptions, confusing to the student and irritating to the collector. The book is essentially designed for the student of Armour and Arms, while, at the same time, it is sufficiently popular to appeal to the general reader. It endeavours to smooth the difficult paths which have hitherto had to be traversed by those desiring a complete knowledge of the subject, and meanwhile to instruct the casual reader as to the exact kind of military equipment which characterised definite periods. The earlier portion of the volume is devoted to the consideration in a concise form of the weapons of self-preservation in pre-historic times, followed by a brief recapitulation of the same in the heroic age. The Saxon, Norman, Plantagenet, Tudor, and Stuart periods follow in natural sequence; the early history of firearms of all descriptions; while collateral subjects, such as horse-armour, heraldry, projectile-throwing machines, &c., have their due recognition. Illustrated with 445 engravings in the text and 40 plates, mostly from actual examples, missals, illuminated MSS., brasses, effigies, &c., and from original research in the British Museum, the Tower of London, Wallace Collection, Rotunda at Woolwich, many private collections, &c.

From the Same.—"Monograms and Ciphers," designed and drawn by A. A. Turbayne, and other members of the Carlton Studio. A re-issue at one-seventh of the original price. The present work, we believe, includes a larger number of monograms than can be found in any book on the same subject. It contains over twelve hundred designs, several of the plates being devoted to sacred devices and labels. It is difficult to imagine where such a collection will not be of value, as in all artistic crafts the combining of letters into monograms and ciphers for trade-marks and other devices is an every-day occurrence. This collection is intended for designers and craftsmen—the goldsmith the silversmith, the carriage painter, the sign writer, the engraver, the embroiderer. It provides a series of models or working drawings, following the better taste of to-day. In few cases will any detail be given that would apply to one craft only; each artist or craftsman, be he goldsmith or stone-mason, can use these forms, supplying his own detail to suit the technique of the work in hand. A useful and thoroughly practical book.

From Mr. John Lane.—"In re Shakespeare, Beeching v. Greenwood. Rejoinder on Behalf of the Defendant by G. G. Greenwood." As may be imagined by the length of the title, there is a history at the back of this book. The Shakespeare problem was restated by Mr. Greenwood, and drew a brilliant reply from Canon Beeching. Mr. Greenwood now replies to that reply, and flippantly sets the following quotation on his title-page:

> "Seeking the bubble reputation,
> Even in the Canon's mouth."

Mr. Greenwood writes a very clever, very argumentative treatise, and declares himself an "agnostic" upon the Baconian theory, but holds that many pens contributed to the plays published collectively as the works of "Shakespeare" in 1623.

From the Same.—"Madrid," by A. F. Calvert, with 453 illustrations. Another of the excellent Spanish series. The historical description of the Spanish capital is followed by an account of the Court and Society, the Art, Literature, and Amusements of the Madrileños, including, of course, bull-fighting. The photographs are worthy of a special word of praise, and Mr. Calvert is to be congratulated upon his latest volume.

From the Same.—"The Woman and the Car," by Dorothy Levitt. The object of this well illustrated little volume is to help motorists (and also those who are thinking of taking up motoring) to drive and thoroughly understand the car in all its parts. It is full of most valuable information and hints, and after reading the chapter on "The Mechanism of the Car" everything seems much simpler for the amateur motorist. Miss Levitt's remarks on "The Question of Dress," especially regarding the muffler and veil, should be much appreciated. The chapter on "Road Manners" is also well worthy of the attention of all who drive.

From the Same.—"The Fool of Quality, or The History of Henry Earl of Morland," by Henry Brooke (2 vols., Pocket Library). Henry Brook was born in 1703 and died in 1783. His chef d'œuvre, "The Fool of Quality," was published in 1766, and is one of those books that will never lose its place in English literature of the Eighteenth Century. To Mr. Lane's charming edition, a preface and biographical note are contributed by Mr. Francis Coutts.

From Messrs. Mills and Boon, Ltd.—"Arrows from the Dark," by Sophie Cole, author of "Rachel Chalfont." The arrows from the dark are women's love letters to a famous musician, which are published by his widow, and made to rankle in the breasts of her victims; one of them has to give £500 to get the originals back. It is a decidedly interesting, well-written little romance, much above the average and well worth reading. Miss Cole will evidently give us work of greater power and more sustained interest presently.

From the Same.—"The End and the Beginning," by Cosmo Hamilton. An exceedingly pretty tale, well-written, and pleasant reading. We thank the author for giving us a novel, the style of which is very preferable to many of the books one has to read, "It is a pity so nice a character as Miss Mary Heron should refuse Edward Chard, having accepted his offer of marriage when he was under the assumed name of Edward Drake for a good purpose. One thought she would have proved to be of stronger character."

From Messrs. Morgan & Scott.—"Half Hours with the Minor Prophets and Lamentations," by J. P. Wiles. The larger part of this book appeared in the pages of the "Sower" (a monthly magazine). To most the Minor Prophets will hardly seem a promising subject, but Mr. Wiles treats it in such a manner as to arrest the reader's attention. He explains that the prophets' messages were to the men of their own time, and that unless their primary meaning is understood serious mistakes may arise in their spiritual interpretation. The arrangement of the book is good, the explanatory paraphrase being printed in parallel columns with the original. The new metrical version of the "Lamentations" gives one an idea of the structure of the Hebrew poem.

LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO., 39 Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

From Mr. Eveleigh Nash.—"More Bunkum," by Frank Richardson. A second edition, as it were, of the admirable Bunkum with a clever preface. A book of short stories, some very original. In the meantime Messrs. Debenham & Freebody and Messrs. Marshall & Snelgrove will doubtless bring actions against our clever author on behalf of their daughters (see p. 21), and the damages will be heavy, and will require a third Bunkum to pay them. Those fond of pâte-de-foie-gras should read the story between pp. 157 and 182. After reading it we wonder if Lord Tilney, after lunch, proposed to the rich Americaine.

From Messrs. Novello & Co.—"The Masque of Comus," by John Milton, with original music by Henry Lawes, selected and arranged by Sir F. Bridge. This is in Novello's original octavo edition and contains in addition incidental music, dances, &c., with portrait of Henry Lawes, and Intro. by W. Barclay Squire.

From Mr. Wm. Reeves.—"Well-known Piano Solos and How to Play Them," by Chas. W. Wilkinson; first series containing 26 articles. A useful little book dealing with the works of Sinding, Scarlatti, Paderewski, Handel, Grieg, Elgar, Raff, Liszt, Sach, Chopin, &c. A second and third series is published uniform with this, each treating of about 24 pianoforte pieces.

From the Religious Tract Society.—The R.T.S. send a copy of each of the first five of the new series of Penny Stories for the People. Each contains a complete copyright story by a well-known author. The Series is nicely printed and produced.

From George Routledge & Sons, Ltd.—"The Balance of Nature and Modern Conditions of Cultivation: a Practical Manual of Animal Foes and Friends for the Country Gentleman, the Gardener, the Farmer, the Forester and the Sportsman," by George Abbey. With 150 diagrammatical drawings. 8vo., cloth. The object of this volume is to treat of the chief wild and semi-wild vertebrates—mammals, birds, reptiles and amphibians—found in the British Islands in relation to the cultivation of crops and in accordance with observation and experience from 1845 to 1907 inclusive. The volume contains xlvii. pages of introductory matter and 278 pages of closely printed small type of text. Anyone tackling this book and reading it carefully through (which will take him some time) will find himself equipped with all the knowledge about the birds, beasts and insects of these islands which is needful for him to know. The illustrations, of which there are 150 in the volume, are all of a peculiarly attractive character. The author has very carefully classified the various animals and birds, &c., as to their general habits, whether they are harmless or injurious, or partly one and partly the other, whether the birds are migratory or non-migratory. It contains also an excellent index. Altogether it is a valuable and useful volume.

From The Salvation Army Book Dept. (79–81, Fortess Road, N.W.).—"Harvests of the East," by Brigadier Margaret Allen. This is No. 15 of The Warrior's Library, a series of little books on religious work and thought, edited by Bramwell Booth.

From the Same.—"The Army Drum," by Mrs. Colonel Brengle. Stories (autobiographical?) showing the world in which the S. A. works, how it sets about its work, and what it achieves. "The Salvation Army has been raised from the under stratum of society by the leverage of a Christianity which came down to it; and now, in turn, it has hold of the lever. It only asks a place whereon to stand to move the world," such is the "Colonel's" summing up.

From The Walter Scott Publishing Co.—A third edition with new facts of Frank S. Jannaway's "A Godless Socialism," has just been published by the above firm.

From Messrs. Sheppard & Co., Ltd. (76 and 78, Clerkenwell Road, E.C.).—The Civil Service Year Book and Official Calendar for 1909. This is the thirty-fifth year of publication of this indispensable handbook which is intended to serve as a guide to candidates for Government appointments, and also as a book of reference for public officials generally.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—"The Story of Hauksgarth Farm," by Emma Brooke. This is a story of life on a Cambrian moorland farm. The principal character, the heroine of the tale, Silence, is admirably drawn, she is one of those sweet, quiet, adorable women whose love is "the greatest of all"—charity in its fullest sense.

From Mr. Arthur Stockwell.—A sermon by Dr. Adam Smith, issued in pamphlet form, entitled: "Mohammedanism and Christianity." It was preached at the Autumn Session of the Baptist Missionary Society at Bradford, and is a valuable contribution to the difficult subject of missions.

From the Same comes the seventh impression of the late Professor Thorold Rogers' well-known lectures on "The Economic Interpretation of History." Delivered at Oxford more than twenty years ago, these lectures by the exhaustive completeness of their facts and the pungent vigour of their style have exercised a wide influence on the political economists of the generation now passing away. It will be well if the rising generation will in its turn take them to heart. The volume of 524 pages with 24 pages of index costs only half-a-crown.

From the Same.—Popular Stories by various writers. Vol. 1 of this series contains stories by Hugh J. Allen, P. Wreton Ford, T. F. White, A. F. Goffin, Henry Ball, and others. Mr. Stockwell has also published "The Sword Bathed in Heaven," Sermons by Rev. H. D. Ross; "Mohammedanism and Christianity," by Rev. Prof. Geo. Adam Smith; and "Under the Spreading Bough, or Simple Nature Stories for Children," by Mrs. W. G. Mathews.

From Messrs. Thornton (Oxford).—"Lapsus Cerebelli," by H. J. F. Verses, many reprinted from College Magazines, which the author hopes "may amuse if only by their sheer inanity." We have ourselves found pleasant reading in this little book of clever trifles. The French rhymes which are included show a dexterity and sense of style unusual in one writing in a foreign tongue.

From The University Tutorial Press.—"One Thousand Questions in Music for Teachers," by J. H. Whiteley. Contains a course of questions in both notations specially prepared to meet the requirements of the Board of Education Examination for Elementary School Teachers. In an Appendix are some valuable "Hints to Students about Common Mistakes."

From T. Fisher Unwin.—"The Key of Life," by A. A. Methley. An interesting tale of English life in Cairo; full of thrilling incidents, the fighting with a lunatic Arab at the Pyramids being not the least of them. The heroine, Elizabeth Cathcart, is saved from marrying a semi-lunatic and from carrying out her own strong principle of doing what she considered right by the lunatic's fatal fight with an Arab, thus leaving the road clear to her marrying Major Kerr, the man every reader will choose for her and to whom she is able, after the lunatic's death, to send "the key of life" in an envelope.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co., Ltd.—"The Troubles of Colonel Marwood," by A. C. Fox-Davies. Colonel Marwood is a self-made man and the possessor of a million pounds. He is happy and self-satisfied enough, until his equanimity is disturbed by the discovery that he possesses a rascally and enterprising "double." This double impersonates Colonel Marwood in Parliament, in the Police Court, at political meetings, and in many other places. On each occasion he behaves in a ludicrous manner and ruins the reputation and pocket of the Colonel. His purpose is blackmail, and incidentally his fraudulent representations are extremely profitable. The last chapter is entitled "The Unmasking of the Villain"; he is sentenced to seven years' penal servitude, and the distraught and angry Colonel lives happily ever after. A clever story of the detective order, with many humorous situations.

From Messrs. J. Wright & Sons, Ltd, (Bristol).—"The Medical Annual for 1909: a Year Book of Treatment and Practitioner's Index." This is the 27th year of publication of this indispensable and popular publication, which improves with age, and is of great utility to medical men and others.

New Editions.—Ian Maclaren's "St. Jude's," issued in a popular form by The Religious Tract Society. It contains a frontispiece by Mr. Harold Copping. "Christ's Conquest, and Other Sermons," preached in St. Paul's Cathedral by Rev. H. P. Liddon, D.D., is the latest sixpenny reprint of Messrs. H. R. Allenson, Ltd. From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin comes a new edition of "England," by Frances E. Cooke. The volume is intended for children, and it gives a clear conception of the growth of the English nation. Messrs. Madgwick Houlston & Co. have a new edition of that handy Sixpenny "Everybody's Pocket Cyclopædia" just issued.

Magazines, Pamphlets, &c.—From Messrs. A. Constable & Co.—No. 6 (Lent Term) of "The Oxford and Cambridge Review." This popular Review is edited by Oswald R. Dawson, and contains many articles of interest to undergraduates and others. From Mr. Elliot Stock.—"Hymns Chiefly for Children and Sunday Schools," by T. A. Stowell; a sixpenny booklet. From Mr. C. J. Thynne.—No. 14 Church of England Penny Manuals. "The Estimate and Use of Holy Scripture in the Church of England," by the Very Rev. Hy. Wace, D.D. "Caroline Fry: a Story of Grace," by Thos. S. Dickson. From The R. T. Society.—A Sermon Preached by C. H. Spurgeon—Jesus Christ Himself. From Messrs. H. J. Drane, Ltd.—Two sixpenny booklets by W. Maurice Adams—"Jesus Rex," and "The Truce of God." From The Church Monthly Office.—"Easter Offerings, with some Remarks on Whitsun Offerings," by Frederick Sherlock, Editor of The Church Monthly. From Messrs. A. R. Mowbray & Co., Ltd.—"Weeds and Flowers in the Soul's Garden," by Flora Lucy Freeman; a book for Lent. "The Treasury of Jesus," by the Rev. Chas. S. Bell, being Brief Reflections for the Forty Days of Lent. "A Penny Guide to the Communion Office," by Ven. Geo. Arbuthnot, D.D., Archdeacon of Coventry. "Church Reform," by Rev. A. R. Sharpe, being No. 7 of the Heyford Papers. "Prayer," by the Rev. Robt. Lawrence Ottley, D.D., Canon of Christ Church. The Yachting and Boating Monthly (Horace Cox) for April is The Fitting-Out Number, and is as usual replete with useful and interesting matter. A portrait study of Mr. Hy. Scott Tuke, A.R.A., and an article by G. F. Holmes, "In German Waters," are especially entertaining reading.

SPECIAL SPRING NUMBER OF "THE STUDIO," 1909.

THE WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS OF J. M. W. TURNER, R.A.

In the Special Spring Number of "The Studio," the course of Turner's art in water-colour will be traced from its beginning to its close. In the preparation of this work the Editor has been fortunate enough to obtain the co-operation of Mr. W. G. Rawlinson—the well-known writer on Turner and a collector of his works—and Mr. A. J. Finberg, who is arranging in chronological order the entire collection of over 18,000 drawings by Turner in the National Gallery. Both these gentlemen are contributing important articles, and in addition there will be a "Foreword" by Sir Charles Holroyd, the Director of the National Gallery. About thirty illustrations in facsimile colours, reproduced direct from some of the finest and most important of Turner's water-colours in private collections and in the National Gallery, will be given.

The Coming Invasion by the Associated Booksellers

WHICH paragraphs in our long report last week of the Annual Meeting of the Publishers' Association were read with most interest?

We have not the slightest doubt about it; one was that in which the election of the new President, Mr. Wm. Heinemann, was referred to. We congratulate him and the Association on his election, for no one takes a greater interest, nationally and internationally, if we may so put it, in book trade affairs than Mr. Heinemann. It was that and his reference to the Congress of the Associated Booksellers in London this year in June that had most interest for most of our readers. We hope this or next week to give a new portrait of the new President.

Mr. Heinemann said that a suggestion had been made to the Council of the Publishers' Association that they might fittingly entertain the delegates one day, that personally he thought it would be a very nice thing, and as the members of course agreed in that sentiment they passed a resolution authorising the Council to arrange an entertainment for the booksellers out of the funds of the Association.

It must not be forgotten, however, that the real hosts of the visitors, those who have invited the booksellers of the United Kingdom who are members of the Associated Booksellers to come to London this year, are the President, Council and Members of the London Branch; to them belongs chiefly the pleasant duty of entertaining the visitors, and we feel perfectly confident that they will do it right well.

All kinds of suggestions have been made as to what form or forms the entertainment shall take, but it is premature to refer to these, since we believe no formal programme has been decided on at present. In view of the fact that London is big, that time is short, it is to be hoped that long speeches will not be the order of the day.

The Ex-President of the Publishers' Association

IT was a matter of general regret that Mr. John Murray was prevented by illness from attending the Annual Meeting, and proposing, as he hoped to have done, a vote of thanks to Mr. Edward Bell on his retirement from the Presidency of the Association. We are quite sure that we are expressing the sentiments of the trade generally, both publishers and booksellers, in saying that they heartily endorse all that was said in recognition of the great services of Mr. Bell by Mr. Arthur Spurgeon in proposing, and Mr. Heinemann in seconding, the vote of thanks to the late President for his work during the past three years—three years more momentous, perhaps, than any in the history of our trade. The position of President of the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland is an honourable one, but it is also an onerous one, and no one can look back on our book-trade history of the last three years without feeling that there must have been many anxious moments in that great amount of his time which Mr. Bell devoted so unsparingly to the interests of the Association and of the trade generally. Gratitude has been described, perhaps unfairly, as a sense of benefits to come; in any case we are glad that Mr. Bell has accepted the position of Vice-President.

International Copyright

WE would call the attention of all interested in copyright matters to the letter from Mr. Frederick Macmillan which we publish this week. It is of special importance in view of the proposed revision of our copyright law.

Notes and Announcements

AMONGST works in preparation by Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. are:—The Industrial System, by John Atkinson Hobson, M.A.; Industrial Efficiency: a Comparative Study of Industrial Life in England, Germany, and America, by Arthur Shadwell, M.A., new and cheaper edition in 1 volume, with a supplementary chapter; Sixty Years of Uppingham Cricket, by William Seeds Patterson, Captain of the School Eleven in 1873, with 16 portraits and other illustrations; A History of Malta During the Period of the French and British Occupation, 1798–1802, illustrated by documents, with an epitome of subsequent events, by the late William Hardman, of Valetta; edited, with introduction and notes, by J. Holland Rose; and The Influence of Heredity on Disease, with special reference to Tuberculosis, Cancer, and Diseases of the Nervous System.

Messrs. Whittaker & Co. are to publish during this month a South African Parliamentary Manual on the lines of Dod's Parliamentary Companion. A greater portion of the volume, however, is set apart to South African Parliamentary Procedure, both for public business and private Bills, and contains other useful information relating to South Africa. The work is compiled by Mr. E. M. O. Clough, Clerk of the Transvaal Legislative Council.

"A Holiday in Connemara" (Methuen) is a description of the wildest district in Ireland and of its Irish-speaking people. The book is by Mr. Stephen Gwynn, M.P., and he has written it from the standpoint of a fisherman with a taste for scenery and for the fragments of history, legendary and modern, which attach themselves to its bays and lakes and islands. But its essential concern is with the life of the people of to-day—their occupations, their sports, their humour, their primitive manners and beliefs—and the efforts that are being made to relieve their poverty. There are sixteen illustrations.

Miss B. Pullen-Burry, the author of "In a German Colony," tells of her unique experiences in New Britain, a remote island in the Pacific recently colonised by Germany. The author's account of her reception by the German officials, the story of her excursion to "bush" villages never previously visited by a white woman, and of an exciting experience in a settler's bungalow, combine to make this an interesting volume. There are eight illustrations and two maps.

Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. announce for immediate publication at a popular price, "The Widow," by Miss Helen Rowland, which will be the first volume of their new series of 1s. books. In the opinion of the publishers "what the widow does not know about man, woman, marriage, and the love game is not worth knowing."

Messrs. Eyre & Spottiswoode (Bible Warehouse), Ltd., will about the end of April publish the official English Church Pageant Hand Book of the Pageant at Fulham Palace, June 10th to 16th.

The Country Home for April opens with a beautifully illustrated article on Mason Croft, Stratford-on-Avon—a home one may well envy Miss Marie Corelli; and there are chapters on "The Cultivation of the Dahlia," by P. Roberts, another on "Bonaparte's The Bogey," by A. M. Broadley; on "The Improvement of a Trout Stream," by Alan R. Haig Brown; and other chapters of equal excellence, and all most beautifully illustrated.

Miss Boyd Bayly, the authoress of "Jonathan Merle," has written another volume, which Messrs. Jarrold & Sons promise for early publication. The story, which is entitled "Nancy and Her Small Holdings," deals with the struggle of a newly wedded village "couple," who, starting with the acquirement of a small holding, by dint of real grit develop into prosperous farmers. The story is told with the usual charm and style of the gifted authoress.

With the terror of invasion without warning we are tolerably familiar. The other side of the picture, namely, the possible inconvenience to such invaders has not hitherto been presented in fiction. Mr. P. G. Wodehouse, in "The Swoop" (Alston Rivers, Ltd.) has humorously imagined a most embarrassing series of complications for which the foreign drill books and manuals of invasion have in no wise prepared the swooping generals.

One of the best detective stories of recent years is "The Circular Staircase," by Mary Roberts Rinehart, published by Cassell & Co. on April 16th. An elderly lady, with her niece and nephew, rent a large country house for the summer months. One of the wings contains the mysterious Circular Staircase, which is supposed to be haunted. The plot is ingenious, and the extraordinary incidents follow one another naturally.

Master Painters of Britain

Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack have just published a series of beautiful reproductions of the best paintings of the most notable British artists, with an account of the painters and their pictures, affording a view of the development of Art in Britain. It is a large volume, containing 164 large full-page plates, and is edited by Gleeson White.

PUBLISHERS' REPRESENTATIVES

No. II

MR. J. H. CRANE

[Town Representative of Mr. T. Fisher Unwin]

AN APPRECIATION

It is enthusiasm, combined with an unlimited capacity for hard work and a thorough practical knowledge of publishing in all its departments, that has made Mr. J. H. Crane the successful man he is, while still in his thirties. He is one of the youngest senior representatives of a big London house.

MR. J. H. CRANE

(Mr. T. Fisher Unwin's Town Traveller)

BOOKING AN ORDER FOR BAEDEKER'S GUIDES

Mr. Crane has ascended the ladder by steady progress. He began with the bottom rung, when he joined the firm of Messrs. A. D. Innes & Co. (late Walter Smith & Innes). Thanks to the kindness of his principals he was given opportunities to work in every department, so that he grew to learn the things that go to the making of a book. Then he was appointed their country representative, and had to handle works by such well-known writers as Stanley Weyman, Anthony Hope, Max Pemberton, J. C. Snaith and many others, together with many works of travel.

It is such knowledge that helps to-day. The man who knows every stage of book-production from the time of its arrival in MS. to the time when the finished product is given into his hands to sell, is the man who can talk sound business to a bookseller.

But a publisher's representative need be something more than a commercial machine; he should have literary judgment and an appreciation of the reading value of the books he sells. If he be wise, he makes himself, as Mr. Crane does, a literary adviser, as it were, to the bookseller, and it is a credit to him that booksellers trust to his judgment. He has handled many big popular successes since he has represented Mr. T. Fisher Unwin in town. There is the long array of the brilliant John Oliver Hobbes' novels, the many important works in biography, travel and history for which Mr. Unwin's house is noted, and quite recently that striking 1908 success, "The Blue Lagoon." Mr. Crane's work in connection with the Government Ordnance Survey Maps was greatly appreciated by his firm, Mr. Unwin being the sole wholesale agent for the small-scale ordnance maps.

It is now ten years since Mr. Crane joined the house of Fisher Unwin as town representative. Previously he was travelling in the South of England representing conjointly Messrs. Chapman & Hall and T. Fisher Unwin. The late Mr. Fuchs, of the Art Reproduction Co., gave him a letter to Mr. T. Werner Laurie, who was then manager with Mr. T. Fisher Unwin, and the result of it was that at the age of 25 Mr. Crane found himself town representative of Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.

Mr. Crane is a man with a personality and a most insistent individuality. He is one of those men that you always remember meeting. His large light-blue eyes have something in them (it may be hypnotic suggestion) that makes a buyer change his order from 52 to 104, or from 7 to 13. Unflagging energy and his bon camaraderie win him friends everywhere.

As an Hon. Director of the Booksellers' Provident Institution he shows that he carries the interest of his colleagues at heart as much as he carries the welfare and the value of the name of Fisher Unwin.

"Always Busy" is his motto; indeed, he is so busy that you will observe the photographer was obliged to "take" him when he was booking a large order for Baedeker's Guides, of which Mr. Fisher Unwin is now the sole wholesale agent in Great Britain and Ireland, India and the Colonies.

"The Old Testament in the Light of the Religion of Babylonia and Assyria" (A. and C. Black) contains a summary of recent discoveries in Babylonia and Assyria, and deals with the relation between the Babylonian and Assyrian records and Biblical Criticism.

Edinburgh Book Notes

By "Edina."

"The Love Letters of Thomas and Jane Welsh Carlyle"

This week I have been journeying in the "forbidden land." Every newspaper I have lifted had in it something about the "Love Letters of Thomas and Jane Welsh Carlyle." For the last twenty-five years I have known of their existence, likewise of the clear and unequivocal instructions of Carlyle regarding them:—

"My strict command now is—burn them, if ever found. Let no third party read them, let no printing of them, or of any part of them, be ever thought of by those who love me!"

In the face of such a command, it seems necessary to lay blame where blame is due for the flagrant violation.

Froude did not, or would not, understand Carlyle. He was a foreigner to his nature, and a stranger to his truth. The many misconstructions—so apparent in his editing of the "Reminiscences" and "The Letters" as to call forth a revision of these two works from the pen of Carlyle's literary confrere, the late Prof. Eliot Norton, of Harvard—provided the opportunity for a world of scandal, as disgusting as it was meaningless.

The penalty of greatness is that not one sacred shred of existence can be left in hallowed seclusion.

Thomas Carlyle was not the unloving husband nor the unlovable being he has too often been represented. Mrs. Carlyle was as truly a devoted and helpful wife as he ever would have chosen. They loved each other sincerely and devotedly; and, although they were not always hugging and kissing before folk, it does not follow that their inner life—that sacred holy of holies which the vulgar gaze never ought to penetrate—was a cantankerous and embittered striving with each other. The person who thinks so does not know an iota of Scottish domestic character. I have seen the same bickerings that loom so large in the Carlyle controversies of the eighties going on between my own father and mother. I sometimes have a round at it with my wife. Does that make us love each other any the less? Why, it is the very way in which we are expressing our deepest regard.* That's how we love in Scotland, and Tom Carlyle never forgot that he was a Scottish man—Jane Welsh Carlyle as distinctively a Scottish woman.

One thing there certainly was between them (which this disclosure permits me to make public now) gnawing deeply at the roots of their love—I received it on the authority of the nurse who was present.—While at 21, Comely Bank, Edinburgh, Mrs. Thomas Carlyle was brought to bed, but the child was still-born. This was while Carlyle was meditating on the articles for Frazer's Magazine, which ultimately gave birth to "Sartor Resartus." Now, read this book with the knowledge that Carlyle was labouring under a grievous disappointment in his domestic life, and you have the key to some of its most mysterious passages.

It left a blank in the home circle which proved ever an empty chair in their after-life. Carlyle was too sensitive and too sensible a man ever to admit that fact, but neither "Sir Thomas" nor "Lady Jeannie" could hide it from themselves. It formed a barrier which was insurmountable in their lives, and its reflex influence was discernible by his closer intimates.

Tell me not, however, that Thomas Carlyle, who was as true a disciple of John Calvin—as orthodox a believer in the immortality of the soul, the final working for good of all things to those who love God and are called according to His eternal purpose—as ever put pen to paper, was so sordid and mean as to break that confidence he once reposed in his "My own Dearest Jeannie, my own Wife."

To James Anthony Froude Thomas Carlyle may have been a social brute; but, in the eyes of those who have seen deeper into his character, he will always be a true son of Scotland in word as in deed. His religious life has been called in question, but I venture to say that he was a sincere and humble Christian, albeit one who could see what other men are blind to, even to-day.

To quote his own words: "Some things we can measure, Others measure us," is to make known to all men that their estimate of Thomas Carlyle is the height of their own stature in self-knowledge.

The University Boat Race

It was a glorious day and a glorious race; it seemed a pity they could not both win! In the year 1883 Messrs. G. G. T. Treherne, O.U.B.C., and J. H. D. Goldie, C.U.B.C., published a "Record of the University Boat Race," containing an account of each race, a list of those who had rowed in or steered the University crews, and a quantity of statistical and other matter of great interest to rowing men and especially to University oarsmen. At the request of Mr. Treherne the "Record" has been brought up to date by Mr. Charles M. Pitman. The story of the earlier races has been carefully revised and very much amplified from contemporary authorities. The accounts of the later races have been compiled partly from Mr. Pitman's own observation and partly with the assistance of others who have witnessed them. The Register of Blues at the end of the book contains the names and short particulars, such as School, College, University and rowing honours, address and occupation, of all who have ever taken part in the race. Mr. T. Fisher Unwin has made provisional arrangements to print and publish this new edition if a sufficient number of copies are subscribed for at an early date to cover the cost of bringing it out. The edition would be limited to 500 copies, published at the price of one guinea net.

Specimen Copies.—We shall be pleased to send free of charge a few specimen copies of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR to any who will apply for same and distribute them to the best advantage. Send a postcard to Manager, PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR Office 19, Adam Street, Adelphi, London, W.C.

Edinburgh Assistant Booksellers' Association

THE Sixteenth Annual Dinner of this Association was held in Ferguson & Forrester's, Princes Street, on Friday, March 26th. Mr. T. G. Clark was unfortunately unable to be present, having had a sharp attack of influenza; but Mr. John Macniven kindly agreed to preside at short notice, and was supported by Messrs. W. G. Anderson and William Dawson, who acted as croupiers. There were over fifty present, among them being Messrs. Arthur Giles, Jas. H. Thin, W. H. B. Sands and G. Morris. Many friends of the Association were unable to be present on this occasion, but sent their best wishes for a pleasant evening, including Messrs. W. Brown, W. Bryce, A. Davidson, J. S. Ferrier, C. E. Green, R. W. Hunter, John R. Menzies, Chas. T. Menzies, Dr. Parrott and the Rev. L. Maclean Watt. A telegram was sent to Mr. T. G. Clark with the best wishes of the company for a speedy recovery. The secretary's report gave an account of the session's work, which had been of a varied and interesting nature.

The chairman proposed "The Association," and trusted that it would continue to prosper now that it had outlived the perils pertaining to new organisations. He appreciated the difficulties experienced in keeping up the membership, as so many of the younger assistants were always leaving Edinburgh, and commended the Association and its aims to both assistants and employers. The President (Mr. Thomson) thanked the company for the way in which they had responded to the toast, and spoke of the benefits derived from the intercourse among the members. Referring to the free advice given by numerous assistants, some advising one thing and others the opposite, which he illustrated by a story, he said that it would be better for all concerned if they joined the Association and gave some help with the work.

Mr. W. G. Anderson proposed "Literature" in a happy speech, which was responded to by Mr. Giles, who gave some reminiscences of authors connected with Edinburgh in days gone by. "The Book Trade" was proposed by Mr. Jas. H. Thin in an admirable speech, the fruit of his wide experience. Mr. Thin spoke about the changes in the book trade in Edinburgh and the influence it had exercised in the advancement of learning during the last century, as books bearing an Edinburgh imprint were to be found wherever the English language was spoken. He also said that books could be too cheap for the bookseller, and that they must all regret that bookselling, though in many ways a noble calling, was not better remunerated. Mr. Dawson (John Menzies & Co., Ltd.) replied briefly, and expressed his agreement with the proposer of the toast.

An enjoyable programme of songs and recitations was rendered by Messrs. Finlay Mackenzie, Rooke, Ross, Grant, Knox, Beveridge and Lennie. The menu card was designed, as usual, by Mr. Adam Smail. Votes of thanks and "Auld Lang Syne" concluded a successful evening.

Notes from Provincial Towns

[Under this heading we publish brief notes of book matters from the various provincial towns. We invite our readers to send us any items likely to be of any interest and use to the trade generally. A supply of stamped addressed Report Forms will be sent on application.]

BIRMINGHAM

The Annual General Meeting of the National Book Trade Provident Society is to be held this year at Birmingham, where there is every indication of forming a strong and influential branch. The meeting is to take place at the Imperial Hotel, Temple Street, on Friday, May 21st at 7.30, and will be followed by a smoking concert, for which an elaborate and interesting programme is being arranged. The Hotel are offering special terms for those who will stay in Birmingham, and special arrangements are being made with the Railway Company to allow of members from any part of the country obtaining tickets at reduced rates, particulars of which may be had of the Secretary, Mr. Thornton, 17, Philpot Lane, London, E.C.

LEITH

Mr. Chas. Drummond, bookseller, of 146, Duke Street, died suddenly last week.

NOTTINGHAM

The partnership hitherto existing between Mr. W. P. Woolston and Mr. E. F. Hudson (Hudson & Woolston, 116, New Street, Birmingham) having been dissolved by mutual consent, as reported in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR of March 13th, Mr. Woolston has now joined his old friend and former colleague, Mr. Chas. Sinclair, at Cheapside, Nottingham, where they are trading as Sinclair & Woolston, Ltd.

RUGBY

On March 25th Mr. Ernest Thompson Seton delivered an interesting lecture at Rugby School on the "Personalities of Animals," illustrated by limelight views. As a result it is anticipated that a keener interest will be taken in the popular animal stories by this talented writer.

"Beautiful Gardens"

A NEW and enlarged edition of "Beautiful Gardens: How to Make and Maintain Them," by Walter P. Wright, will be published by Cassell & Co. on April 16th. Mr. Wright's well-known work has long been a useful favourite with gardeners, and this new edition is sure to receive a warm welcome. The book is illustrated with six coloured plates and a large number of exquisite garden pictures, practical plans, and diagrams.

"Book Prices Current"

PART I., Vol. 23, of the above has recently been published by Mr. E. Stock, and contains in addition to many other items particulars of the sale of Lord Amherst's Library.

Trade Notes and Changes

MR. W. MESSENT, of Putney, has removed to larger and more convenient premises at 230, Upper Richmond Road, Putney S.W.

Mr. C. J. Macpherson has been appointed bookbuyer at Messrs. Wyman's in place of Mr. Kennedy.

The Medici Society informs us that, having ceased to publish through Messrs. Chatto & Windus, it has opened temporary offices at 1B, Albemarle Street, W., pending the completion of alterations at its new Gallery, No. 38, Albemarle Street.

Mr. Philip H. Lee Warner informs us that having retired from the firm of Chatto & Windus (111, St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.), all communications intended for him should be addressed to c.o. The Medici Society, Ltd., 1B, Albemarle Street, Piccadilly, London, W., until May 25th, on which date he will open an office at 38, Albemarle Street. Mr. Lee Warner will presently issue a list of works in literature and the arts for autumn publication.

NEXT week's Gardener, published Friday, April 16th, will be a special Presentation Plate Number, and one of the many attractive features will be "Rose Growing in the Suburbs." The trade should write for posters and showcards.

The People's Library

Nearly 1,000,000 copies sold

FIFTEEN new volumes of the famous "People's Library" (Messrs. Cassell & Co.) will be published on Thursday, April 15th next. This will complete the first hundred volumes of the series, the wide popularity and steady demand for which is strikingly proved by the fact that up to the present the sales have reached the huge total of nearly a million copies.

In view of the Poe Centenary, the publication of "Tales of Mystery and Imagination" by Edgar Allan Poe is opportune. Other important works included in the fifteen new volumes are:—"The Compleat Angler," by Walton; "The Heart of Midlothian," by Walter Scott; "Faust" (Parts 1 and 2), by Goethe; and Whitman's "Leaves of Grass." These volumes are published in cloth at 8d. net, and in leather at 1s. 6d. net.

Special advertising matter—prospectuses, showcards, and posters—has been prepared, and the new volumes will be extensively advertised in the newspapers. The publishers will be pleased to send advertising matter to the trade on receipt of a postcard.

The late Mr. T. Sealey Clark

OUR readers will regret to hear of the death of Mr. T. Sealey Clark, founder and managing director of the firm of Messrs. T. Sealey Clark & Co., Ltd., publishers, of 1, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C. Mr. Sealey Clark came to business as usual on Thursday morning, April 1st, but died suddenly during the day, death being due to natural causes. The inquest was held on Tuesday, April 6th. Mr. Clark was the founder of the firm bearing his name, and two years ago this was converted into a limited liability company, with Mr. Clark as managing director. Previously he had travelled for many well-known firms, and was universally liked and respected throughout the trade. Mr. Sealey Clark was born in Somerset in 1851, and will be buried there this week.

Regarding the future of the company, we understand that nothing has yet been settled, but for the present it will be carried on as before under the same title and from the same address.

"Pearson's Seaside Guide"

THIS useful little publication contains notes about many seaside resorts in England and Wales, with details of bathing, boating, golf, fishing, motoring, railway fares, and in some instances hotel and boarding-house accommodation. Mr. F. G. Aflalo contributes interesting articles on: How Fish is Caught for the Market; How to Catch Fish for Sport; and Birds, Beasts and Fishes. Other articles are:—How to Save Drowning People and How to Restore the Apparently Drowned; Telegraphic Weather Intelligence; Things to Observe at the Seaside and Things to Observe on Road and Rail.

An Important New Serial

WE had arranged to publish this week an illustrated interview with Mr. Archibald Williams, the Editor of Messrs. T. Nelson & Sons' great new serial "Engineering Wonders of the World." Wishing to give our readers some idea of the illustrations which will appear in this work we have arranged for some to appear with the article; but, on account of the holiday and consequent early publication, blocks cannot be prepared in time for this week. The interview will appear in our issue of April 17th.

National Book Trade Provident Society

A MEETING of the Committee of Management was held at the registered offices of the Society on Friday last, the 2nd inst. at 7.30 p.m.

Twenty-three applications for ordinary membership were considered and passed.

It was arranged that the Annual General Meeting of the Society should be held at the Imperial Hotel, Birmingham, on Friday, May 21st, at 7.30 p.m.

The Treasurer reported the investment of £150 since the date of the last Committee meeting.

A Record Literary Blunder

APROPOS of Warren Hastings, it is amusing to recall the fact that in his famous Essays Macaulay perpetrated one of the most startling literary blunders on record. The Essay had been called forth by a pretentious Life of Hastings written by a Mr. Gleig, who, having served with some distinction as a regimental officer in the Peninsula, had turned army chaplain and man of letters without achieving any distinction whatever. Macaulay privately considered Gleig's book one of the worst he had seen, but was inclined to let him down lightly in public, and in the process of doing so remarked in his introductory paragraph, "It would be unjust to estimate Goldsmith by the 'Vicar of Wakefield' or Scott by the 'Life of Napoleon.'"

Of course Macaulay meant that it would be unjust to estimate Goldsmith by his "History of Greece," but somehow the slip escaped him in proof, and he had to endure the mortification of seeing the Quarterly go out to the world with this appalling literary heresy attached to his name. "If," says Macaulay's biographer, "this passage (referring to Gleig's work) was unduly harsh the punishment which overtook its author was instant and terrible. It would be inconceivable to imagine any calamity which Macaulay would regard with greater consternation than that in the opening sentences of an article which was sure to be read by everybody who read anything he should pose before the world for three mortal months in the character of a critic who thought the 'Vicar of Wakefield' a bad book." Such, however, is the merciful effect of revised editions that there are few who read the Essay on Hastings to-day who remember how a slip of the pen once caused inextinguishable merriment among Macaulay's contemporaries. —Edinburgh Evening Dispatch.

Nathaniel Hawthorne's Vivid Imagination

FROM the pages of an old volume of the "Magazine of American History" we reproduce an interesting account of Nathaniel Hawthorne's first printed article.

"His uncle, Robert Manning (of Salem, Massachusetts), was a horticulturist, and in the spring of 1822 was much troubled by an insect which attacked his trees. Just at this time there appeared in the Palladium newspaper a minute description of the insect, its origin, progress and the best method for exterminating it. Mr. Manning was so much pleased with the article that he ordered several copies of the paper for distribution among his horticultural friends. At this time Hawthorne was a student in Bowdoin College, and happened to arrive home just when his uncle (who was mainly responsible for the famous romancer's education) was receiving the paper and commenting freely on the article. Hawthorne said to a young friend (who in his old age communicated this story to Mrs. Kate Tannatt Woods), 'I wrote that article.' 'But what do you know about bugs?' inquired his friend. 'Nothing,' was the reply, 'I wrote it to pass away an idle hour, and it was entirely made up from my imagination. Now, if Uncle Robert should find it out he would be very angry, so you must keep my secret. I have not the slightest knowledge of this or any other insect.'"

"Rob Roy" as a Pain-Killer

LOWELL was lying on the lounge, his limbs bent and twisted with rheumatic gout, when Doctor O. W. Holmes came in and asked after his health. Lowell cheerfully replied, "I've forgotten all about my pains, for I am reading Scott's 'Rob Roy.'" This was better than opium or cocaine to the man whose enjoyment was found in literature. His life had been spent in the pursuit and cultivation of letters, and as his day declined, amidst pain and trial, books had power to charm away bodily ills or to remove him temporarily from their control.—From Sir Leslie Stephen's "Life and Letters."

Advertisements in Addison's "Spectator"

THE Spectator was one of the earliest magazines to carry general advertising, and the recent purchase of a complete file by Harvard University has enabled Mr. Lawrence Lewis to make an interesting study of this advertising, in a book to be published by Houghton Mifflin Company this Spring. The volume is called "The Advertisements of the Spectator: Being a study of the Literature, History and Manners of Queen Anne's England as they are reflected therein, as well as an illustration of the Origins of the Art of Advertising, with an Appendix of representative Advertisements now for the first time reprinted."—The Chicago Dial.

An American Book in French Get-up

A MODEST little book called "Houses of Glass," published by Messrs. Duffield & Company, of New York, is likely, they think, to make itself something of a landmark in publishing history. A copy just received shows it to be in detail and general make-up a faithful copy of Continental, or European bookmaking, as opposed to the mode that has prevailed hitherto in English-speaking countries. The little volume is a collection of clever short stories and sketches of Paris by Helen Mackay, otherwise Mrs. Archibald K. Mackay, who is very well known in the social circles of New York and Lenox. It is bound in paper covers, just as a book by Daudet or Anatole France would be, with a coloured reproduction of a Parisian street scene on the front cover and illustrations in pen and ink along the margins of the text. The type page and format are also French, with dashes preceding the paragraphs of conversation, and an absence of quotation marks. In this country novels have been tried in a yellow paper cover get-up imitating the French, but not with encouraging results.

Letters to the Editor

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT

SIR,—A suggestion has been made in various quarters, privately and in the press, that it would be advisable to insert a provision in our Copyright Law to the effect that in order to obtain copyright protection here a book must be printed either in Great Britain or in some country which is a signatory of the Convention of Berne. The avowed object of such a provision would be to force the United States into joining the Berne Convention and abolishing the "manufacturing clauses" in its Copyright Law which are so irritating and so injurious to English authors. As things stand at present, a book of American origin obtains copyright in all the countries of the Berne Convention if it is first published in any one of them, while as is well known no book by a British author can secure protection in America unless it is wholly manufactured within the confines of the United States.

While I regret as much as anybody that the legislators of the United States should have seen fit to frame their law on narrow Protectionist lines, I am afraid that any attempt to coerce them by a policy of retaliation would not only fail to secure its object, but would result in depriving British authors of even such advantages as they enjoy at the present time.

Section 8 of the new United States Copyright Act reads as follows:—

SEC. 8. That the author or proprietor of any work made the subject of copyright by this Act, or his executors, administrators, or assigns, shall have copyright for such work under the conditions and for the terms specified in this Act: Provided, however, That the copyright secured by this Act shall extend to the work of an author or proprietor who is a citizen or subject of a foreign state or nation, only:

(a) When an alien author or proprietor shall be domiciled within the United States at the time of the first publication of his work; or

(b) When the foreign state or nation of which such author or proprietor is a citizen or subject grants, either by treaty, convention, agreement, or law, to citizens of the United States the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as to its own citizens, or copyright protection substantially equal to the protection secured to such foreign author under this Act or by treaty; or when such foreign state or nation is a party to an international agreement which provides for reciprocity in the granting of copyright, by the terms of which agreement the United States may, at its pleasure, become a party thereto.

The existence of the reciprocal conditions aforesaid shall be determined by the President of the United States by proclamation made from time to time, as the purposes of this Act may require.

It will be seen from the above that an alien author is only entitled to protection under the law of the United States when the country to which he belongs grants the benefit of copyright to citizens of the United States on substantially the same conditions as to its own subjects. I need hardly point out that such a measure of retaliation as has been suggested would have the effect of abolishing the reciprocal conditions required by the United States law, and the proclamation under which British authors at present enjoy protection in America would doubtless be immediately withdrawn by the President.—I am, &c.,

FREDERICK MACMILLAN.

St. Martin's Street, W.C.

April 5th, 1909.

[We think most people who have studied the matter will agree with Mr. Frederick Macmillan's views—unless, of course, they are mainly interested in the manufacturing question. There is a strong and growing feeling in the United States in favour of bringing the great Republic into line with the other nations as regards International Copyright, and to strengthen their hands seems to be much the best policy. We fully sympathise with our printers, and yet are convinced that the action they advocate would defeat its own object and do irreparable damage to the interests of British authors and holders of copyright. Mr. George Haven Putnam in his letter in our issue of March 27th reminded us that English law is now less hospitable than the new American statute—referring to the sixty days of grace—and we believe with him that if England gave the same period of probation it would be an excellent thing for all concerned in the making of books. —ED. P.C.]

"THE ROAD OF NO RETURN"

DEAR SIR,—Will you allow me to call attention to a slight misconception contained in the notice of my wife's new book, "The Road of No Return," in the issue of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR of April 3rd.

After quoting from the dust cover the notice says, "There is a great sameness in these stories of evolution and revolution in Russia." The plot is laid in Palestine, and the book is entirely a Palestine novel of to-day, and beyond the first two or three chapters has nothing whatever to do with the ordinary revolution in Russia. Moreover, it scouts the violent methods of which people are heartily tired.

Another commentator has remarked of this book, "It is refreshing to find a novel that breaks such entirely new ground." I feel sure you will at your earliest opportunity remove the misunderstanding that the novel is a story of Russia. With apologies for troubling you.

I am, Dear Sir,

Faithfully yours,

STANLEY INCHBOLD.

[We do not think anyone who read the notice can very well be mislead, as it states that the heroine was "soon forced to escape to the Holy Land," and explains that her Nihilistic husband is also sent there to a Russian monastery. The main characters are Russian, and if they are not trying to regenerate Russia in some fashion we do not know what their objects are.—ED.]

"SEVENPENNY NOVELS"

DEAR SIR,—A trade contemporary of April 3rd states that "It seems to be generally admitted that during the last six months, at any rate, the sale of the ordinary 6s. novel has considerably fallen off." If the writer had said 16 years he would have been nearer the mark, and if he had used the word "worthless," instead of "ordinary," he would have been still nearer. If anything has killed the 6s. novel it is its want of value, both as regards a marketable article or food for the mind. No; good works by good authors have a large sale still, and are too valuable to fall to 7d. or 1s. until they have run a full course of sale, say of 5 or 6 years or more. There are other reasons for the drop in sale, and that every unprejudiced person should clearly see. Amongst these reasons are the increase of lending libraries, both large and small, the reduction of the subscriptions, and the increased use of these libraries by the public who go to borrow a dirty book in a dirty cover for two dirty coppers. Another reason: several (perhaps 12) years ago, when the 6d. paper reprints got into full swing, the bookseller's constant complaint was that the 6s. novels were dead, killed by the 6d. reprint. By the way, the libraries "killed" the sale before that, and now the 7d. and 1s. editions have "killed" the 6s. novel for the third time. As the 6s. novel must thus by now be "stone dead," with the exception of those by the best authors, why argue over corpses? Sensible booksellers go with the times, and are pushing the cheap libraries, 7d. and otherwise, and are reaping the benefit by gaining a new clientèle, and a new reading public is being created to an extent that will in a short time fairly recoup the wall-eyed bookseller, who has hitherto rejoiced over the sale of 9 copies of a 6s. novel at a profit of about 10d. a copy out of 13 bought, and added to his wealth by selling off the balance at the loss of about 2s. 10d. per copy!

Not all 7d. or 1s. reprints are worth the money, but at least one gets a clean book, instead of a greasy microbe-laden bundle of dirty leaves, for the loan of which one pays 2d., with the possible privilege of a doctor's bill in the near future. In your issue of to-day's date you quote the following from the Philadelphia Bulletin: "Reading Mask" . . . "Latest thing from Paris. It is worn at the Bibliothèque Nationale by the students of old books and manuscripts to prevent the inhalation of disease germs."

Properly worked, the cheap cloth editions are a god-send to the bookseller and the public, increase the fame of authors worth reading, and give a quick return to the small retailer who is unable to find the cash to establish and keep up a successful library, say, such as that run by the Messrs. Boots, for instance. Excuse the length of this letter, if you think it worth printing, but I am only stating the views of very many booksellers who are unable or disinclined to write to the trade journals on the subject, as well as those of,—Yours truly,

April 3rd. "BOOKSELLER."

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—Two additions to the "Useful Knowledge Series" are "Thought and Feeling," by F. Ryland, M.A., designed to serve as an introduction to the study of some portion of the field of psychology, and giving a clear outline of the elementary phenomena of mental life, and "The British Race," by John Munro, intended to bring the results and views of modern anthropologists before the public in familiar language. New studies in this direction have thrown much light upon the real nature of the British people.

From Messrs. Ralph Holland & Co.—"Concurrent Practical and Theoretical Geometry," by W. J. Potter, M.A. The object of this text-book is to provide a complete, carefully planned and conveniently arranged course, in which the two branches of geometry should proceed concurrently from the simplest to the highest stages usually taught in schools. This scheme is the result of several years' practical experience at the Roan School for Boys, Greenwich, it has been modified from time to time, and is now published at the suggestion of friends and colleagues, in this and other schools, who have tested it in their classes, and have spoken of it in terms of high appreciation. Well got up, and excellently printed in a clear and concise manner, it should prove a useful class book in every way.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack.—Two new additions to Messrs. Jack's Masterpieces in Colours are Burne-Jones and Holbein—each containing eight full-page reproductions in colour. Twenty-six have now been published in this series, and others are promised.

From The Labour Co-Partnership Association 6, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.—"Twenty-eight years of Co-partnership at Guise," translated from the French by Aneurin Williams, with an introduction by the Right Hon. Thomas Burt, M.P. This treatise is published with the view of instituting a similar method in the management of large works in England. It aims at being a solution of the labour problem in making an equitable distribution of productive wealth and putting an end to strikes, which are always regrettable.

From Mr. J. Lane.—The new number of the "Spanish Series" deals with the "Royal Palaces of Spain," and contains no less than 164 illustrations of the seven principal palaces of the Spanish kings. Mr. Calvert discourses pleasantly upon the treasures and beauties of these historic buildings. He knows his subject thoroughly, and there is just the right note of enthusiasm to carry the reader along. The high standard of this series is being well maintained.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—"Gulliver's Travels," by Jonathan Swift. With Introduction, Notes, Glossary, Questions, and Subjects for Essays, by G. C. Earle, B.A., Assistant Master at King Alfred's School, Hampstead. Written by the Dean of St. Patrick's, Dublin, 200 years ago, Gulliver's Travels will always be welcome. With these notes the pleasure of reading it is much increased.

From Messrs. Horace Marshall & Sons.—In the "Carmelite Classics," Scott's "Lady of the Lake," edited with introduction, glossary, &c., by C. Linklater Thompson. The notes are reduced to a minimum, and refer only to such matters as are likely to be unknown to pupils.

From Mr. J. Milne.—"Irene of the Ringlets," by Horace Wyndham. A popular edition of this clever and interesting story, dealing with stage life.

From Messrs. Alexander Moring, Ltd., The De La More Press.—"Marcus Aurelius," from the Russian of Merejkowski, by G. A. Mounsey. An interesting criticism of the philosopher Emperor of the Romans.

From Mr. Eveleigh Nash.—"Fresh Leaves and Green Pastures." This is a handsome volume of reminiscences by the author of "Leaves from a Life." The writer brings to her task a good memory, an able and caustic method of describing English family life in small towns, and in the west country from the middle of last century onwards. It is in great part a picture of dull, good, sordid stupid life in the "good old days," which, so far as this book is a reflection of them, no one will want back. The interest is well sustained throughout, perhaps because five-and-twenty years ago a dozen libel actions would have threatened, for the authoress takes the public into her confidence without reserve, and says what she thinks in good plain English. Here is a delightful bit. Barnes the Dorset poet gave her his book with his autograph. "This," our author says, "I possessed until the other day, when I gave it to a most ungrateful and detestable relation of mine and now I devoutly wish I had done nothing of the sort." The writer is evidently a charming personality, a warm lover, a good hater, and devoted to dogs and nature.

From the Offices of "The Fine Art Journal" (Arundel Street, W.C.).—"Art Prices Current, 1907–8: being a Record of Sale Prices at Christie's during the season," with an Index to Artists and Engravers' Names. This appears to be a catalogue of pictures, drawings, and engravings with prices obtained at various sales. Without the Index the volume would be of little value.

From Messrs. Geo. Philip & Son, Ltd.—Philip's Handy Administrative Atlases of the British Islands, showing the Local Government and Parliamentary Divisions. In these Atlases the attempt is made for the first time to present in a complete and convenient form the actual Administrative Divisions of England and Wales, as they exist at the present time for all purposes of Local Government and Parliamentary Representation. To County Councillors, Municipal Administrators, and all who are interested in conducting the affairs of local government, these Handy Administrative Atlases must specially appeal, since they distinguish in a series of separate and detailed maps of the Counties of England and Wales all the new administrative divisions, including Administrative Counties, County Boroughs, Municipal Boroughs, Urban Districts and Rural Districts. In addition, the Parliamentary Divisions and Boroughs are given, and every railway station is marked. An alphabetical list of the various Administrative Divisions, and a copious Consulting Index to the names given in the maps, increase the value of the Atlas as a book of reference to all engaged or interested in Local Government or Parliamentary work. They are clearly printed and are edited by Geo. Philips, F.R.G.S.

From Mr. Guilbert Pitman.—"International Commercial Lexicon" (Internaciona Komercal Lexiko). In English, Ido, French, German, with specimen business letters, by P. D. Hugon. It is sufficient to give a specimen business letter trusting it is as understandable to our readers—and perhaps as enjoyable reading—as it is to us. So much do we think of this new style that we are cogitating whether we should not print half the columns of the P.C. in Linguo Internaciona.

From The Sunday School Association.—No. 1 of "The Sunday-School Quarterly," edited by the Rev. J. Arthur Pearson. This review is published "in the hope that encouragement to the isolated workers of our schools may result in increased life and activity," and to help on the Sunday School Reformation.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—"How to Get Married," by the Author of "How to be Happy Though Married." This book is written for "the young man, who has won the consent of a girl . . . the consent of her father; who has sufficient income upon which to marry, but who is quite ignorant how to insure his life, make marriage settlements; get banns called, and so on." It deals with Marriage in Church by Banns, Special Licence, Registrar's Certificate, At a Registrar's Office, In Nonconformist Chapels, In Scotland and Ireland, &c.

From Messrs. Watts & Co.—"Haeckel: His Life and Work," by Professor W. Bölsche. Haeckel, the great scientist and biologist, is to Germany what Darwin is to England, and the story of his life is very welcome.

From Messrs. Williams & Norgate, Ltd.—Part 1 of "The Mineral Kingdom," by Dr. Reinhard Brauns, translated with additions by D. J. Spencer, M.A., Assistant in Mineral Dept. of the Brit. Museum.

From the Same.—"Life and Matter," second edition, by Sir Oliver Lodge, D.Sc., LL.D., F.R.S., Principal of the University of Birmingham. This small volume treats of Monism, the Law of Substance, the Development of Life, &c., as a philosopher of Sir Oliver Lodge's standing would be expected to deal with such subjects.

Magazines.—The English Review for April (Duckworth & Co.) contains in addition to many articles on important topics by well-known writers: "Blue Water and the Thin Red Line" and "Capital Punishment in France," by Professor Simons.

Some Sixpenny Editions: From Messrs. Greening & Co.—"The Social Kaleidoscope," by Geo. R. Sims; vivid stories of life in all ranks of society. "Mrs. Evelyn's Husbands," by Anna, Comtesse de Bremont. From Messrs. C. A. Pearson, Ltd.—"The Treasure of the Temple," by Joseph Lyons and Cecil Raleigh. This is No. 2 of Lyons' Library, vol. 1 being "The Master Crime." For lovers of the sensational in fiction these novels are not easy to beat.

SPECIAL SPRING NUMBER OF "THE STUDIO," 1909.

THE WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS OF J. M. W. TURNER, R.A.

In the Special Spring Number of "The Studio," the course of Turner's art in water-colour will be traced from its beginning to its close. In the preparation of this work the Editor has been fortunate enough to obtain the co-operation of Mr. W. G. Rawlinson—the well-known writer on Turner and a collector of his works—and Mr. A. J. Finberg, who is arranging in chronological order the entire collection of over 18,000 drawings by Turner in the National Gallery. Both these gentlemen are contributing important articles, and in addition there will be a "Foreword" by Sir Charles Holroyd, the Director of the National Gallery. About thirty illustrations in facsimile colours, reproduced direct from some of the finest and most important of Turner's water-colours in private collections and in the National Gallery, will be given.

30 Specially Mounted Plates in Colour

Paper Edition, 5s. net. Cloth, gilt top, 7s. 6d. net.

Notes and Queries

"A writer in Notes and Queries says"

It is good testimony to the value of the delightful little publication in which Mr. John C. Francis has taken interest with so much heart for so many years, that it has been, and is, so constantly referred to in books and every other kind of literary publication. To come across in book or magazine the statement that "a writer in Notes and Queries says so-and-so" is as common as the familiar household expression, "A little bird told me."

"N. & Q." is the literary little bird which quietly flies about all over the world telling what people know or want to know on every subject of human interest. Never is a single number of "N. & Q." uninteresting. Variety is charming, and "N. & Q." would be nothing if not various. In no other publication do the sublime and the ridiculous meet on such even footing with perhaps nothing between them, or it may be logic and philosophy.

An Anecdote of Johnson

Take the Easter Number, and on the first page we get some anecdotes of Dr. Johnson not to be found, as F. H. tells us, in "Boswell." One is very characteristic, told by Frederick Reynolds in his account of his own "Life and Times," 2 vols., 1826.

"One morning, shortly after our return, he called on my father concerning some law business, and was ushered into the drawing-room, where I and my three brothers, eager to see, and still more eager to say we had seen, the Leviathan of Literature, soon followed. All were, or affected to appear, struck with awe, except my brother Jack, who, having just published his 'Indian Scalp,' was most anxious to elicit the Doctor's opinion. Accordingly, he seated himself close to him, and began:—

"'Any news in the literary world, sir?'

"'Sir!' cried the Doctor.

"'Anything new, Doctor, I say, in the literary world?' continued the unhesitating poet.

"'Young man, talk to me of Ranelagh and Vauxhall; of what you may understand; but not a word on literature.'

"We all smiled aside; but the author was omnipotent in Jack's mind, and, scarcely ruffled, he returned to the charge.

"'Have you heard of a new poem, sir?' (No answer.) 'A new poem, sir? A new poem, sir, called' (with rising confusion) 'called "The Indian Scalp"; rather, I believe' (confusion increasing) 'I believe it is tolerably well spoken of. You don't know who wrote it, Doctor?'

"'No, but I do,' cried I, eagerly seizing the opportunity of making myself conspicuous in my turn; 'don't I, Jack? Indeed, sir, he awakened me so many nights, and taught me so many verses, that, if you like, I can repeat you almost the whole poem, sir, with the same rapidity and facility with which he wrote it.'

"'Facilis descensus Averni,' muttered the Doctor, and then added, in an authoritative tone, 'Ring the bell, one of you, ring the bell,' and the servant was ordered to summon my father, on whose appearance the Doctor formally arose, and said:—

"'When next I call here, sir, show me where there is civilisation, not into your menagerie.'"

The Speed Limit

In these days of motors flying at anything from ten to one hundred miles an hour, it is amusing to find that a man, Nicholas Wood, who was all along "in the van of railway progress," declaring, "It is far from my wish to promulgate to the world that the ridiculous expectations, or rather professions, of the enthusiastic specialist will be realised, and that we shall see them travelling at the rate of twelve, sixteen, eighteen or twenty miles an hour. Nothing could do more harm towards their adoption or general improvement than the promulgation of such nonsense."

"Blazers"

If Nicholas Wood could suddenly come to life now he would probably, if asked what a "Blazer" was, say it is probably a name for these new whizzing vehicles. Fortunately we know it suggests all kinds of delightful Folly and Fresh Air. How came the word? Mr. John Murray has the following interesting note about it in last week's "N. & Q."

"I do not remember to have seen the origin of this now common word, and it may be well to put it on record.

"In the late sixties, when flannel coats of club colours first began to be used, the coat adopted for Magdalen College, Oxford, both for the 'eight' and the 'eleven,' was scarlet, trimmed with blue silk. This naturally created some sensation for its conspicuous colour, and was visible half way up the High Street. I think it was a Balliol man who first called these the 'Magdalen blazers'; but the name had just come into vogue when I was at Oxford, and has since been extended to colour coats of all kinds, however sombre their hue."

To Mr. Murray's note the Editor adds this: "Prof. Skeat and 'D' both stated in 'N. & Q.' in 1887 (7 Series iii., p. 436) that 'blazer' arose from the bright red jackets of the boat club of St. John's College, Cambridge, which were known as 'Johnian Blazers.'"

If there were a College at either University of the name we should be inclined to think it was St. Joseph's, which gave the name to the coat of many colours. As it is—well, the 'Varsities must fight it out between themselves.

Curiously enough, the next item is from a gentleman who says, "Can anyone give the history of St. Mary the Egyptian?" Then Mr. John Lane, writing from his Bodley Head, tells us that he has a clever water-colour drawing of the High Rock, Bridgnorth, signed "Robert Noyes, 1820," but can find no reference to the artist in any book, and asks for information. We wish we could help Mr. Lane. Nothing annoys more than not knowing things of this kind, but doubtless he will learn all about him from "N. & Q." Some subscriber in Kentucky or New Zealand will have it all at his fingers' ends, if Mr. Harry Hems hasn't forestalled him.

Since the Great Central terminated there, interest in the origin of the name "Marylebone" has gone up, and Sir Henry Harben has a long and interesting account of his researches, in which he says:—

"I have found the word spelt in the following ways up to the end of the Eighteenth Century, the dates after each form indicating the first and last instances of its occurrence, and the figures in parentheses the number of times the word occurs in the books, maps, and documents I have consulted:—

Mariboune or Maribonne, 1461 (1).
Maryborne, 1489–90—1539 (4).
Marybourne, 1491–2—1565–6 (5).
Mariborne, 1526–7 (1).
Maryborn, 1528–32 (3).
Maribourne, 1533 (1).
Marybone, 1538—1794 (28).
Marrybone, 1539–1682 (2).
Marybound, 1540–41 (1).
Maribone, 1550—1690 (14).
Marebone, 1562–3—93 (2).
Marybon, 1565–6—1700 (2).
Maryboorne, 1566 (1).
Maryboune, 1575 (1).
Maribon, 1575—1611 (2).
Marribon, 1611 (1).
Marbone, 1625 (1).
Marrowbone (Marrow-bone), 1668—1714 (3).
Marylebone (Mary le bone, Mary-le-bone), 1689, 1796 (8).
St. Mary le Bone (St. Mary-le-Bone, St. Marylebone), 1694—1794–5 (13).
St. Mary-la-bonne (St. Mary la Bonne), 1708*—1794 (4).
Mary le bon, 1730 (1).

Further research might, of course, disturb this order."

Our antiquarian subscribers in the parish will be interested in this list. We hope they will agree with us that they could not have a better name for it than Mary the Good—the first and best.

The Publishers' Circle

THE first Annual Meeting of the Publishers' Circle is to be held on May 6th. The membership now totals 40, representing 25 different firms, all of which are members of the Publishers' Association. Eight members of the new Council, and all the officers, are members of the Circle, including the Ex-Vice-President, who was elected to the Circle at their last meeting. Besides Mr. C. J. Longman, recently elected members of the Circle are:—Messrs. F. H. B. Ellis (Alston Rivers), W. Webster (Anthony Treherne), R. G. Longman (Longmans), and J. Walter Smith (Cassell's).

Notes and Announcements

THE world of literature has suffered a heavy loss by the death of Swinburne, almost the only Victorian poet, and Marion Crawford the novelist.

We also regret to hear of the death at Los Angeles, California, of the finest actress we have ever seen, Mme. Modjesta—her "Adrienne Lecouvreur" was perfect. Her second husband, Count Sinkiewicz, wrote "Quo vadis?"

The "Shorter Reviews" in the Academy, are not done by Mr. Clement Shorter.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. promise a new novel by Miss F. M. Peard, entitled "The Flying Months," on the 20th inst., and on May 4th they will publish Mr. Halliwell Sutcliffe's story, "Priscilla of the Good Intent," which is appearing in The Cornhill Magazine, and a present-day story of interesting character and incident by Miss Frances G. Burmester, entitled "Davina."

"Leaves of the Lower Branch: the Attorney in Life and Letters," by E. B. V. Christian, which will be published by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. on the 26th of this month, consists of sketches of the attorney as he is depicted in literature, and of the work done in literature by solicitors. The sketches range from a humorous defence of the much-pilloried Messrs. Dodson & Fogg to more serious studies in books. The volume will include nine illustrations.

Some Oxford books in preparation by Mr. Henry Frowde are "Law and Custom of the Constitution," by Sir W. R. Anson (Volume I, Parliament. Fourth editon) "The Collected Essays of H. F. Pelham," edited by F. Haverfield; "Tudor and Stuart Proclamations" (Catalogue of Collections in the possession of Lord Crawford); "The Forerunners of Dante," edited by A. J. Butler; "Scripta Minoa. Volume I," by Arthur J. Evans (Oxford Classical Texts); "Theophrasti Characters," edited by H. Diels, and "Hellenica Oxyrhynchia cum Theopompi et Cratippi fragmentis," edited by B. P. Grenfell and A. S. Hunt.

The Queen of Spain has graciously intimated to Sir Maurice de Bunsen that she accepts with pleasure a presentation copy of "Galicia: the Switzerland of Spain," by Miss Annette M. B. Meakin (Methuen & Co.). The book is dedicated to Her Majesty.

"A Summer in Touraine," by Mr. Frederic Lees (Methuen & Co.), is an account of the châteaux in a charming district of France. A large number of fine photographs have been specially taken, and Mr. Maxwell Armfield has made twelve charming illustrations in colour. The book therefore is of the greatest value from the historical, artistic and picturesque standpoints, and it is decidedly the most complete and accurate volume yet published on the châteaux of the Loire.

Messrs. Mills & Boon have almost ready for publication a new volume of stories by that talented author, Maud Stepney Rawson. This volume is a group of striking tales, divided into three sections—Tales of Olden Days, Tales of the Eighteenth Century, and Tales of To-day. They will also presently issue a new novel by Mrs. Herbert Watson, whose first book, "Andrew Goodfellow," met with such marked success. In this story, which is entitled "The Captain's Daughter," the author breaks new ground in a domestic story dealing chiefly with a schoolmaster. It is a typical novel of English country life, and will be found to contain much careful and charming writing.

Messrs. Mills & Boon will also issue a popular edition at 1s. net of a book which has had an astounding success in its original form. The work in question is the Rev. R. J. Campbell's "New Theology." For this popular edition Mr. Campbell has written a long new Preface, dealing with the New Theology movement in the last two years. The author has also revised the book in many ways.

Another work of a different nature that will be issued by Messrs. Mills & Boon almost immediately, is Miss Elizabeth Robins' three-act play, "Votes for Women." This play was produced at the Court Theatre with very great success during the Vedrenne-Barker management.

Mr. Pemberton's latest novel is entitled "The Show Girl," and will be published by Cassell & Company, Ltd., on April 23rd. The scene is laid in Paris—the Paris of Montmartre and the Quartier Latin. Mimi, the Show Girl, the little waif of the circus who inspired love in the hearts of all men with whom she came in contact, will undoubtedly rank with the best of Mr. Pemberton's creations. Pathos, humour, wild fun and serious adventure; love, passion, comedy and tragedy, make "The Show Girl" one of the best Pemberton books yet produced.

A very interesting picture of Australian life, both in the bush and in Melbourne society, is given in Florinda McCall's new novel, "Double Bonds," which Messrs. Cassell are publishing on April 23rd. The book relates the adventures of Silver Mackay, a charming and dainty child of the bush, who, left a widow at the early age of sixteen, is taken charge of by her aunt, who wishes to arrange a brilliant marriage for her. She (Silver) is commanded to keep her former marriage secret, and this brings her endless trouble and grief until the final dénouement.

"German Lyrists of To-day: a Selection of Lyrics from Contemporary German poetry," done into English verse, by Daisy Broicher, is the title of a forthcoming addition to the "Vigo Cabinet" Series. The poets represented are Stefan George, Hugo von Hofmannsthal, Karl Gustav Vollmoeller, Karl Wolfskeal, Leopold zu Adrian-Werburg, Ernst Hardt, Freidrich Gundolf, Richard Peols, and Georg Edward. Mr. Elkin Mathews will be the publisher.

Messrs. Nelson have added "The Making of Modern Egypt," by Sir Auckland Calvin, to their shilling series in cloth. Would they think it impertinent—in the best sense of the word, i.e., not pertinent—if we asked them why they do not give an Index to an important historical work of reference like this? A few pages might have been cut out if it is a question of expense. To that capital novel, "Cynthia's Way," by Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick, which they have also just added to their admirable series, of course no Index is needed; its wide distribution in England and Germany would do much to prevent that conflict which so many of us feel, with such deep regret, to be inevitable.

Mr. Alston Rivers published on April 7th a new volume of his "Evergreen Novels," entitled "The Meddler," by H. de Vere Stacpoole and W. A. Bryce. The story is enlivened with nine illustrations by Thomas Downey. The "Evergreen" series has quite taken its place among the most successful issues of shilling fiction, and the volumes are well turned out in pictorial covers of a delicate green cloth.

Mr. W. A. Cadbury, a member of the firm of Cadbury Brothers, has just returned from a visit to the Portuguese colony of Angola, and the islands of S. Thomé and Principe, on behalf of his firm and others interested in the labour question in these islands. A year ago the Colonial Minister in Lisbon gave definite promises of reform, and the chief object of the visit was to see how far these had been carried out. The results are described in a book by Mr. Cadbury, entitled "Labour in Portuguese West Africa," which Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., will publish at an early date. Life and work on the cocoa estates are fully dealt with, and the system of contracting on the coast and transhipment to the islands receive special treatment. An appendix contains a reprint of Mr. Burtt's Report, and other statements dealing with the work done by the English firms in connection with the labour on the cocoa estates.

Mr. John Long will shortly publish a new novel by John Langfield, entitled "Biddy the Spitfire." Readers who liked "A Light-Hearted Rebellion" should hasten to make themselves familiar with the present work. "It is a story whose single object is to afford a few happy, laughing hours."

Mr. W. Earl Hodgson, the author of several well-known books on Angling, is about to publish another volume through Messrs. A. & C. Black, entitled "An Angler's Season." It is the outcome of professional duties of an unusual kind, which obliged the author to go fishing regularly from the opening day among the salmon, January 15th, to the close of the trout season, at the end of September. It describes the varied sport throughout that period, showing how the fish change their haunts and habits from month to month, and the corresponsive changes in the angler's lures and methods: the narrative includes many an amusing or otherwise lively experiences.

Messrs. Skeffington will shortly publish a sermon for Empire Day, entitled "Our Great Inheritance," by the Rev. Dr. M. H. James, Vicar of St. Thomas, Hull.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd., have this week published a new book on "High Licence," by Mr. Frederick W. Tompson, who, as a director of brewing companies in both England and the United States, has had a wide practical experience of the liquor trade. The volume provides a critical examination of the Licence Duties prevailing in the United Kingdom and in America, and at the same time criticises the conclusions arrived at by Mr. Joseph Rowntree and Mr. Arthur Sherwell, M.P., in their well-known treatise on "The Taxation of the Liquor Trade."

In their series of "Great Buildings and how to enjoy them," Messrs. Black are about to include a volume on "Greek Architecture," by Edith A. Browne. "Gothic Architecture" and "Norman Architecture" have already appeared in the series.

The new President of the Publishers' Association

WE have much pleasure in giving a new portrait, which he very kindly had taken for THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, of Mr. William Heinemann, who at the recent Annual Meeting of the Publishers' Association was elected President. Mr. Heinemann was born on May 18th, 1863, and for nearly twenty years has been the head of the great publishing house which bears his name, from which so many of the most important works of the age are published. It is quite unnecessary to recapitulate the main facts of Mr. Heinemann's career; that he has been elected President is sufficient proof of the esteem in which he is held and is an appreciation also of the good work which he has done in the interests of publishing and the book trade at home and abroad. We heartily wish him continued success and a pleasant time as President.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN

President of the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland.

MENTION THE 'P.C.'—Our readers who order books &c., they see mentioned or advertised in THE PUBLISHERS CIRCULAR will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

A Wonderful Indian Library on Palm Leaves

HERR KARL W. HIERSEMANN, in his latest antiquarian catalogue of Oriental books, informs us that he recently purchased and has for sale a collection of 763 manuscripts on palm leaves, comprising in 1,287 works the whole Sanscrit literature of the Vedas and after. The manuscripts are 150, 250 and more years old, and were written in Grantha, Telugu and Nandināgarī. The characters are written, or really scratched in, upon both sides of the narrow leaves (grantham), which by two holes in the middle are filed on cords attached to strong wooden covers. The leaves are about 1⅛ in. wide, their length varying from 11¾ to 13¾ in. Great importance attaches to this library comprising works of all branches of Indian literature, philosophy, and science, firstly on account of its great age—in the hot and damp climate of India books rarely keep longer than 300 years—secondly, because it comes from the Southern Provinces of India. Nearly all the libraries of Europe and North America possess only modern printed editions or more recent paper manuscripts of Northern origin of the Sanscrit classics. The South Indian authors and philosophers were nowhere attainable in such completeness up to now. Even in India only very few libraries, as, for instance, the Adyar Library in Madras, have such extensive materials for the study of the South Indian Sanscrit.

By order of Dr. Schrader of Madras a careful catalogue of the library has been compiled by Indian Pandits. Divided according to subjects this would have been a work of years for any scientific specialist of Europe. Title and subject of each manuscript in Latin transcription written on card-board are fastened to the bundles. Most of these, 3 by 6 in. thick including covers, contain one complete work; larger works, as some of the Samhitās and Brāhmanas, Bhārata, &c., are divided to more bundles, while smaller treatises, often of different contents, are joined, 2, 3, 15 and 20 together to one.

The clearly-arranged catalogue will be sent for inspection to persons interested on application.

Forthcoming Sale of Rare Books

MESSRS. LALONDE BROS. & PARHAM, Auctioneers of Weston-super-Mare, are selling by auction on Tuesday, May 11th and four following days, the library of old and valuable books of the late Rev. Preb. J. H. Stephenson of Lympsham Manor near Weston-super-Mare. Among the items to be sold are a fine second folio Shakespeare, 1632; a beautiful Horae Beatæ Mariae, fifteenth century, on vellum, and Missale Hildensemensis, 1499. The sale commences at 2 o'clock each day, and will be held at Lympsham Manor. Furniture connoisseurs should note the list advertised elsewhere in this issue. Illustrated Catalogues (price 6d.) are in course of preparation and may be obtained from the Auctioneers, Weston-super-Mare.

The new Hon. Treasurer of the Publishers' Association

MR. ARTHUR WAUGH, who was elected Hon. Treasurer of the Publishers' Association, is the Managing Director of Messrs. Chapman & Hall, Ltd. He was born, August 24th, 1866. In addition to his very successful work as a publisher, Mr. Waugh is well-known as the author and editor of several important works, including the 19-volume biographical edition of the works of Charles Dickens. Mr. Waugh has the best wishes of all who know him, both in his own business and in the honorary official position he now occupies in the Association.

MR. ARTHUR WAUGH

Associated Booksellers

(SCOTTISH BRANCH)

THE annual meeting of the Scottish Branch was held in Glasgow on the 2nd inst., and was presided over by Mr. Elliot, President. In the annual report, satisfaction was expressed at the continued success of the Net System, the few complaints which had reached the Secretary being held as indicating that the trade on the whole give loyal adherence to the Agreement. The greatest difficulty, it was felt, arose in connection with large contracts, such as those for school boards and libraries, where it was evident a discount was allowed off subject books, which could not possibly be given without encroaching on the profit of the net books. With a view of combating this evil, notices of motions in the direction of limiting the discount on subject books were given, and they will be brought up at the annual meeting of the Associated Booksellers in June.

The thanks of the Scottish Branch were accorded to the Central Council, and especially to Mr. Keay, for the time and attention so ungrudgingly given to the many difficult questions continually arising for their consideration.

Glasgow Trade Notes

BY "MUNGO"

SOME time ago there was mentioned in this column that a work on the Clyde by the late Sir James Marwick was in active preparation, and this has now been published. "The River Clyde and the Clyde Burghs," is the interesting chronicle of the development of the river from a narrow stream into a navigable highway, and the history of the Burghs that have arisen on its banks.

The author wrote largely on municipal history, but this book may be considered as his best work, and he has succeeded in making instructive and entertaining a story that might have been a record of dry facts; it is, of course, a Glasgow book, but ought to interest all lovers of Scottish history.

The story commences at the end of the Twelfth Century when "William the Lion granted to God and St. Kentigern a charter by which he empowered the bishops to have a burgh at Glasgow," and in the first part goes on to tell of the rivalries and jealousies existing between the different burghs of Glasgow, Renfrew, Rutherglen, and Dumbarton.

Between them "the second city" seems to have had a rough time of it, for we find Renfrew and Rutherglen "making impediment and disturbance to the King's lieges that brought goods to the market at Glasgow, doing thereby hurt and prejudice to the privilege and custom granted to the Kirk of Glasgow of old time by His Majesty's noble ancestors." So Bishop William obtains from King James II. letters commanding that traders be allowed to come and go peaceably, and "prohibiting the men of these burghs from entering the barony of Glasgow to take toll or custom by water or land of any person coming or going to said markets," which Dumbarton considered it right to levy toll on Glasgow's trade with the Highlands, and as the Clyde was not navigable above this burgh, and boats had to unload at this point, another opportunity was afforded of interfering with the other burghs development.

Dumbarton certainly had the whip hand and seems to have used it to some purpose, for once more the authority of the King is called in and that town threatened with the pains and penalties of the law unless it desists.

It is interesting to note the early attempts to clear the river channel of obstructions, and in 1556, when presumably inter-burghal relations were more amicable, "Glasgow, Renfrew, and Dumbarton enter into an agreement to work on the river for six weeks at a time," but no organised attempt seems to have been made until comparatively recently.

This very superficial account of the earlier part of this book will give an idea of its value; it is a work that has entailed infinite labour and research, as the copious notes and references will show. The burghs are not treated separately but in a general way, and their relative positions are shown at the various periods of progression. The volume is enriched with numerous illustrations and maps, and a biographical sketch of the author is contributed by Professor M'Kendrick.

"ENGINEERING WONDERS OF THE WORLD"

Messrs. T. Nelson & Sons' Important New Serial

Interview with the Editor.

[By "P.C." Special.]

A RUMOUR having reached the P.C. Office to the effect that something big was about to see the light at Messrs. Thos. Nelson & Sons in Paternoster Row, I at once hied me off to that great establishment to see what it was all about. Visions of a new cheap Series flashed through my mind, but a question dispelled them; and a moment later I was courteously conducted to the sanctum of Mr. Archibald Williams to be enlightened fully on the matter. I knew Mr. Williams as the author of several A1 books, including "How It is Made," "How It Works," and "Victories of the Engineer." The last I had read lately with much interest, so when Mr. Williams told me, in response to an inquiry, that he was editing a great new serial, entitled "Engineering Wonders of the World," I felt no surprise.

Date of Publication

"Before asking you to say something about the contents of the work itself, Mr. Williams," I said; "I should like you to tell me when and how it is to be published?" "It is to be published in 20 fortnightly parts, commencing April 26th, each part to contain 64 pages, a coloured plate, and from 70 to 80 illustrations, principally from photographs. When finished, the work will make two or three handsome volumes, totalling about 1,300 pages, and will include close on 1,500 illustrations. Each part will be complete in itself, and will deal with several subjects."

Illustrations

"Good illustrations in a work of this kind are of vital importance, are they not, Mr. Williams?" "Certainly, and I think you will admit that the illustrations we intend to give are absolutely unique as a collection and first class in every respect. Here are some—so you can judge for yourself." Mr. Williams rapidly opened portfolio after portfolio crammed with photographs, sketches, and diagrams—so fascinating that I found it difficult to leave them and get on with the interview. He showed me a large number of pictures of many great works of men's hands, and every one was clear, comprehensive, and original. I saw photographs of men standing on slender steel girders high up between heaven and earth, carrying their lives in their hands, building New York "skyscrapers"; and, conversely, of men in the depths excavating Tube Railway and other tunnels.

"You have excellent illustrations," I remarked to Mr Williams, who had every detail at his fingers ends, "but what of the letterpress? Who is to be responsible for that?" "Where advisable I have endeavoured to get the very men who engineered these mighty works to describe them at first hand. For instance, the account of the building of the Rotherhithe Tunnel is written by Mr. E. H. Tabor, M.Inst. C.E., the Resident Engineer-in-Charge during the construction. The White Pass and Yukon Railway is from the pen of a gentleman who has been prominently associated with the railway since its inception; the article on the Tube Railways of London is written by Mr. Harley H. Dalrymple Hay, M.Inst. C.E. I could give you many other instances, but I think I have said enough to show you that the whole thing will be done by those who know—professional engineers of high standing, many of them. I have not a complete copy by me, but here is an early version of Part I, and most interesting article, written in strictly accurate yet not too technical language. I want to interest everybody—the engineer, the apprentice, the man in the street. It has been a somewhat difficult task to steer the right course, but I feel that anyone who takes in this publication will find plenty of things to rivet his attention. These 1,300 pages will open a great number of eyes; of that I am convinced. Though this is an engineering age par excellence, it is difficult for the general public to keep posted in engineering matters, unless the technical journals be consulted—and you know that the multitude fights shy of such publications, valuable though they be. What I engineering has never before been gathered into one book?" "I sincerely believe so. Popular articles on some of the subjects I have mentioned during our conversation have appeared in other places, but I think that our treatment of them is more thorough, as it should be in a work like this. I can honestly say that many of the articles and illustrations we are giving are absolutely unique. The subject—engineering—is a splendid one, and I want the public to appreciate the fact."

Mr. Williams showed me some more photographs and special bird's-eye views he is having prepared for subsequent issues, and then I left him to resume his which will give you some idea of the general get-up and appearance." Mr. Williams handed me a specimen. It was bound in a cream-tinted cover, lettered boldly in red, with an attractive coloured picture on the front and another inside, both the work of evidently first-rate artists.

"I suppose you will have a new cover illustration every issue?" "Yes, I have already prepared a large number, the one you see is a fair sample. I believe in giving good value outside as well as in."

Scope of the Work

"Can you enlighten me somewhat further as to the scope of the work and the subjects to be dealt with?"

"Certainly. Every class of big engineering undertaking will be described, not in a few disjointed sentences, but in a full have striven after is a series of really good articles which anyone of average intelligence shall be able to understand, and from which he shall derive some really sound information. As for the subjects, well, here are a few:—Bridge Building in many parts of the World; Irrigation Work in India, Egypt and the United States; Railway Signalling; Water Supply; Transcontinental Railways and Telegraphs; Tunnels through Mountains and under Rivers; Petroleum Wells; Lighthouses; Electric Power Stations; Submarine Cable Laying; Docks; Harbour Works; Aeronautics; Canals. And there are many more."

"It would be well within the truth then, Mr. Williams, to say that such an array of interesting chapters about work on a publication into which he has put his whole heart and many months of strenuous labour. I had heard of the mighty enterprises achieved by engineers and had seen some of them when finished; but during this brief interview I saw them, as it were, in the making.

"How to Appreciate Prints," by Frank Weitenkampf, which will be issued shortly through Mr. Grant Richards, is of interest to all who like engravings, etchings, or other prints, and want to know more about them. It tells enough about the history and technique to illustrate the development and nature of the various processes; and shows what to look for in prints, thus providing a finger-post to a wide range of pleasures.

Thackeray's Best Loved Friend

ADMIRERS of Thackeray and FitzGerald will be very pleased to read the following letter from Mr. John Bailey :—

To the Editor of The Times

SIR,—I do not know whether you will think it worth while to find space for the correction of a curious little inaccuracy into which Mr. Gosse fell in his speech about FitzGerald to the members of the Omar Khayyam Club. Replying to Mr. Birrell's remarks about FitzGerald's indifference to literary society, he is reported to have spoken of the authentic fact that Tennyson, towards the end of his life, being asked whom he had loved most of all his friends, replied, "Why, old Fitz, of course!"

But it was not Tennyson who said this or something very like it; it was Thackeray. Tennyson said other, more Tennysonian, almost equally affectionate things; but this particular thing he did not say. Here is the little story as it is told in Dr. Aldis Wright's Preface to the Letters and Literary Remains :—"When Thackeray, not long before he died, was asked by his daughter which of his old friends he had loved most, he replied, 'Why, dear old Fitz, to be sure; and Brookfield.'"

Your obedient servant,
JOHN BAILEY.

Warning

BEFORE executing orders for books from H. Boyle, of any address, will our readers kindly communicate with Mr. Karslake, 35, Pond Street, Hampstead? Addresses used by Boyle recently are 45, Denbigh Street, Warwick Square, Pimlico; 25, Great Pulteney Street, Regent Street, W., also, possibly, the Lorelei Institute, at the same address, and it is believed Wiseton, Bawtrey, R.S.O., Yorkshire. If any of our readers have had dealings with H. Boyle will they be so good as to let us know?

Smart Bookselling

BOOKSELLERS are frequently reproached for being what is termed "behind the time"—in some few cases not without reason, but generally speaking the reproach is undeserved. For example, what could be more up-to-date than the shop window of which we here give a reproduction? The credit for this display belongs to Mr. T. W. Atkins, the enterprising manager of Mr. C. Combridge, of New Street, Birmingham. We understand that Mr. Atkins has a genius for novel advertising methods, most of which have been very successful. We believe that personally he has a poor idea of this window display of naval books of which we give a picture, but our own opinion is that it is very good indeed, and made at the most opportune moment. We congratulate Mr. Atkins upon a very successful idea.

The Extension of "The Nature Book"

OWING to the great success of "The Nature Book" (a success which is hardly to be wondered at by those acquainted with the book) and in response to numerous requests, Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd., have decided to extend the work—which it was originally intended to complete in twenty-four parts—by twelve further fortnightly parts. The work is a popular description by pen and camera of the delights and beauties of the open air, and is profusely illustrated with reproductions of photographs taken direct from nature. Each part also contains a beautiful coloured frontispiece.

Volume 2 of this admirable work will be published on April 23rd. Volume 3, which commences with Part 25, will be published in the autumn.

A New Shilling Series of Readable Fiction

WE reproduce an illustration of the cover design of one of the new Shilling series of novels published by Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. of Clifford's Inn. Up to date 12 volumes have been issued. They include:—The Widow—To say Nothing of the Man, by Helen Rowland, with 8 original full-page illustrations; Thoroughbred, by Francis Dodsworth, "A very breezy sporting novel"; The Spell of the Jungle, by Alice Perrin; The Sins of Society, by Cecil Raleigh; The Marriages of Mayfair, by E. Keble Chatterton; A Ten Pound Penalty, by H. Noel Williams; Priests of Progress, by G. Colmore; Gay Lawless, by Helen Mathers; A Professional Rider, by Mrs. Edward Kennard; The Devil in London, being striking phases of London Life by Night and Day, by Geo. R. Sims; The Unspeakable Scot, by T. W. H. Crosland; Lovely Woman, by T. W. H. Crosland.

COVER DESIGN OF ONE OF MESSRS. S. PAUL & CO.'S NEW SHILLING SERIES.

The New Magazine

OWING to the great success of the first number of The New Magazine, the May number is being looked forward to with much interest, and we are assured that the high reputation obtained for the first number will be more than maintained in the issue published next Tuesday. The Art Supplement includes some of our best-known stage celebrities and scenes from famous plays. They are half-tone reproductions and are printed in delicate purple and brown shades. The fiction is particularly strong, including stories by Captain F. H. Shaw, Ruby M. Ayres, I. A. R. Wylie, Houghton Townley, Archibald Guthrie, Frank Hubert, Fred. M. White, Herbert Maxwell, and other popular writers. The Woman's Kingdom embraces everything of interest to ladies, and altogether it can honestly be said to be a worthy second number. The cover is again exceptionally attractive, and a plentiful supply of advertising matter has been prepared, all applications for which will receive prompt attention from Messrs. Cassell.

Continental Book-Trade Notes

Herr Jacques Rosenthal, of Munich, announces an important work, "Le Boccace de Munich; Reproduction des 91 Miniatures du célèbre manuscrit de la Bibliothèque Royale de Munich." With historical and explanatory notes by the Count Paul Durrien, Member of the Institut de France; with 28 plates in folio and 130 pages in French; the edition is limited to 25 copies, 240 marks each, and 300 copies, 100 marks each.

Messrs. Plon, Nourrit & Cie, of Paris, have just issued "La Comédie Française, 1908," by Joannidès; price, 7.50 francs.

The T. G. Cotta'sche Buchhandlung, of Stuttgart, announces the fiftieth edition of Hermann Sudermann's new novel, "Das hohe Lied."

Paper from Sawdust

ANOTHER chemical discovery, which is expected to make wood pulp and paper products many times more plentiful and much cheaper than they are at present, was announced at the State University, at Minneapolis, on March 27th.

The discoverer is Dr. George B. Frankforter, Dean of the College of Chemistry, who has worked on the process for more than twelve years. The discovery makes possible the manufacture of paper from fir trees, of sawdust and waste timber.

As proof of the value of his discovery Dr. Frankforter shows a table recording his experiment with one cord of fir wood. The wood cost $7.50, and from it he obtained wood pulp worth $39, turpentine worth $41.60 and by-products of a lesser value. The waste that is now burned or thrown away, Dr. Frankforter says, can be used as well as the fresh cut wood. —New York Publishers' Weekly.

[Billions of trout and salmon have been killed by sawdust in Scandinavia and America, so it will be a blessing to fish if this waste product can be utilised.—ED. P.C.]

BIRMINGHAM

Harold Kennell (18), 41, Pigott Street, pleaded guilty before the Stipendiary (Mr. L. Morton Brown) at the Birmingham Police Court, on April 7th, to stealing a number of valuable books, the property of his employers, Messrs. Lowe Brothers, booksellers, from their warehouse, 45, Newhall Street. Kennell had been employed at Lowe's two months as an assistant, and books were missed. One of them, Pope's "Essay on Man," catalogued at £10, he sold for £1 to Bernard Martin, the Manager for William Downing, bookseller, 5, Temple Row, on April 1st, to whom he produced a forged letter purporting to come from his father, in which he said he had had the book eighteen years, and it was only recently that a friend told him it was worth £8 or £10.

When Detective-Inspector Goldrick arrested the lad, he said he had had a mania for theatres, and had spent the money he received in that way. Kennell was arrested earlier this year for obtaining, wrongfully, contributions which, he said, were for the Cathedral Poor Children's Outing. That case was adjourned for a month, during which time he behaved himself, and obtained the situation at Messrs. Lowe Brothers.

The Stipendiary said he could see no redeeming feature in this case, because the boy had been given one chance. After admonishing him, he sent him to prison for a month with hard labour.

HEREFORD

Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son are building larger premises in Commercial Street, which will be opened shortly.

LEEDS

What may be regarded as a regular slump has just set in, owing, no doubt, to the Easter holidays. Never a bookish town at any time, trade is now duller than ever, at least that is the general complaint.

Of course, the first duty in business of a bookseller is to grumble. What the second duty is no one has as yet discovered, unless it be by the traveller, who says it's to give orders.

The books which are selling best just now—with few exceptions—are cheap editions of popular works and reprints of expired copyright works. Everyman's Library is going well, and no wonder, seeing what excellent value it is. But what are we coming to? Think of it! Augustine Birrell's Essays, Jefferies' Wild Life in a Southern Country, Whymper's Scrambles Amongst the Alps, to name but a few, tastefully got up and nicely printed on good quality of paper for one shilling. But alas! rent and rates are high, and the profits are but small.

How the multiplying of these handsome reprints at a cheap price is telling on the second-hand trade can easily be guessed. Who in his senses would pay a guinea for a thumbed second-hand copy of Whymper's Scrambles Amongst the Alps, 1st edit., when he can get a quite dainty little new volume, pleasant to handle and to read, and fit afterwards to adorn a bookcase, for a shilling? It is disquieting to hear it, but nevertheless it's true, that certain features of the second-hand trade are doomed, and, like the passing of the hot-cross bun, will not be again revived.

MANCHESTER

Messrs. J. E. Cornish, Ltd., have just been honoured by Her Majesty the Queen graciously accepting a copy of "The Sweet o' the Year: Thoughts from a Village Garden," by Emily Ridgway, a little book published by them. The copy was specially bound in full transparent vellum, with original water-colour drawing in centre of top side, surrounded by mother-of-pearl insets, and a pretty hand-painted floral design on side and back. The book has had quite a phenomenal sale, the first edition being sold out in less than seven weeks, and the second edition, published on St. Valentine's Day, is already nearly exhausted.

PETERHEAD

Peterhead Literary Society have done a graceful thing, says The Peterhead Sentinel, in appointing Mr. W. L. Taylor, F.S.A. Scot., their Honorary President. Mr. Taylor is a man who confers honour upon the town of Peterhead. His long life has been spent in the encouragement of literature, both directly and indirectly. He has been an active member of the Literary Society, and he is ever ready to assist in any literary undertaking.

READING

Lenten literature, as might be expected, was in considerable demand just lately, and the Bishop of London's books are selling remarkably well. Baedeker's Guides are being asked for, but on the whole things are somewhat dull.

ROCHDALE

The celebration in this town of the bi-centenary of John Collier ("Tim Bobbin") was a conspicuous success. The meeting on Saturday evening, April 3rd, in the Examination Hall of the Technical School, was large and representative, and the speeches were excellent. The exhibition of "Tim Bobbin's" books, paintings, and personal relics, opened in the Art Gallery, has been visited by large numbers of people each day until its close on April 10th.

Lieutenant-Colonel Fishwick presided at the evening meeting, and among those present were Sir James Duckworth, M.P., the Mayor of Rochdale, Councillor Dunning, the Rev. Canon Clarke, the Rev. F. P. Wright (vicar of Milnrow), Mr. Henry Brierley, Dr. Chadwick, C.A., Dr. W. E. A. Axon, and the following writers in the Lancashire dialect—Messrs. Allen Clarke (Teddy Ashton), J. T. Baron (Jack o' Ann's), Blackburn; Joseph Baron (Tum o' Dick o' Bobs), Blackburn; W. Baron (Bill of Jacks), Rochdale; F. Plant (Harry o'th' Hills), Stockport; R. H. Brodie (Billy Button), Bolton; Robert Atherton (Robin o' Bobs), Manchester; David Lawton (Th' Owd Weighver), Saddleworth; Thomas Booth, Burnley; Joseph Cronshaw, Manchester; Arthur Laycock, Blackpool; Arthur Smith, Nelson; James Lees, Rochdale; James Leigh, Hyde; Sam Ashton, Godley; Sam Hill (Foirewood), Stalybridge; J. Moulton Parry, Ashton-under-Lyne; G. W. Butterworth, Royton; Sam Fitton, High Crompton; Alfred Ratledge (Harford Willson), Blackpool; Miss Sarah Holt, Rochdale; and Miss Annie Spencer (A. McCandish), Hebden Bridge. Several of Tim Bobbin's descendants were also present.

The proceedings were interspersed with dialect songs and recitations.

The exhibition in the Art Gallery was one of the most interesting ever held there. A remarkable and extensive collection of copies of "Tim Bobbin's" works were on view, ranging from the first edition of the "Lancashire Dialect," published in 1746—a great rarity—to the edition with Colonel Fishwick's memoir of "Tim," issued from the Aldine Press in 1894; editions with Collier's quaint engravings; those illustrated by Geo. Cruickshank; and cheap books of all sorts and sizes.

Collier's paintings and sketches exhibited show the greatest variety in quality of execution. Gains from Kind Nature solace and delight,

Hears soothing music in each purling stream,
Æolian harps in countless waving leaves;
And, wafted o'er the lovely healthful downs,
The sea's soft murmur echoed in the pines;

"The Bibliophile and the Bookseller"

ANTIQUARIAN booksellers may like to know that the "Queer Story" in Truth of April 14th is called "The Bibliophile and the Bookseller." It begins thus:—

It was one afternoon, not many months ago, that a well-dressed man, of gentlemanly appearance, entered the shop of Mr. Benjamin Bellworthy, a well-known second-hand bookseller not far from Piccadilly Circus, and inquired of him whether he happened to have a copy of Thomas Howe's "The Seven Deadly Sins."

The bookseller shook his head and replied in the negative, adding, "In fact, sir, I have no knowledge at all of the author to whom you refer. I suppose you are not mixing him up with John Howe, by any chance?"

"Oh, no," replied the other. "I mean Thomas Howe. He was about the same date, I believe, as the better known John; and, like him, wrote various religious books of a puritanical character. I have a catalogue of his works, printed in the year 1691. Here it is. You can see for yourself."

The bookseller took the old catalogue and glanced it over.

"I never even heard of any one of the six works mentioned here," he observed. "I should imagine that there can't be many copies now extant; and what there are would be quite unmarketable. There is no demand at all for obscure old religious publications of this nature."

The stranger nodded.

"So I've been told by other dealers," he said. "But it so happens that I'm acting for a wealthy American gentleman, Mr. Cyrus P. Prosser—probably you know him by name——"

"Very well," interposed the bookseller, with an accession of interest in his manner. "I have often seen him at Sotheby's. I understand that he spends most of his time in hunting for rare old books and manuscripts."

"That's so," was the rejoinder. "It is his one engrossing hobby. And, money being no object to him, he doesn't mind what price he pays for a thing when he has once set his fancy on it. I'm his private secretary, you know. But I haven't much of an ordinary secretary's work to do. My business consists chiefly in prospecting around for him at sales and second-hand book-shops. That's what brings me here to-day. Mr. Prosser is absolutely set on procuring a copy of Thomas Howe's 'The Seven Deadly Sins.'"

"I see," replied the bookseller. "I wonder why, though. So obscure a work can surely be of no value to anybody."

We must not extract any more Truth, especially as "All Rights Reserved" is printed against this queer story—also, we do not want to give Truth away. But we should like to have the opinions of one or two antiquarian booksellers on the question whether there is anyone so antiquated in their honourable and fascinating craft as to be victimised in the way Mr. Bellworthy is supposed to have been.

Music Copyright

THE PROPOSED COPYRIGHT CHANGES

THE following extract is from an interesting article in Truth for April 7th, 1909, which we advise all interested in Musical Copyright to obtain :—

"A matter of importance to musical folk of all kinds is the question of the ratification of the Copyright Convention signed at Berlin in November last, in regard to which a committee appointed by the Board of Trade is at present sitting. So far as musical interests are concerned, three important alterations of the existing law are involved—namely, in regard to the duration of copyright, the question of performing rights, and the mechanical reproduction of copyright works. All afford scope for differences of opinion, but very weighty reasons indeed would be needful to justify the throwing over of the conclusions arrived at and agreed to, after full discussion, by our own Plenipotentiaries in Berlin, and probability points, therefore, to these being adopted as they stand. At the same time, it is perfectly right and proper that all the interests affected should have an opportunity of being heard before the ratifying legislation is actually introduced—even though it would be perfectly possible for the whole matter to be settled by an Order in Council without Parliament being consulted at all if the Government chose to take this course.

In regard to duratio nof copyright, the existing British limit is forty-two years, or the composer's lifetime plus seven years—whichever period is the longer. The proposal is to make the term in future the author's lifetime plus fifty years. This involves considerable prolongation of the average British term, and, as might be expected, the change is vigorously opposed by some. Those who would be aghast at the notion of assigning any limits to the duration of property in land or other material possessions, think it iniquitous that the creator of a work of art should be treated so handsomely in regard to the fruits of his brain, and are up in arms in defence of the so-called rights of the public to the free enjoyment of that which the said public has had no sort of share in bringing into existence. Others, however, take a more generous view of the matter, and in addition realise the very great desirability of establishing one uniform period in this matter throughout all the States of the Copyright Union. If their views prevail therefore the longer term will be adopted. Otherwise it has been provided that each country can retain its existing period without imperilling the Convention as a whole."

The Studio (44, Leicester Square, W.C.) for April 15th contains, among other articles, the following :—René Ménard, painter of classical landscape ; Portraits in Enamel ; Further Leaves from the Sketch Book of W. H. Charlton ; Recent Designs in Domestic Architecture, which is both edifying and interesting, particularly to those who have, or are going to have, a country or seaside house ; Wrought Iron Work, &c., and six fine supplements in colour, reproductions of famous artists.

Maurus Jokai

MESSRS. JARROLD & SONS announce a new novel, entitled "The Yellow Rose," by the Hungarian patriot, "Maurus Jokai"—for Jokai was not only a novelist, although no less than two hundred and two romances owe their existence to his inexhaustible pen. He was primarily a politician and a patriot ; and secondarily many things : amongst others a novelist, a dramatist, a portrait painter, a lawyer, a sculptor, a carver in ivory, a journalist and a draughtsman caricaturist. There seemed to be no end to his energy or his capacity. Holding advanced Liberal opinions, he edited several newspapers, and for twenty-nine years was a member of the Hungarian Diet, his influence as a parliamentary debater being constant and considerable.

He started the first Hungarian illustrated comic journal, and enjoyed the distinction of having taught the nation to laugh ! This journal he edited for fourteen years, and himself contributed some of its best caricatures.

MAURUS JOKAI
The "Hungarian Dickens," whose novel, "The Yellow Rose," Messrs. Jarrold & Sons are publishing.

What an indefatigable worker the man was is shown by his composition of stories at the rate of two a year. A story-teller of the old school, Jokai's tales are of action. He does not trouble himself with niceties of character, nor is he retrospective ; but he is very realistic. Like the Biblical writers, he saw visions and dreamed dreams, reproducing these phantoms of the brain in the most lurid word-pictures, that are sometimes grotesquely gigantic, sometimes unutterably grim. But that Jokai could be both historically accurate and picturesque is proven by the entrancing stories which have been published here from time to time by Messrs. Jarrold & Sons. He was, in fact, a marvellous weaver of romances.

"Familiar Swiss Flowers"

THE publication in series form of "Familiar Swiss Flowers," by Prof. F. E. Hulme, F.L.S., F.S.A., &c., will be welcomed by those interested in the many plants found in the mountains and valleys of Switzerland. Not only is the name of each flower given, and the locality in which it is to be found, but much other information as to the time of the year the plant is in bloom, the shape and texture of the leaves, the form of the stems and other salient botanical features. The work (published by Cassell & Co., Ltd.) is illustrated with one hundred coloured plates reproduced by the most modern processes of colour printing from original paintings by the author. Series 1 will be published on April 23rd, price 1s. net.

The Girl's Realm May Number

SPECIAL efforts are being made to push The Girl's Realm (Cassell & Co.), and the May Number, published April 24th, containing several new features, should afford booksellers an excellent opportunity of obtaining many new and regular subscribers. There will be the opening chapters of two splendid new serial stories by Mrs. L. T. Meade and "Alien," and in addition to special attention having been given to the illustrations and make-up generally, a new attractive cover design in yellow should help the sales. Special showcards and prospectuses have been prepared.

Modern Golf

A VOLUME which should prove of exceptional interest at this time is "Modern Golf," by P. A. Vaile, the well-known author of "Modern Lawn Tennis," and other volumes. This will contain one hundred full-page reproductions, from instantaneous photographs, of George Duncan playing the various strokes, in addition of 56 diagrams in the text. In "Modern Golf," Mr. Vaile is doing for the royal and ancient game what he has already done with so much success for lawn tennis—namely, giving to those who love the game, and who wish to know it intimately a full explanation of its science and mechanics. Messrs. A. & C. Black announce this for publication immediately.

Trade Notes and Changes

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT

SIR,—Besides the specific objection to retaliatory legislation noticed by Mr. F. Macmillan, I think there are other objections to introducing a manufacturing clause in our Copyright Law, inasmuch as it would put us in an exceptional position as signatories of the Convention of Berne, with some inconvenience to ourselves, and without any favourable effect on American policy. We should, of course, have to frame our clause on the same lines as that in the new American Copyright Law—to the following effect:

> "That in order to obtain the benefit of copyright in the British Dominions any book printed in the English language must be set up, printed and bound within the British Empire."

It is necessary to limit the clause to books printed in English, otherwise we should be in conflict with Articles 4 and 5 of the new Berne Convention, and should have to withdraw from it.

But supposing that we adopted such a clause as the above, what would be the effect?

It would certainly prevent American authors getting British copyright by simply publishing here, but it would also prevent our getting a double copyright by printing in America and publishing simultaneously in both countries. Moreover, we should preclude ourselves from printing on the Continent, as it is sometimes convenient to do, except at the expense of our copyright. Such a clause might be advantageous to our printers, but it seems that authors and publishers would be in a worse position than they are at present.

Of course, it would be a great benefit if the United States could be induced, by retaliatory legislation, to join the Union; but would it have any tendency in that direction?

We should still have to manufacture in America in order to get copyright there; and the fact that Americans would have to print in Canada in order to get British copyright would only affect the situation very slightly, because the proportion of American books copyrighted in England to English books copyrighted in America is still small; and even if our laws were made strictly reciprocal, the Americans would still have an enormous material advantage in remaining outside the Union.

It might have been better for us if the clause admitting non-Unionist authors to the benefits of the Union had never been introduced; but it does not seem possible to have it rescinded now. No other country except Sweden has ever objected to it, and its rescission would involve the exclusion of Russian, Dutch and Hungarian authors, to which there is reason to believe both France and Germany would object.

At the same time, I am not of your opinion that, whilst the Americans have made their manufacturing clause more stringent it is advisable for us to make any further concession, in the shape of sixty days' grace, to them.

I am, yours faithfully,
EDWARD BELL.

York House, Portugal Street,
Kingsway, W.C.

[We hope the Americans will eventually get sixty days of grace here as a reward for the way their authors and publishers have worked to secure for our authors and publishers those days of grace, and because it would in many cases give our printers composition and printing which they do not now obtain.—ED.]

A CORRECTION FROM HOLLAND RE THE WORK ON "OLD NETHERLAND TOWNS"

DEAR SIR,—I am already several years a subscriber to your interesting book-trade paper, giving me valuable information about the book trade in England. But in regard to the book news from Holland you publish in your paper, I am not at all satisfied. Very often I read wrong names or wrong titles, and I should like to know particularly how the mistake in your number of April 3rd, 1909, p. 519, occurred.

In this article you give some entirely wrong information about an important publication, entitled "Oud Nederlandsche Steden in haar Onstaan, &c.," of which I forward you a trade circular, under separate cover, to prove that I am the publisher.

The firm Mart. Nijhoff in The Hague has nothing to do with this publication (3 vols. with 600 new illustrations), and because I am the publisher, I ask you to be so kind as to correct the article, on request of the firm, A. W. Sijthoff of Leiden, the well-known publisher of important illustrated historical works. Hoping to be favoured with an early reply to the present.—I remain,

Yours truly,
A. W. FRENTZEN.
(A. W. Sijthoff's Uitgevers-Maatschappij.)

April 8th.

We are unable at present to explain the mistake. Our note in the P.C. of April 3rd was made up from a prospectus in Dutch of the work in question; and how we got the name of M. Martinus Nijhoff as the publisher instead of M. A. W. Sijthoff we cannot explain, especially as the prospectus, like Hans Breitmann's party, appears to have gone into "die ewigkeit." We heartily wish we knew Dutch half, nay the tenth part, as well as our Dutch friends all seem to know English—but that is no excuse for putting Sleden instead of Steden and Nijhoff in place of Sijthoff.—ED.]

SUGGESTIONS FOR ENGLISH EXPORTERS OF BOOKS TO AMERICA

DEAR SIR,—In your more enlightened domain of Free Trade it is not surprising that you should fail to understand the annoyances to which the American dealer is subjected when he undertakes to import English books. Some of these annoyances are, of course, inherent in the workings of our tariff system; but others are caused through failure on the part of the English shipper to make out his invoices in correct form. If you will publish the following instructions, and if the English dealers will observe them, I am sure every American importer of books will feel himself your debtor.

(1) Books printed from plates manufactured in America, or books published twenty years or more previous to date of invoice, should be invoiced separately and the invoice marked "Not subject to duty."

(2) Charges for cases, packing, consular fee, &c., should be made on a separate invoice, to be mailed direct to the consignee, and never included on the same invoice with dutiable books.

(3) The invoice for a shipment should mention only the items actually shipped. Some English dealers are in the habit of making out the invoice in exact duplication of the order, then filling in extensions of prices for the items shipped, and marking the other items "o.p." or whatever the case may be. Report of items not sent should be made by letter, and never on an invoice.

(4) Besides the invoice to accompany the consular certificate, a duplicate invoice should immediately be mailed direct to the consignee.

Failure to observe these four simple rules results not only in needless annoyance to the American importer, but an actual money loss, which in the aggregate is very considerable. Hence the bookseller on this side avoids importing whenever possible, and the English trade loses many orders that might otherwise come to them.—Yours very truly,

W. R. BROWNE.

FAIRY STORIES AND THE "CRUX" OF THE BUSINESS

DEAR SIR,—The real reason that the sale of the 6s. novel is dying is because publishers do not allow a fair margin of profit on it to the ordinary bookseller, and consequently he is obliged to devote his attention to more profitable lines. Sixteen years ago, I would remind "Bookseller," there were practically no 6s. novels, they were 31s. 6d., and he has to thank the libraries that he has had a chance of selling any at 6s., or rather 4s. 6d. Library subscriptions have not been reduced; on the contrary, the successful Boots have had to increase their subscriptions. I would suggest that our "Bookseller" should have a library himself and do the same as I do, lend clean books to clean people for clean pennies, sometimes 2 and sometimes 3 per week. The "greasy microbe-laden bundle of dirty leaves" is another "fairy story." I have had 20 years' experience of the largest lending library in England, and not once to my knowledge has a case of infectious disease been traced to a loan book. Unless readers at the "Bibliothèque Nationale" see that the "reading mask" is disinfected after use by each person they are just as likely to get disease from each other as from the books. I quite agree as regards the "cheap reprints" as long as they are kept "net," for that, Sir—the "Net system for the book trade"—is the crux of the whole business, no matter what price the book is published at.

Yours faithfully,
A BOOKSELLER AND LIBRARIAN.

MR. OLDMEADOW'S "SUSAN" IN A SHILLING EDITION

DEAR MR. MARSTON,—When Ernest Oldmeadow's novel "Susan" was first published at 6s. you remarked, in connection with your praise of the book: "What a 1s. edition it would make!" Here is a copy of the 1s. edition. I hope we have made as good a job of it as you anticipated!

Very faithfully yours
GRANT RICHARDS.

THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION FOR TWOPENCE

DEAR SIR,—Apropos of your leader on Saturday, we venture to enclose a copy of our "Lessons on Civics," which, we think, you may be interested to see. This little book was published in 1906, and has been kept up-to-date in subsequent reprints. It is written primarily for English schools, and has been widely used.—Yours faithfully,

[The little sixpenny work of eighty pages which Messrs. Blackie send is reprinted from "A Short History of Great Britain." It is called "Lessons on Civics," and is a sketch of British institutions of the present day, covering very ably, with of course more detail, much the same ground as the little work we noticed last week.—ED. P.C.]

print, they probably include only a small fraction of the letters actually written by the great critic and expositor. The number of his correspondents is very large, and included many men of his own generation distinguished in art, science and letters. His letters to them, we need scarcely say, are of profound interest. The variety of subjects touched upon is bewildering, the attention to detail almost miraculous, and the energy and enthusiasm that persist year after year, making themselves evident in short notes as well as in long letters, are almost incredible. One obtains a full portrait of Ruskin from these two volumes; they contain the flower of his personality, and will probably be eagerly read when much of his other work is forgotten.

From Mr. J. W. Arrowsmith, Bristol, and Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Ltd.—"Dromina," by John Ayscough. Mr. Ayscough has written an unconventional, an able, but a not very enthralling novel. It is too full of explanations, of remote relationships, of needless side-issues. Its crises are knotty and not swift enough. The scene is laid in Spain, Ireland and Rome in the early decades of last century. The story is full of life and movement, but the author's tendency to prolixity is a stumbling-block to its full enjoyment.

From Messrs. Blackwood & Sons.—Two more volumes of their Shilling Editions of popular novels: "The Daft Days," by Neil Munro, and "The Lunatic at Large," by Storer Clouston. Cloth bound, well printed, and cheap, this series is certain of a large sale.

From Mr. G. T. Brown.—"Daily Light from the Cross," a book of devotion for the Church's year, compiled by M. A. Coleby. A series of extracts from religious writings, illustrating notable phrases of the Prayer-book. The authors laid under contribution are mainly those of the Church of England; but the Fathers of modern Nonconformity are also represented. The whole collection breathes a truly catholic and evangelical spirit, and the book will be found very helpful for daily meditation.

From The Cambridge University Press.—"Cambridge County Geographies, Norfolk and Suffolk," by W. A. Dutt. Two volumes on the same plan, each with physical and geographical maps, and each book at the end has three pages of diagrams showing increase of population, with rotation grasses and green crops, corn crops, pasture, &c. Descriptions of counties uniform with these two books will fill a want. So well put together and profusely illustrated, these Norfolk and Suffolk geographies are a credit to the Cambridge University Press.

From Messrs. James Clarke & Co.—"The Judges of Jesus," by J. G. Stevenson. Acute and penetrating studies of Judas, Annas, Peter, Caiaphas, Herod, Pilate's wife and Pontius Pilate. Mr. Stevenson possesses an unusual faculty for analysing character and dissecting the motives which prompt human action. "Jesus or Christ?" by J. Warschauer, M.A., D.Phil. This booklet is the outcome of a recent discussion provoked by an article in a recent number of the Hibbert Journal, whose writer vigorously challenged the Divinity, the supremacy and the historicity of Jesus Christ. Dr. Warschauer is a strenuous fighter, and he publishes these chapters in the hope that they "may render some small service to the cause of faith in an age of doubt."

From the Same.—"The Art of Sermon Illustration," by H. Jeffs. Mr. Jeffs rightly maintains that few preachers possess the power to illustrate their sermons and addresses. "A fertile illustrator, like the poet and painter, is born, not made." None the less, it is possible to cultivate the art; and the purpose of the present book is to assist those who realise the necessity of being interesting, and are not destitute of imagination, to develop what gift they have. Separate chapters deal with the following aspects of the subject:—General principles of illustration, Bible methods of illustration, the preacher among the poets, illustration of addresses to men, and so on. The book is written in a practical manner, and its usefulness is beyond question.

From the Same.—"The First Things of Jesus," by John Reid, M.A. In the Gospels there are certain sayings of Jesus Christ which are marked out as of special importance by the term "first." These studies deal with these "first things," and they are arranged in the following order:—Sayings which refer to Jesus or His work, sayings which refer to His claim of authority and the supremacy of the Gospel, and sayings which contain precepts bearing on life and conduct.

From Messrs. Constable & Co.—"Plato," by A. E. Taylor. "Berkeley and Spiritual Realism," by Alexander Campbell Fraser (Philosophies Ancient and Modern). We have before drawn attention to this admirable series, the object of which is scholarly yet popular exposition within a small compass. Professor Taylor gives in broad outline the result of his personal studies of the Platonic text. Professor Fraser's arrangement of his short study of Berkeley is by far the best we have yet noted in the series. The headings are printed in large type and the book divided into separate paragraphs, in which the particular heading under consideration is dealt with. This makes for clearness and conciseness.

From the Same.—"Priscilla and Charybdis," by Frankfort Moore. Mr. Moore, in the first half of this story up to the time of the second marriage of Priscilla, keeps our attention most pleasantly awake. It is a delightful bit of work; but afterwards the interest slackens somewhat. The moral of the story is that a pretty, strong-minded, womanly woman can bring all the goodness and strength there may be in a man into play. The rich hero is all right, but a "slacker"—until Priscilla takes him in hand and braces him up to play his part in the world in a worthy fashion.

From the Same.—"The Song of the Stewarts," Prelude by Douglas Ainslie. The author follows the fortunes of the Stewarts of Scotland in verse, beginning with Walter, son of Alan, the first Stewart, as he points out, of history, Lord High Stewart, 1164–1177. His poems also treat of James, fifth Lord High Stewart, and the Coronation of Brus, to the setting forth of Edward I. on his last expedition against the Scots, 1305. He gives the battles of Falkirk, Bannockburn and Largs in stirring poems, the latter being the most enjoyable in its bold swing of verse. Gigha Island, where King Haco "lay" (p. 31), now belongs to Mr. Moreton Macdonald, of Largie Castle, Tayinloan.

From Messrs. Digby, Long & Co.—"A Born Genius," by Alice M. Diehl. Tells of the home-coming of a youth whose mother is recently dead, and whose father informs him that he is not his son, but offers him an allowance, which is refused. The young man immediately leaving his old home, joins with gipsies, taking another name; is recognised on the Derby course by the daughter of a baronet; is adopted by the baronet; writes a gipsy opera, which takes London by storm; marries the lady who recognised him on the Derby course, in spite of great opposition, and later on finds that he is the son of a count, who leaves him estates and great capital. "A Born Genius" is a story of much character and worthy of a high position in novel-land.

From Messrs. H. Drane & Co.—"The Red King's Dream, and Other Poems," by E. M. Rutherford. Fifty poems, chiefly reprinted from magazines, &c., not without merit in parts but showing little distinction of thought or style.

From the Same.—"A Simple Heart," by T. H. Walther. The heart belongs to the Rev. James Harlington, the hero of the tale; who takes on his own shoulders the burden of his selfish young brother's sin. Released from prison he is cast off by his mother, and goes to the Pacific. Two villains get him in their power, and unlawfully send him to the leper island; but he escapes and marries his enemy's daughter. All comes right in the end. This story contains plenty of incident, and would dramatise well.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—"South American Sketches," by W. H. Hudson. Stories told of the time of the English Invasion in 1807, when our soldiers marched on Buenos Ayres, and when Britain had ideas of conquest on the South African continent. Fortunately, the forces prepared with that idea were available for defeating Napoleon and helping to free the nations of Europe.

From Messrs. Fairbairn.—"From Gower Street to Frognal," a historical sketch of University College School, with some pleasing "Farewell Verses," by Mr. J. Peile.

From Mr. Henry Frowde.—"Scenes of Clerical Life," by George Eliot. With an introduction by Annie Matheson. George Eliot's stories—"The Sad Fortunes of the Reverend Amos Barton," "Mr. Gilfil's Love Story," "Janet's Repentance"—require no praise. There will always be new lovers of them, and there are many who will gladly re-freshen their memories of these works, first written in 1857. The value of this volume is enhanced by the introduction, evidently written by a great admirer of George Eliot's writings.

From the Same.—"The Ornaments Rubric," being the report of the Committee appointed by Convocation, under the Royal Letters of Business, to consider the law relating to the conduct of Divine Service in the Church of England. As an appendix to the report is given a complete list of all the alterations of the Prayer-book recommended by the Committee. Churchmen ought to study this pamphlet.

From Mr. Alexander Gardner, of Paisley.—"Literary Tours in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland," by Mr. D. T. Holmes. This is a beguiling book, and the reader who takes it up will reluctantly lay it down. In the course of literary lecturing tours in the North and West of Scotland, Mr. Holmes has learnt much of Highland audiences, and has much to say of their literary aptitudes, as well as of ordinary tourist experiences. Every page bears witness to the high literary tastes and powers of the writer; and the whole book is seasoned with humour and anecdote. We can recommend it as a companion on a holiday.

From Messrs. Harper & Bros.—"Ikona Camp," by Colin Fitzgerald. A party of light-hearted and fluent-tongued young fellows camp out on the banks of the Thames. They get into mischief, talk a great deal of amusing nonsense, and do many other things beloved of the normal young man. Boating and fishing may be unexciting pastimes under ordinary conditions, but high-spirited youths love the extraordinary, and when they can't meet adventures they make them. A clear, light and entertaining story.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—"A Fair Refugee," by Morice Gerard. Marie de Masseine's father and brothers are murdered by Revolutionists in 1792. She is helped by her old nurse to escape to Honfleur, near which place she obtains passage on a cargo boat bound for Cornwall. Her adventures are numerous: one of the sailors makes love to her, the black cook attempts to steal her money and jewels, and finally the boat is wrecked near Land's End. She is taken into the household of the Rector of Tresyle, and later on falls in love with the typical hero of romance. A healthy, breezy book, full of fresh air and the sweetness of human nature.

From Messrs. Hodges, Figgis & Co., Ltd., Dublin.—"Stories from Keating's History of Ireland," edited, with notes and glossary, by Osborn Bergin, Ph.D. Keating wrote three hundred years ago, a most eventful period in the history of Ireland. As his history is in the Irish language it will not be understood by many of us; but as the Irishman on the road at the present time says to a passer-by, so say we to the author, "Boreath," which means "God bless your work."

From Messrs. Jackson & Sons, Brigg.—"Between Trent and Aucholme"; "In and Around an Old-fashioned Garden." And an old-fashioned book it is; a conglomeration of odds and ends, a book to have by the bedside—that is, if you have restless nights and want help with your sleep.

From Mr. J. Lane.—"The Book of the Cottage Garden," by C. Thonger (Handbooks of Practical Gardening). A most excellent treatise upon gardening as it should be practised by the fortunate possessor of a "week-end cottage." For Mr. Thonger hastens to assure us that it is not written for the cottager of the working classes, but for those who wish to gratify their love of colour and arrangement by cultivating hardy flowers in an old-world manner. Lawns, too, he advises upon; roses, annuals, vegetable and orchard gardens; but perhaps the most delightful thing in the book is the chapter on "Fragrance," with its list of sweet-scented, half-forgotten trees and shrubs. Do not the very names attest to their duty of making fragrant the air? Allspice, Sweet Woodruff, Bee Balm, Sweet Gale. This is a handbook for every lover of growing things.

From Mr. T. Werner Laurie.—"Canterbury Cathedral," by T. Francis Bumpus. A most delightful little book, written evidently by a lover of his work who, from his researches, is able to point out the resemblance of many portions of the cathedral to those of others in England and in France, which much enhances the value of this book. We should like him to have said more of the matchless Bell Harry Tower, the most beautiful and most perfect of its kind in England. A picture of the tower, standing by itself in full nobility, in the next edition would be welcome.

From Mr. John Long.—"The Chance of a Lifetime," by Nat Gould. This tale boldly begins with a burglary, the burglar, curiously, having been at one time the partner of the rich owner of the house. But this he did not know until he was in the house, and then there was nearly murder. This incident is not the least of the exciting ones in the story. There is one thing the reader of Mr. Gould's stories may rest assured of. He may always depend upon the end finishing happily, and that he will not be left with an uncomfortable feeling of regret for the hero or heroine of the book.

From Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.—"The Curious Case of Lady Purbeck," a scandal of the 7th century, by the author of "The Life of Sir Kenelm Digby." This story takes us to the time of the quarrels and rivalry of Bacon and Coke in the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and James I. It is told, without much embellishment, as found in old books and manuscripts. It relates how the Attorney General (Coke) afterwards Lord Chief Justice, and his second wife, Lady Elizabeth Hatton, fought over the marrying of their pretty and wealthy daughter. How Coke besieged his wife in her house, finally carrying off his daughter and forcing her into marriage with Sir John Villiers, the poor elder brother of the Duke of Buckingham (afterwards created Viscount Purbeck), by having her tied to the bed-post and whipped until she gave her consent. A piece of scandal, we may be sure, which was largely discussed in the nave of St. Paul's Cathedral, the favourite lounge in those days.

From the Same.—"The Springs of Helicon," a study in the Progress of English Poetry from Chaucer to Milton, by J. W. Mackail, M.A., LL.D., some time Fellow of Balliol College, Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford. Never have we been given a clearer insight into the value of poetry. How the master-minds of poetry, from Chaucer to Milton, not content with their natural gifts, have deliberately framed their work with the result that the nation has progressed, gradually improving its position in the world. Oxford should indeed be proud of its son—perhaps it is. At any rate, we offer Professor Mackail our warmest thanks for this work, the outcome of his study. We would advise our readers not to lose the opportunity of reading "The Springs of Helicon," which, though small in compass, should rank as a classic in all libraries. Every word in it is weighed and measured.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—"The Struggle for Imperial Unity," by Colonel George T. Denison. Colonel Denison was one of the founders of the Canada First Party, the Chairman of the Organising Committee of the Imperial Federation League in Canada, and then President of it. He has therefore for many years been in a position to acquire a large amount of private information in connection with the struggle for Imperial Unity that is of the greatest interest to the public. He has not written a history of the Imperial Unity movement, but has made a record of his personal recollections of the work which he has been doing in connection with it for so many years. His book is not only a valuable piece of work, but one that is written from beginning to end in a fascinating and delightful style. The manner is that adopted by a man when he speaks to an old friend while smoking a pipe in front of the fire.

From Messrs. Methuen & Co.—"Galicia: the Switzerland of Spain," by Annette M. B. Meakin. Galicia is the least known and the least written about of all the little kingdoms that go to the making of Spain. And yet it is a romantic country, with a glorious past, a fine literature, and a highly picturesque present. Miss Meakin knows the country well, both as it was in ancient times and as it is to-day; she is in sympathy with it and its people, and her book is saturated with the atmosphere of this sun-bathed land. Her volume is to some extent historical, but the most interesting portion of it is that which has been written from her own observation and travel. Her style is pungent, fluent and straightforward; her illustrations are numerous and of first-rate quality. All British visitors to Galicia will find her volume quite indispensable.

From Messrs. Mills & Boon, Ltd.—"Render Unto Cæsar," by Mrs. Vere Campbell. "Render Unto Cæsar" is rather a formidable title. Rather let it be "Render Unto Gregory" (a character in the book) and then the title and the work will be more in agreement. Certainly there was a Pope Gregory, and the Cæsar of the title was an Emperor, and they were both Romans. And both having high titles there can be little disagreement if the second edition takes advantage of our suggestion. It is a novel having decidedly different characteristics from stories of the present day.

From the Same.—"For Church and Chieftain," by May Wynne. A tale of the 16th century, when the English soldiers were over-running Ireland, and the Earl of Desmond was fighting for his own, but to lose his life. It is a relief that the persecutor, the O'Carroll, is killed, and that our story ends with the two brave girls, Eva and Sheila, escaping with their husbands to Spain, in charge of the priests who came too late with succour to the Earl of Desmond.

From Messrs. Alexander Moring, Ltd. (The De la More Press).—"Old London: a series of Fifty Reproductions of Old Engravings Illustrative of the London of our Ancestors," compiled by Walter L. McNay. In addition to the fifty plates mentioned on the title-page, there is facing each plate a single page of text describing the plate, the date of its original production, and a slight reference to the principal points of interest contained in the picture. There is also a very useful and elaborate index to all the chief subjects mentioned in the text. The plates are all beautifully reproduced. The first plate gives us a charming view of what London was like 130 years ago, "with its glorious spires and towers, its riverside palaces, the Thames, and its noble bridges." The plates are mostly illustrative of bits of Old London of the 16th, 17th, and 18th Centuries, many of which have now vanished, such as Old St. Paul's (a beautiful plate), Old London Bridge, Old Blackfriars Bridge, the Marshalsea Prison (the scene of Little Dorrit's adventures), &c. The taste displayed in the production of the volume is characteristic of the De la More Press.

From Mr. Eveleigh Nash.—"Fair Women at Fontainebleau," by Frank Hamel. We doubt whether the contents of this volume quite justify its handsome get-up. Fifteen shillings is a good deal to most book buyers, but the binding, type, and nine full-page illustrations suggest that the text will be above the average. And yet Mr. Hamel disappoints us in these studies of the fair, and often frail, beauties whose names are associated with Fontainebleau: Diane de Poitiers, Gabrielle d'Estrees, Maintenon, Pompadour—what pictures the very words evoke! The long bibliography of "Principal Authorities" shows how much industry has gone to the making of the book, and yet—and here, perhaps, is the explanation of our feeling—it is an example of book-making rather than of book-writing. The comprehensive grasp and vivid touch, the illuminating phrase that will throw a sudden light and link up these strange chapters of human experience, seem to be lacking. It is just because the book is ambitious that we feel unable to give it facile praise. As a pot-pourri of a popular type it is likely to be widely sought. We believe Mr. Hamel has the stuff in him which would justify an appeal to a higher standard.

From Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co.—"The Trickster," by G. B. Burgin. Lady Selina [illegible] Castleton [illegible] Lady Selina tires of her husband he is to leave her. She is in love with Roland Delgarde, who, a few years after her marriage [illegible] complications of an extraordinary nature quickly ensue, and if several of the characters do [illegible] seem to [illegible] sane, [illegible] not detract from the picturesqueness of the story. The curtain is rung down on a tragedy.

From Messrs. Pearson, Ltd.—"Cassock and Comedy," by Mr. Athol Forbes. This diverting account of the lighter side of clerical experience has now reached a third edition.

From Messrs. Ralph, Holland & Co.—"The Theory of Music for Students and Teachers," by J. Lightfoot, D.Sc., M.A., Mus.Bac. This book, now in third edition, supplies the elementary facts of Harmony and the Theory of the Elements of Music—sufficient for the syllabus of the University Senior Local Examinations. There is a chapter on the Tonic Sol-fa Notation, and also a short one on Voice Production. It seems a most reliable work.

From Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.—"The Bond of Sympathy," by J. E. A Selection of Thoughts culled from many sources. A pretty little volume containing gems from the works of many writers. Just the book to send to a friend at any time.——"Leaves Worth Turning," by the author of the above. A Thought for every day; helpful and selected with care and due consideration. Her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales have each graciously accepted a copy.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—"Military Needs and Military Policy," by Right Hon. H. O. Arnold-Forster. With Introduction by Field-Marshal Earl Roberts, V.C., K.G. The purpose of this book is to explain in plain and simple language what are the true military needs of this country, and to show that the Territorial Force, as at present constituted, does not, and cannot, supply those needs. The question of the possibility of invasion and of successful raids is examined, and the author draws attention to the numerous cases in which the public has been misled with regard to military questions by incorrect statements made in Parliament and elsewhere. The subjects touched on, it need scarcely be said, are of the greatest interest, and the book will probably excite a good deal of controversy. It is a matter for regret that the keenly patriotic author has died since it was published, but his good work for his country will still "go marching on."

From Mr. H. Stockwell.—"Monica of Esseburn," a novel, by Margaret F. Osborne. A story of village life told prettily; the naughty young woman of the tale gives her name to the novel. The curate helps her at the end to do the right thing. We hope later he meets with his reward.

From the Same.—"In the Long Run," a novel, by Robert B. Moreno. A very curious story. A lady is deserted on her bridal night, and at the same time she misses a valuable diamond tiara which had been in her family for four generations. By the desertion she has to go on the stage for her livelihood. She later marries a millionaire who dies suddenly. She, as a rich widow, after an eventful life in London, marries a Count, a Papal production (not the only one in the book), who after the honeymoon discloses that he was her first husband and the thief. He restores the diamond tiara, and lives happily with his wife for ever after, such being the power of matrimony. Certainly a very curious novel.

From the Same.—"Wife of a Sweetheart?" Four short and unpretending stories.

From Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co., Ltd.—"In the Dead of Night," by John T. McIntyre. A curious story. One never arrives at any very marked conclusion. There are many thrilling incidents in the book, and more than one murder, for which nobody is hung. For a character in a novel we admire Kenyon very much. We should not, however, have burnt a £2,000 cheque, although we were to marry the lady of our choice.

New Editions.—A cheaper edition of "Our City of God," by J. Brierley, B.A., just issued by Messrs. James Clarke & Co., will prove very welcome. A second impression of Albert B. Lloyd's "Uganda to Khartoum" is very welcome; as an account of life and adventure on the Upper Nile it is almost without a rival. It is published by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin, and contains eighty illustrations.

THE

Publishers' Circular

A Great Review

La Grande Revue

Booksellers at home and in the Colonies who have customers for French publications would do well to bring to their notice the great French Review, La Grande Revue, of which some copies have been sent to us recently. The office is 37, Rue de Constantinople, Paris.

La Grande Revue is worthy of its name, in size it is the largest monthly review of the kind—not only in France, but in the world—and in price it is one of the least expensive, the price in France being 1 franc 50 cents net. We are glad to see the word net on a French publication. The price out of France is 2 francs, and it is published on the 10th and the 25th of each month. The editor is M. Jacques Rouché, and the distinguished appearance of the text pages is enhanced by clever sketches by leading French artists, from Albert Besnard to Félix Vallotton.

By the way, what difference does it make to a man whether his name begins with the first or the last letter of the alphabet? It is probably an advantage in some respects and a disadvantage in others to be at the head of all lists, or at the foot of them. Supposing there are half a dozen booksellers in a town, it is probable that anyone wanting to communicate with a bookseller in that town, and having nothing else to go by, will write to the first on the list. It must be a little hard on those who have to serve their country as jurymen. No Albert Adam could expect to escape.

Contents

As regards the contents, so far as we are able to judge from the numbers received, compared with other similar publications, La Grande Revue is second to none. In the number for March 25th we find, in addition to over forty pages of a story from the Italian of F. di Roberts, some articles of great importance from an international point of view, especially to this country; "Les Forces en Présence," by the former French Minister, M. Pierre Baudin, contains a prophecy:

> "The antagonism of England and Germany will reign over the first half of this century, just as the rivalry of England and France has weighed on preceding centuries. It has penetrated the two peoples with an instinctive sentiment of hatred, which haunts them ceaselessly."

The article is No. IV. of a series on the positions and outlooks of the World Powers. We must not forget that a good many of our French friends would naturally not be sorry to see two big rivals fall out—so much less chance for one of them to fall on her. Among other things M. Baudin describes Mr. Haldane's Army Scheme, and says:—

> "Such is the system imagined by Mr. Haldane. It has evidently the advantage of giving due consideration to traditions dear to the British nation. Being founded exclusively on voluntary enlistments and engagements, it is of the nature of a programme and not of an order of law. It offers itself, it does not impose itself. Is it a realisable programme? The facts must answer. We shall therefore consider the facts."

This examination of the facts we are promised in another issue of the Revue.

Another most interesting and important article, which is well worth the study of all our educational publishers, is on "The Higher Education in Germany," by Henri Schoen, and deals with the remarkable development of technical education in Germany—her commercial and technical Universities and schools are now training nearly eighteen thousand students, a number which can easily be doubled. This writer also tells his French reader that "the peril is not for France. All the most clear-sighted economists admit that it is England which is menaced by this great and new development of higher education in Germany." No one who has given any attention to the subject can doubt the truth of this. To lay down two warships to Germany's one will not save us if she is laying down ten technical colleges to our one. It was the brain of Moltke which brought Austria and France under the mailed fist of Germany.

There are articles by M. Victor Margueritte, by M. Moncharville, &c., and an extraordinary one on the French Fleet, entitled "Pall Mall Marine," by M. Olivier Seylor, who cynically, if not ironically, makes the startling assertion that "A war fleet is absolutely useless to France." He says, "Admit the perpetual superiority of the Fleet of England because her existence depends on it, against what power can we profitably employ our Navy? Against Germany? But Trafalgar did not prevent Jena." It is with such arguments as these that M. Seylor attacks "Pall Mall," the French Fleet. Incidentally, when referring to the big gun practice of warships, he says he saw the American Nashville shooting like a drunken cowboy, and that the officers and men in the turrets were stupefied and three parts deafened by the concussion of their own guns. It is said the Germans have invented a sort of diving dress, which enables the gun crews to fire all day with impunity, also to breathe freely in fumes from any kind of shells.

In addition to special articles of the first importance, La Grande Revue has departments on "The Literary Life," "The Theatrical World," Music, Art, Science and Politics; also a compartment entitled "L'Egrugeoir" — i.e., "The Pestle and Mortar," a significant title. We regret to find that one of the things to be ground is a very delicate International question as to rights on the Congo affecting England, Belgium and also France and Germany. La Grande Revue says that if Sir Edward Grey insists in his present attitude vis-a-vis Belgium, the Belgium Government will call in France and Germany as being affected by our claims.

Here we must close our endeavour to interest our readers in a great French review which gives prominence to matters affecting our interests; but to borrow an expression which is becoming common in French literature, "Nous stoppons" for a moment to mention a very short account entitled "Motia," by Serge Persky, of a terrible incident of the massacre of the hundreds of Jews and students at Odessa in December, 1905. Some Jews and students had taken refuge in an underground cellar. They can hear the shrieks of their friends being outraged and shot by the mob. A young mother with her babe knock at the door, and are admitted. Presently the babe begins to cry; nothing the mother can do appeases it. The terror-stricken men and women know that the cry will betray them. One of the men offers to nurse the baby; it is quiet, and the mother goes to him for it. His hand is strangling it. She gives a piercing cry and swoons. The mob follow the cry, break open the door and destroy all, or nearly all, those taking refuge. Next day the mad mother is found among the corpses nursing her dead baby and singing it to sleep. It is a terrible document of human life, this "Motia."

SIR ISAAC PITMAN & SONS, LTD., publish this week a translation by Miss Alice Werner (author of "Native Races of British Africa") of Dr. Karl Weule's "Native Life in East Africa." The illustrations and maps, some of which are in colour, number nearly two hundred. The peculiar interest of this volume would seem likely to consist in the novelty of a description by a German of that portion of the Dark Continent which comes within the German sphere of influence, and which contains such tribes as the Makua, Makonde and Matambwa—peoples known little more than by name in this country.

The P.C. was the first journal in the old world to welcome "Anne of Green Gables," only a month or two ago, and we are glad to say that already Messrs. Pitman have a fifth large impression just ready for publication. The same firm will publish in the autumn a new work by Miss L. M. Montgomery, the charming young Canadian authoress of "Anne." Tastes differ, fortunately for the interest of life, and some to whom we have recommended "Anne" have found her vivacity and sentimentality not quite acceptable, but those who like her like her very much.

The publication date of one of Mr. Hall Caine's new novels has come to be looked upon by many thousands of people as a red-letter date in the calendar. He is now revising his new story, "The White Prophet," which appeared in the Strand Magazine, to be ready for August 10th, when Mr. Heinemann will publish it in volume form. The book deals with the Arab tradition that in the end of time a Redeemer will come to unite the faiths of the world into one faith, and the peoples of the world into one people. It may well be summed up in the words: "Oh men of many races, be brothers one to another." Mr. Heinemann has had the work illustrated by Mr. R. Caton Woodville. We understand that the story will also form the subject of a new play by Mr. Hall Caine in collaboration with Mr. L. N. Parker.

Owing to the great success of the first number of The New Magazine, the May number, published April 20th, is being looked forward to with much interest. The Art Supplement includes some of our best-known stage celebrities and scenes from famous plays. They are half-tone reproductions, and are printed in delicate purple and brown shades. The fiction is particularly strong, including stories by Captain F. H. Shaw, Ruby M. Ayres, I. A. R. Wylie, Houghton Townley, Archibald Guthrie, Frank Hubert, Fred M. White, Herbert Maxwell and other popular writers. The Woman's Kingdom embraces everything of interest to ladies, and altogether it can honestly be said to be a worthy second number. The cover is again exceptionally attractive.

"London's Lure" is the title of an anthology which Messrs. Bell will publish next week. In this volume Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Melville have gathered passages descriptive of the peculiar charm and fascination of London. Their selection is wide and catholic, ranging as it does from Lamb, Herrick, Hazlitt, Goldsmith, Wordsworth, Dickens and Thackeray to Calverley, J. M. Barrie, G. R. Sims, Robert Hichens and Joseph Conrad.

Messrs. Bell will publish next week a little volume of verses entitled "The Way of Light." It is by the Rev. Thomas J. Hardy, whose scholarly essay on "The Gospel of Pain" was very well received last year.

A book which should be of interest, not only to anglers, but to all who love a good story well told, is "Fish Stories, Alleged and Experienced: with a Little History, Natural and Unnatural." It is by Mr. F. C. Holder and Professor David Starr Jordan, and will be published next week by Messrs. Bell.

The book of the moment, in view of the counter-Revolution in Constantinople, is Mr. C. Roden Buxton's "Turkey in Revolution," which Mr. Unwin has just published. It is the first full and consecutive account of the Revolution which has appeared, and contains information which could only be learnt from the lips of the actual authors of the movement. These Mr. Buxton had a unique opportunity of knowing personally, having accompanied his brother, Mr. Noel Buxton, the Chairman of the Balkan Committee, in the recent deputation to Constantinople. There he met all the leading young Turks, talked with the Sheikh-ul-Islam, and was even received by Abdul Hamid himself. In his book, "he has," says the Nation, "succeeded in conveying a fascinating and moving impression of a rare and historic experience."

Special interest is given to the edition of Middleton's plays in the "Mermaid Series," which Mr. T. Fisher Unwin publishes, by the remarkable Introduction which Mr. Swinburne contributed to the first volume.

Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., will publish on April 29th a volume entitled "Musical Monstrosities," being the collected articles which Mr. C. L. Graves has contributed at intervals to Punch, dealing with the atrocities committed in the musical world. With the help of Mr. George Morrow these collected stray papers are assured of a new life, and it is conceivable that even the musical celebrities at whom this genial pair of critics poke gentle fun will enjoy them as much as anyone. It was time that some humorist should take it in hand to deal with the subject handled here, and if the hour has arrived so have the men.

The editor of the Church Quarterly Review begs to call attention to three articles of special interest at the present time in the April number of the Church Quarterly, which was published on the 22nd inst. The first article, upon "Modernism," is by the Rev. Herbert Jeaffreson, who has had special opportunities during many years' residence in Italy of forming a judgment upon its development, and deals with its principles and the attitude of the Roman Church towards M. Loisy, Father Tyrrell and Don Murri, the Italian priest who has just been returned as a Christian-democratic deputy to Parliament, and has been excommunicated in consequence. The influence of the deliberations of the Lambeth Conference on Reunion is seen in two articles—on "The Ethics of Division," to which a pathetic interest attaches as the last contribution made by the late Dr. Alfred Pearson, Bishop of Burnley, before his death to a cause which he had greatly at heart; and a study of "The Problem of Re-union in Scotland," contributed at the editor's request by Dr. James Cooper, Professor of Church History in the University of Glasgow, who is one of the best-known Presbyterian historians in Scotland.

Mr. Albert Sutton, 48, Bridge Street, Manchester, has just published a list of over fifteen hundred antiquarian items relating to Shakespearian and dramatic literature, including old plays, dramatic biographies, operatic memoirs, theatrical histories, &c.

His Majesty the King has graciously accepted a copy of Jules Clartie's novel, translated from the French by Ada Solly-Flood, entitled "Agnès: a Romance of the Siege of Paris." The English edition is announced by Mr. Elliot Stock. The story opens with the declaration of war between France and Germany in 1870.

Elinor Macartney Lane, whose death has just been recorded, left a novel "Katrine," ready for publication. It will be issued within a few days by Harper & Bros., who state that "Katrine" abundantly fulfils the promise of her previous books, "Nancy Stair" and "The Mills of God."

"The Planter," a new novel by Herman Whitaker is described as the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the present day slavery of Mexico. It will be issued immediately by Harper & Bros.

Mr. Grant Richards announces several books of interest to the lover of outdoor life. In "Favourite Fish and Fishing," Dr. James A. Henshall writes not only as an ardent fisherman, but also as a nature lover. "The Book of Camping and Woodcraft," by Horace Kephart, is a complete manual of camping, written with scholarly attention to the smallest details by a man who loves the wild. "The Sport of Bird Study," by Herbert K. Job, shows how pleasure and adventure may be found in becoming thoroughly acquainted with the birds of any ordinary country town—how to go about the "sport," and what one will be likely to find. The numerous illustrations from photographs serve as a guide and inspiration in themselves.

To their Sixpenny Copyright Novels, Messrs. Jarrold have recently added "The Jaws of Death," by Grant Allen; "The Burglings of Tutt," by R. Andom; "Because of the Child," by Curtis Yorke. Each story shows the respective authors in their most popular vein. The covers in colour make the volumes all the more attractive.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton will publish immediately a new work by Sir Joseph Compton-Rickett, M.P., entitled "Origins and Faith." This work approaches the current questions of the day from a new point of view and suggests a reconciliation between the older theological and the new philosophical teaching.

The April number of the New Quarterly contains a posthumous essay by Samuel Butler upon that vague term, Genius; also two long unpublished letters of Carlyle on the Socialism of his day.

Some time ago we announced the appearance of John Ayscough's new novel "Dromina." The book was immediately accepted by the French Academy, and has since achieved the very rare distinction, for a work of fiction, of acceptance by the Accademia della Crusca of Florence. This ancient Academy—the most rigid and exclusive in Italy—is devoted to the higher study of language, and style, especially that of Italy. Of novels it rarely betrays any consciousness. That a romance, and that a foreign one, should be accepted by the august body (whose portentous emblem is a crushing-mill), and its author receive the felicitations and thanks of the Academicians is a distinction most unusual.

The King of the Hellenes has intimated through the Greek Minister in London his desire to confer the Gold Cross of the Order of the Saviour on Mr. Allen Upward in recognition of the service done to the Greeks of Macedonia by Mr. Upward's recent work, "The East End of Europe." While gratefully thanking His Majesty, Mr. Upward has asked to be excused from accepting the proposed honour, on the ground that the highest tradition of English public life is opposed to the acceptance of such distinctions by politicians and men of letters. Mr. Upward had the honour to be excused by the Sultan from accepting a decoration while in Turkey, on similar grounds.

"Across a Continent in a Man-of War," is announced by the Westminster Press, 411A, Harrow Road, London, W., as a forthcoming addition to their "Log" Series. This is the Log of H.M.S. Pelorus, and contains a full account of how she reached Iquitos, 2,300 miles up the Amazon. The book, which will be fully illustrated, will be published at 5s. net.

A new series of great interest to the Bible student is announced by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton, entitled "The Historical Bible," by Professor Charles Foster Kent, author of "The Student's Old Testament." Two volumes will be issued this spring.

The publication in series form of "Familiar Swiss Flowers," by Prof. F. E. Hulme, F.L.S., F.S.A., will be welcomed by those interested in the many plants found in the mountains and valleys of this beautiful country. Not only is the name of each flower given, and the locality in which it is to be found, but much other information as to the time of the year the plant is in bloom, the shape and texture of the leaves, the form of the stems and other salient botanical features. The work, published by Cassell & Co., Ltd., is illustrated with 100 coloured plates reproduced by the most modern processes of colour printing from original paintings by the author.

We are asked by the proprietors of The World's Work to state that, commencing with the May issue and henceforth, a time limit of two months has been fixed on returns, and that no returns received after that date can be credited. The May World's Work is to contain another article by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, entitled "Socialism in the Home," and the June issue is to be a great "Empire Number" with special cover.

In connection with the centenary of Paine's death (June 8th), Messrs. Watts are issuing the late Dr. Moncure D. Conway's "Life of Thomas Paine" in three sixpenny parts, the first of which is ready this week. They are also publishing in their well-known Sixpenny series a selection from Paine's political writings, including his "Common Sense," "The American Crisis," and his speeches on the trial and death of Louis XVI.

The same publishers announce that Mr. Thomas Whittaker, M.A., has prepared a second edition of his "Origins of Christianity," with a lengthy new preface and an appendix on Galatians, and it will be published immediately.

On April 30th Mr. John Lane will publish "The Love Affairs of Napoleon," by Joseph Turquan (translated from the French by James L. May), with 32 full-page illustrations; and "The Philosophy of Long Life," by Jean Finot (a translation by Harry Roberts). This is a translation of a book which has already been translated into almost every language, and has, in France, gone into fourteen editions in the course of a few years.

Mr. Werner Laurie will shortly publish a fully illustrated volume entitled "The Love Story of Empress Josephine," by James Endell.

Can will power be trained? If so, how? These are the two main questions before Mr. Sharper Knowlson in "The Education of the Will," which Mr. Werner Laurie is shortly publishing. As a book it covers the middle ground between the erudite studies of professors of medicine and psychology on the one hand, and the extravagant literature of many "New Thought" writers on the other.

A book of interest at the present time is "Washed by Four Seas," by ex-Lieutenant H. C. Woods, who is bringing an action for £75,000 against the Army Council. His volume is a record of his two extended tours in the Near East. Mr. Woods was enabled to obtain information on certain important military and other questions not before acquired by any English expert. His chapters on the Defences of Constantinople, on the Bulgarian Army, on the Railways of the Near East, and on the Influence of Mohamedanism on Character, are worthy of the attention of all who are interested in the Turkish problem.

With much regret we have to record the death of Professor F. E. Hulme, F.L.S., F.S.A., of Kew, the well-known botanist and antiquarian, so well known as the author of "Familiar Wild Flowers," upon which he had been engaged since 1875. He had corrected the proofs of the ninth and last volume, but did not live to see the volume published. Among his other best-known books were—"Plants: their Natural Growth and Ornamental Treatment," "Mathematical Instruments and How to Use Them," "Mythland," "History, Principles and Practice v. Symbolism in Art," "History, Principles and Practice of Heraldry," "Wild Fruits of the Countryside," and "Flags: their History, Blazonry, and Associations." His last published work was a volume entitled "That Rock Garden of Ours," which Mr. T. Fisher Unwin brought out in February. It dealt with the botanical and practical side of rock gardening, and with the plant-lore, legendary, medicinal and literary side of the subject, and was illustrated from drawings by Mr. Hulme.

Mr. Robert Culley has just issued "The Bible in Modern Light," Part III. of the "People's Religious Difficulties." This important series, by Dr. Ballard, is being published in five sixpenny parts, and the subjects dealt with are so arranged as to make each part complete in itself. Parts I. and II. ("Popular Determinism;" and "God, Prayer and the Mystery of Pain") have already had a large sale.

Messrs. Gay & Hancock will shortly publish a popular shilling volume, entitled "The Meaning of Life, Based on Psychology and Idealism," by Fredk. Charles Baker. Its object is to help those with whom life has lost its zest, and also those who cannot satisfy their reason as to the great Why and Wherefore of our existence.

The famous Wallace Collection is the latest addition to Cassell's series of "Great Art Galleries," and contains reproductions of sixty of the principal pictures in the Collection, with brief explanatory notes. The Galleries already included in this series are the National Gallery, the Tate Gallery, the Louvre and the Luxembourg. "The Wallace Collection" will be published on April 30th.

Mr. Foster Fraser's new book, "Quaint Subjects of the King," describes the varied and strange tribes over which His Majesty rules. He describes their methods of life, their superstitions and customs, how they make love, fight, hunt, and are buried. Mr. Foster Fraser is a great traveller, and the knowledge he has gained through personal contact with the varied and strange tribes which inhabit the most distant parts of our Empire lend an additional charm to the book. The work is illustrated with seventy-seven reproductions from photographs. Messrs. Cassell are the publishers.

Mr. Hugh S. Walpole gives the title, "The Wooden Horse," to a volume from his pen, which Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. will publish on May 11th next. The motif of the story is a feud in the family of a certain Sir Jeremy Trojan and his three children.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. will publish immediately "The English Woman: Studies in Her Psychic Evolution." The work is a translation from the French by Mrs. J. M. E. Brownlow of Mr. David Staars' "La Femme Anglaise et son Evolution Psychique," and it exemplifies the growing study in France of English life. It traces the development of woman's position in England, showing the stages of its progress, not merely from social and economic history and the successive claims of eminent women, but from the estimate of women presented from time to time by representative writers.

Under the title of "A Blind Goddess" Messrs. Ouseley are publishing within the next ten days Mr. Mulvy Ouseley's new novel. Booksellers who stocked the same author's "Kitty and the Viscount," and other of his novels, should take note. Mr. Mulvy Ouseley is a well-known writer of romance. His books have found their way into homes in both hemispheres. Queen Alexandra read "Kitty and the Viscount," and his later book, "The Sorrows of Michael," was read by the present Pontiff, Pope Pius X.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co. have arranged for the publication of "The Economic Annals of the Nineteenth Century," by Dr. William Smart, Adam Smith Professor of Political Economy in the University of Glasgow (author of "The Distribution of Income," "The Return to Protection," &c.). During his three years' work as one of the Royal Commissioners on the Poor Laws, Professor Smart felt himself much hampered by the absence of accessible information regarding the economic and social evolution from the time when the Poor Law came into evil prominence during the great war, and this determined him to devote his remaining years to filling up the gap. The first part of the work, which will probably appear in the autumn, deals with the period from 1801 to 1820, thus covering the little known ground of the internal condition of the country during the war, and particularly the introduction of the Corn Laws.

The late Mr. Marion Crawford's new novel, "The White Sister," will be published on May 4th by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. The scenes are laid in Rome, the locale of his greatest successes—the city which Mr. Crawford probably knew better than any other living writer.

"The Infamous John Friend," a romance of Napoleon's projected invasion of England, by Mrs. R. S. Garnett, is announced for publication by Messrs. Duckworth on April 27th.

Mr. John Milne announces "Pink Purity," by Gertie de S. Wentworth-James, author of "Red Love."

Alice Hegan Rice, who discovered Mrs. Wiggs, has found a new cure for the blues in "Mr. Opp of Kentucky." So she has written a book about him, just as she wrote about Mrs. Wiggs, only the story is nearly twice as long. Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton will publish it.

The Booksellers' Provident Institution

THE monthly meeting of the Board of Directors was held at 56, Old Bailey, on April 15th, C. J. Longman, Esq., in the chair. Other members of the Board present were—Messrs. J. R. Blade (Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.), W. Bartram (Longmans, Green & Co.), W. H. Bull (Marshall Bros., Ltd.), E. H. Cooke (Geo. Philip & Sons, Ltd.), J. Cooper (W. & R. Chambers, Ltd.), James Foster (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), C. H. Hollingsworth (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), F. J. James, W. H. Jelpke (Longmans, Green & Co.), G. H. Johnson (Reeves & Turner), C. T. Langford (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), F. Long (Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.), W. McLaughlin (Times Book Club), E. Shallis (Macmillan & Co., Ltd.), C. A. Spon (C. & E. Spon, Ltd.), J. E. Stroulger (Rivington's), C. W. Whitaker (J. Whitaker & Sons, Ltd.), and the Secretary, Mr. G. Larner.

The sum of £125 was voted for the relief of members and widows of members.

Messrs. E. C. Dean, P. A. Passenger, and R. J. Rowe were elected members of the institution, and seven applications for membership were received.

The Secretary announced the receipt of the following donations:—£10 10s. from the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge; £2 2s. from John Murray, Esq., and £2 2s. from A. H. Hallam Murray, Esq.

On Collecting English Earthenware

SATAN finds some mischief still for idle hands to do, and we learn from Mr. T. Fisher Unwin that old English earthenware is now as much collected as old china. It has its band of votaries who are prepared, as the records of the auction room show, to give almost as high prices for rare examples as were given for china ten years ago. A popular handbook to the subject has just been written by Mr. Arthur Hayden, whose manuals on old china, furniture and prints are well known to collectors. The book will be entitled "Chats on English Earthenware," and will be published on April 26th by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin. It deals with all classes of English earthenware of artistic interest, and has a coloured frontispiece and 80 full-page plates. The development of the manufacture from Seventeenth Century days is picturesquely described in chapters which include Lambeth, Bristol, and Liverpool Delft, Dwight and Elers Stoneware, Salt Glaze Ware, Whieldon, Wedgwood, Leeds, Newcastle and Sunderland, Swansea, Old Staffordshire Figures and Toby Jugs, Lustre Ware, Willow Pattern and Old Blue Printed Ware, and Late Staffordshire Earthenware, Mason's Ironstone, and the Middle Nineteenth Century Potters. A detailed table shows the possessor of old earthenware how to identify his specimens, and over 200 marks are given. With lists and prices, glossary, bibliography and hints as to forgeries, and suggestions throughout as to the best means of collecting with profit, the volume is a thoroughly reliable working handbook for all who are interested in old English earthenware.

PUBLISHERS' REPRESENTATIVES

No. III

MR. HENRY COOPER

[Representing Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co., Limited]

[By P.C. Special]

FEW publishers' representatives are better known or more highly esteemed than Mr. Henry Cooper, who is responsible for the Central London section of Messrs. Ward, Lock & Company's extensive business. In one respect Mr. Cooper's record is probably almost unique: in a business career extending to nearly forty years he has represented only one house. Entering Messrs. Ward, Lock & Company's service in 1870, fresh from school, he is still with them, a record honourable alike to himself and to his firm.

Forty years! The period takes us back to the beginning of the School Board era, with all its consequences to the national life and to the publishing trade in particular. The house with which Mr. Cooper is identified was one of the first to foresee the enormous possibilities of development in popular literature, and by its cheap standard reprints and other books for the people were practically pioneers in what has become one of the most important branches of the trade.

MR. HENRY COOPER
Representing Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co., Ltd.

Asked to recall a few experiences of those early days, Mr. Cooper said:—

"It seems impossible that it can really be forty years since, with much trepidation, I entered upon my duties in the old historic Warwick House, at Amen Corner, then occupied by the firm. Paternoster Row and the book trade were at that time almost synonymous terms, and there was a certain inspiration in being so emphatically in the very 'hub' of the reading universe. Though I was destined to be a 'town' man, my first appointment, curiously enough, was in the country department. One of my colleagues at this period is now, and has been for many years, an influential bookseller in the West End.

"My firm was already known as one of the most progressive and enterprising of the younger houses, and some of its serial publications were in the heyday of their popularity. I can well remember having to look out large orders for The Englishwoman's Domestic Magazine and The Boy's Own Magazine, with its entrancing stories by such writers as J. G. Edgar, &c.

"From this period, too, dates the publication of those remarkable stories which form the nucleus of our ever-popular 'Lily' books and other series of similar character. Through all the vagaries of public taste, and with all the competition from modern writers, the demand for these books—such as the 'Wide, Wide World,' 'The Old Helmet,' and so on—continues unabated, and is, indeed, on the increase. What is the secret of this perennial popularity which has always seemed to me one of the most astonishing features of the trade? Why should these books—old-fashioned as many would consider them—continue to sell by hundreds of thousands, while so many equally excellent and attractive modern books pass with such disconcerting rapidity into the hands of the remainder dealers? The reason is probably to be found in the fact that many people are too busy to keep in touch with modern developments, and when desirous of giving books feel more confidence in buying those which they remember having themselves read and enjoyed as youngsters. Whatever the cause, it is very certain that the old favourites—at many of which the modern literary critic would hardly condescend to sneer—still enjoy sales far transcending those of the most popular writers of the day.

WRITE FOR ADVERTISING MATERIAL

"From the country department I was drafted into the counting-house, where for a time Mr. Akerman, of Messrs. Chapman & Hall (whose portrait appeared in a recent issue of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR), faced me at the desk. Then came the most momentous step in my career—the step on to 'the road,' a road in those days by no means so crowded as now. What a difference in London, too! At that time I was the only town representative of my firm and had a working radius of thirty miles. I have seen mile after mile of meadow land absorbed by the 'Great Wen' (as Cobbett called London), and green lanes have become busy commercial highways, necessitating the flattering attentions of three of my colleagues, while I devote my sole attention to Central London.

"In the personnel of the trade, too, one has seen many, many changes. One after another of the honoured standard-bearers has passed to well-earned retirement or to the great unseen. One thinks of Edward Bumpus, of Holborn, and his brother of Oxford Street; of Dunn, Stoneham and Field, of the City, and many besides who encouraged young travellers by kind words and deeds. It was a pleasure to hear only the other day of the continued good health in his retirement of a gentleman who was always ready to speak a cheery and heartening word. I refer to Mr. Glaisher, Senior, of Holborn.

"I have been associated with one house all my life. In that, too, there have been many changes; but the policy of courtesy and consideration, alike to customers and employés, upon which the business was built up has never changed. In my early days Messrs. Ward, George and John Lock, and Tyler were the principals. Their shrewdness, quickness to perceive and grasp favourable opportunities, and their sound literary judgment have certainly descended to the present directors, all sons of the late highly esteemed Mr. George Lock. It is a pleasure to me to bear witness to the unvarying consideration with which I have always been treated. Long as my association with the house has been, there are others who can boast of even longer service, and many whose term extends beyond a quarter of a century. But our motto is always 'Up-to-date,' and I believe I shall carry my customers with me in saying that we contrive to be as alert as most people."

Directory of Paper Makers

MESSRS. MARCHANT SINGER & CO., of 47, St. Mary Axe, London, E.C., send us a copy of the 1909 issue of the "Directory of Paper Makers" of the United Kingdom, which has been authentically revised to date. There is a new arrangement of the List of Trade Designations, which are now divided into Two Sections:—Section 1, Actual Watermarks; section 2, Trade Names (not being actual watermarks), thus greatly enhancing its value to printers stationers and paper buyers generally.

Annals of a Buried Welsh Town

ON the coast of Glamorgan, beneath a wild and lonely stretch of sand, lies buried the town of Kenfig—once a prosperous port, now long since covered up by the sand. Mr. Thomas Gray's book, "The Buried City of Kenfig," which will be published on April 26th by Mr. Unwin, is an attempt to snatch from the past, hidden in the mist of ages, something of the history of the place. Very little was known of the buried town until recently, when Miss Talbot of Margam, to the great joy of antiquaries, had the large collection of documents which belonged to Margam Abbey in her possession inspected and catalogued by Dr. de Gray Birch, F.S.A. It is in the light of these monastic documents that Mr. Gray's book has been chiefly compiled. He has gleaned the scattered aftermath of its annals, clothed anew with vitality the dry bones of its antiquity, and made the buried city rise again, as it were, from the sands with its castle, its church, its port, its long array of noble owners, its active populace, its shipping, and its commerce. The book has two maps and twenty-six illustrations, and Dr. de Gray Birch contributes a Preface.

Trade Change

MR. JAS. GOLDER Bookseller and Stationer, Reading, has moved to more convenient premises at 21, King Street, Reading.

A few Notes about Messrs. Ouseley's New Books

AMONG many important publications to be published shortly by Messrs. John Ouseley, Ltd., are the following :—

"The New Nation; or, Unified South Africa," by H. E. S. Fremantle, Member of the Cape Colony Parliament. This is an enquiry into the condition and prospects of South Africa. The eyes of the political world, both at home and in our Colonies, are directed towards the proposition of uniting the great Colonies of South Africa into one Commonwealth. Mr. H. E. S. Fremantle is perhaps the most qualified man of the present time to discuss such an important question of Empire, and he has, in "The New Nation," given us a clear view of the future of South Africa. An eminent British statesman has contributed an Introduction.

"Spero" (Miss Isabel Fraser Hunter) has written a new book, entitled "The Land of Regrets." This is a book of reminiscences by an Anglo-Indian writer. Miss Hunter has lived for many years in various parts of India owing to her family connections with the Army, and has met a considerable number of people whose names are household words, both in India and at home. The title of the book denotes our Eastern Continent, which few, after living in it for many years, can leave without regret.

A popular edition of the Rev. W. J. Dawson's "The Man Christ Jesus" has just been published. It was a great success when issued at 10s. 6d., and the publishers anticipate large sales in its cheaper form.

"Vain Tales from 'Vanity Fair,'" by Louise Heilgers, with preface by Frank Harris. It is only necessary to say that Miss Heilgers is the editor of Vanity Fair; there is likely to be a great demand for this work.

A humorous golfing book is "The Seven Stages of Golf," verses by Harold Simpson and pictures by G. E. Shepheard. The illustrations are done by an artist whose brilliant productions are the talk of the art world. It is an absolutely unique book, containing humorous full-page illustrations depicting extremely clever short golfing parodies of Shakespeare and other well-known works, done in full rich colours. No golf club library will be complete without this interesting and clever work, while all who have handled a club or even seen the game played will find the book intensely amusing.

"The Status of the Alien" is a new legal reference book by W. M. Davidson, M.A., M.Sc., D.C.L.

"Stage Sketches," by Rathmell Wilson, is one of the cheapest books on the market, and one of the most popular. The author is a well-known West-End actor, and he drives his shafts of fun with good humour. The book is crammed with full-page illustrations.

Booksellers should send for Messrs. Ouseley's new spring list; it contains full particulars of many more interesting books.

When William Shakespeare Wrote his Plays

METHINKS it was a merry scene,
This London Town of long ago;
The chaste Elizabeth was Queen
(Who caused her cousin's blood to flow);
The courtier sought his wit to show,
And voiced his artificial lays;
The Thames was mightier than the Po—
When William Shakespeare wrote his plays.

The lasses were alert, I ween,
In sparkled gaud and ribboned bow,
To greet the lads upon the green
And to the fiddle trip the toe;
Proud dames were wont the dice to throw:
Perchance the plotter got the praise;
The fawning friend was oft the foe—
When William Shakespeare wrote his plays.

The query of the world has been,
Was William's manner quick or slow?
His doubtful face, was it serene—
Or flushed with introspective glow?
Alack! of him we little k
And of that little most is haze,
Did other bards the palm bestow—

ENVOY

Ah, passing old shall England grow,
Ere such great poets walk her ways,
As in the stately times, I trow,
When William Shakespeare wrote his plays!

Books which Grow Fresher and Greater to Us

"ONE is often reminded of the change which seems to come over some books as the reader grows older. Many books are to one now what they always were; some, like the Waverley Novels and Shakespeare, grow better on every fresh reading. There are books which filled me, in boyhood or in youth, with a sort of admiring rapture, and a delighted wonder at their novelty, their strangeness, freshness, and greatness. Thus Homer, and the best novels of Thackeray, and of Fielding, the plays of Molière and of Shakespeare, the poems of—well, of all the real poets, moved this astonishment of admiration, and, being read again, they move it still."—From Andrew Lang's "Adventures Among Books."

Sad Fate of Mr. John Davidson, Author and Poet

ACCORDING to The Standard, the mystery of the disappearance of the poet and playwright, Mr. John Davidson, has now, apparently, become the mystery of his death, for there seems no longer to be any reason to doubt that, his mind unhinged by a great depression, the unhappy writer disappeared for the purpose of committing suicide.

The Standard's Penzance correspondent says, "It is now practically an established fact that Mr. John Davidson has committed suicide. On Friday, as Mr. Davidson's younger son was looking over some old manuscripts, he found a parcel addressed to his father's London agent, Mr. A. P. Watt, of Hastings House, and, without opening it, on his mother's suggestion, he sent it to Mr. Grant Richards, Mr. Davidson's London publisher. A letter has since been received by Mrs. Davidson from Mr. Grant Richards, the contents of which she has withheld from her son, but which have had the effect of completely prostrating her.

"I saw the son, Menzies Davidson, this afternoon, and he said that his mother's only answer to his inquiry as to what the letter contained was that he 'would know all on Monday.' The police have had no communication from Mr. Grant Richards as to the parcel of manuscript, but I understand that in the parcel was a letter in Mr. John Davidson's handwriting, intimating that he was about to commit suicide, and that his body would never be found."

Evidence of Mr. Grant Richards
The Idea of Suicide

In an interview with one of The Standard's representatives, Mr. Grant Richards said that Mr. Davidson's family and friends had reason to believe that the poet's fate was no longer uncertain, and that there was now no doubt that in a moment of acute depression he made an end to his own life.

"Those who were in his confidence knew, and have known for many years," said Mr. Richards, "that the idea of suicide was by no means strange to Mr. Davidson's mind. But they clung to the belief that he was still alive, owing to the fact that the work which he had set himself to do—the completion of his trilogy, 'God and Mammon,' and certain other work—was still unfinished, and no paper or message had been found in which he abandoned his intentions."

On August 14th last Mr. Davidson made his will, and on the following day he forwarded it to Mr. Grant Richards, with a letter stating that the packet containing the will was not to be opened until after his death. "I have made my will in duplicate," wrote Mr. Davidson, "and have appointed you my literary executor. One copy I send you herewith. Keep it safely until my death, to-morrow, or next day, or twenty years hence."

Remarkable Will
"I MAY HAVE TO DIE"

When Mr. Richards had no doubt that the poet was dead he opened the will. It is an extraordinary document, of which the following is an exact copy, supplied by Mr. Grant Richards:—

6, Coulson's Terrace, Penzance,
August 14th, 1908.

This is my first, last, and only will. It is holographic, the form I prefer; the law enforces the dispositions of any form of will if they are equitable.

I leave any money I may have at my death, and my life insurance, and the contents of my hired house, at present at 6, Coulson's Terrace, to my wife Margaret absolutely. Should my wife predecease me, any money I may have at my death, my life insurance, and the contents of my house are to be divided equally between my sons, Alexander and Menzies.

I leave also to my wife during her lifetime the copyright and dramatic rights in my books and plays, and all payments to the author's account from the sale or performance of these. Should my wife predecease my sons, any income from my books and plays is to be divided equally between my said sons, Alexander and Menzies, or their heirs.

As soon as it can be arranged, I desire the publication of all my books to be in the hands of Grant Richards, at present of 7, Carlton Street, Regent Street, London; and I desire A. P. Watt & Son, of Hastings House, Norfolk Street, Strand, London, to act as agents for all my books and plays upon their usual commission, accounting to my wife, and after her to my sons.

Down to this point the will, but for its reference to the fact that it is entirely in his own handwriting, is of quite an everyday character. But here it breaks into a curious strain, showing the original and unorthodox mind of the writer. It continues:—

"DESTROY MY PLAYS"

No word, except of my writing, is ever to appear in any book of mine as long as the copyright endures.

No one is to write my life now or at any time, but let all men study and discuss in private and in public my poems and plays, especially in my testaments and tragedies.

I have no objections (they would be unavailing) to the re-issue of anything that was published in my lifetime; but none of the following plays and adaptations is ever to be published or performed, and I earnestly beg those who possess copies to destroy them:—

"Queen Fiammetta."
"The Children of the King."
A one-act piece from the French, the title I forget; it was produced at the Court Theatre.
"Fanny Legrand."
"Phedre."
"Lancelot."
"The Game of Life."
Any sketch or scenario of a play.

And I also desire everything else unpublished of my writing, including all my letters, to be destroyed. This does not refer to my own testament, at present unpublished.

I hope to live to finish my testaments and tragedies; but I may have to die before, and at any moment now, for reasons that concern myself alone. I desire this will to be published as soon as I am dead.

JOHN DAVIDSON.

I have made two copies. One I have sent to Grant Richards, the other I have placed in my desk with my wife's name on the cover. It is not likely that either will go astray; but the production of one copy is to be sufficient.

JOHN DAVIDSON.

Extraordinary Preface.

Among the documents found in Mr. Davidson's house on Friday were the manuscript for a new volume, "Fleet Street and Other Poems," and a letter, in which it is stated: "This will be my last book."

The preface to the book contained the following passage:—

> "The time has come to make an end. There are several motives. I find my pension is not enough; I have therefore to turn aside and attempt things for which people will pay. My health also counts. Asthma and other annoyances I have tolerated for years, but I cannot put up with cancer."

Mr. Grant Richards is still without news of how the poet met his death. "The statement that he died by drowning is without foundation," he said. "Nothing is known as to how Mr. Davidson met his death."

New Music

MESSRS. NOVELLO & CO. (160, Wardour Street, W.) send us a further selection of new music. Two Original Compositions for the Organ, Nos. 390 and 391; three Preludes by J. E. West, and Duettino in G, by E. Newton; also No. 30 of the Recital Series of Original Compositions for the Organ. The Curfew, by E. J. Horsman.

For the Violin—a Sonata in D major by Rd. Jones, being No. 7 of Old English Violin Music, edited by Alfred Moffat. A Modern School for the Violin, Book 6 B, by Aug. Wilhelmj and Jas. Brown. For Piano and Stringed Instruments—Seven Scottish Airs, by Gustav von Holst, arranged as a quintet.

Twelve Dance Melodies in three books, arranged as pianoforte duets by Rd. Wickenhausser; a selection of attractive pieces. "Why?" a remarkably brief but pretty little composition for the piano, by Marguerite Marigold. This is after Schumann's "Warum." Allegretto, composed by W. Wolstenholme, is arranged as a piano solo by the composer.

Six Songs for Contralto, by N. Hodgkinson, carefully selected and quite suitable. Six Part Songs for Soprano, Alto, Tenor and Bass, composed by John S. Moorat. "Auf Wiederschen," composed by H. Brewer, for violoncello and piano and for viola and piano.

In Novello's Music and Educational Series there is A Supplement to Transposition (Keyboard and Orchestral) by Dr. John Warriner, Mus. D. Trinity College, Dublin. The Skeleton in Armour (a Symphonic Poem by Longfellow), for chorus and orchestra, by Rutland Boughton; also a Selection of Songs for Trios and Quartets.

The Finsbury Library

THE first six volumes of "The Finsbury Library" (Robert Culley) will be published next week, and a complete list of volumes in preparation will be issued shortly. It is intended that this new Shilling Series shall cover a wide field of popular and entertaining literature. The first six volumes will be: "Four Thousand Miles Across Siberia," by C. Wenyon, M.D.; "Through Two Campaigns," by A. H. Male; "Wesley's Veterans" (Vol. 1), edited by J. Telford, B.A.; "Wesley's Veterans" (Vol. 2), edited by J. Telford, B.A.; "The Great Chinese Awakening," by A. R. Kelley, and "Wesley's Journal" (abridged). Later volumes will be Dante's "Inferno," Dante's "Purgatorio," Dante's "Paradiso," translated by J. W. Thomas; Cobbett's "Rural Rides"; and "The Early Journal of Charles Wesley," edited by J. Telford, B.A.

Publishers' Exhibition at the N.U.T. Annual Conference

THE Publishers' Exhibition in the Pavilion on the Central Pier at Morecambe on the occasion of the Annual Conference of the N.U.T. last week was thoroughly representative, about one hundred publishers having exhibits. We are indebted to The Schoolmaster for the loan of a block showing the publishers' representatives, and may mention that a complete report of the Conference was given in The Schoolmaster for April 17th.

"The English in China"

THE early history of our commercial intercourse with the Chinese is very little known, but it is obvious that if we would understand the questions arising out of our present relations a knowledge of the antecedent events is all important. Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., will publish on the 27th "The English in China," a work by Mr. J. Bromley Eames, formerly Professor of Law in the Imperial Tientsin University, and Legal Adviser to the Tientsin Provisional Government of 1900–1902. To give the book its sub-title, it is "An account of the intercourse and relations between England and China from the year 1600 to the year 1843, and a summary of later developments." Thus the main idea of the book is to treat very fully the history of the establishment of British interests in China to the middle of last century, while the intervening events are rapidly but consecutively surveyed. A feature of especial interest is the verbatim reproduction of Chinese edicts and other documents, which are usually shown only in the distorting medium of paraphrases.

Sales of Rare Books

THE catalogue which Messrs. Hodgson have recently issued of their sale next week comprises many unusually interesting items in the way of rare books and MSS. The first day's sale, on the 29th instant, is chiefly an extensive collection of old books relating to America, to which are added about 130 "lots" of valuable books selected from the library of a nobleman, including some large folio books of engravings, and a few albums of original water-colour drawings. The second day's sale comprises a selection of rare books from the library of the late T. C. Blofeld, Esq., who was formerly Recorder of Ipswich and Chancellor of the Diocese of Norwich. Many of these books bear inscriptions or autographs of former owners, the most interesting being a copy of Dickenson's "Speculum Tradgicum," 1603, on the flyleaf of which is a contemporary MS. note to the effect that the volume was given to John Mason from the library of John Rainolds in 1607. It seems quite probable that this John Mason was the founder of New Hampshire, who was born at King's Lynn in Norfolk, and who went up to Oxford in 1602. Moreover it is quite clear that the volume was left under the terms of Rainolds' will, which directed that the residue of his books should be presented to deserving students in the University of Oxford. There are also several interesting old MSS, including a Fourteenth Century "Liber Customarum" (London) and another of economic and naval interest, entitled "Great Brittaine's Treasure," left in manuscript by Sir Nicholas Halse in 1636, which has apparently never been printed, though there is a unique presentation copy to Charles I. in the British Museum. We give the entry appearing in the catalogue :—

457 Halse (Sir N.)—Great Brittaine's Treasure Environing this famous Isle with brazen walls invincible, maintayned with great gaine, by forces invincible. Unto the Sacred Matie of the great and mightie Monarch CHARLES the first of England, France, and Ireland . . . . presenteth Francis Stewart [H ?], Eldest Sonne to the late Earle Bothwell. By whose Loyall care . . . . the subsequent Treatises have been recovered . . . . out of the old papers of that worthy and lately deceased Knight, Youre Mats. Faithfull, and ingenuous Servant Sir Nicolas Halse, A.D. 1636, carefully written on 82 leaves, sm. 8vo, ruled in red, contemporary English black morocco, g.e. [ca. 1640.]

¶¶ An interesting volume, and possibly a presentation copy. The work deals in five treatises with various financial and "oeconomick" schemes. The first discusses the advantages to be gained—inter alia "Fourty Hundred thousand pounds"—by granting a lease of 21 years to the "Hollander" of "your Majesties British ffishings," while the third sets forth a plan for "upholding and maintenance of your Royall Navy." The fourth Treatise is of particular interest on account of the many references to the New Plantations, wherein a scheme is outlined for coining "Mundick and Silver Tin" for currency in the New Plantations, and the supply of "fifty sayle of warlike shippes of great burthen to be built by the woods of your Majesties New Plantations." In the latter connection, the following quotation, is apposite in view of recent events. "And your Matys Royal Navy being thus employed [i.e., in voyaging to the American Settlements] will add such strength to oour Mats. forces by Sea, as

It may be added that Sir Nicholas Halse (d. 1636) was the inventor of a new method of malting (dealt with in the fifth treatise) and he left the above work in Manuscript. There is a copy in the Egerton Collection of MSS. and the present example bears on the fly-leaf "Bibliothecæ Nainbyanæ."

If Your Majesty approve of this Service, then it is necessary that great Ordnance may be cast (if Your Majesty please) for the furnishing of these shipps and the better supporting of the Service.

The same day's sale also includes original water-colour drawings and engravings from the same collection, the former comprising a number of very pleasing water-colours by an apparently unknown artist, J. Skelton, most of which were executed in or about 1760. To this day's sale are also added a number of rare books from other sources, including a Fourteenth Century "Horæ" on vellum with miniatures, a remarkably fine copy of the 1482, "Editio Princeps of Euclid," several books in fine modern bindings, a copy of the "Houghton Gallery," a set of the first editions of the Waverley Novels, and a copy of the excessively rare little play by John Barrow, entitled "King Glumpus," which is of such interest to Thackeray collectors on account of the illustrations. From the several announcements which appear in our columns it is evident that Messrs. Hodgson's rooms will be well attended during the next two months.

Sheffield Book Notes

BY THE "DON"

MISS FLORENCE PARBURY, authoress of "The Emerald Set with Pearls" (Simpkin; 21s. net), is a Sheffield lady and a member of a well-known Sheffield family. Miss Parbury has travelled much in the East, and the present volume contains an account of her experiences during a visit to Kashmir, which she paid in company with her mother. The two ladies had some interesting adventures, and the authoress describes the life and customs of the country with much vividness. A feature of the book is a series of excellent illustrations reproduced from water-colour sketches by the authoress.

The visit of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to open the new library at the Sheffield University is being looked forward to with deep interest by educationalists. The new building will provide accommodation for 124,000 volumes and the library now contains 24,000 volumes. Many of the books are gifts by friends of the local University movement, and it is hoped that the number will be swelled by additions from the same source. Some valuable gifts will probably come forward as the result of the opening ceremony.

The firm of John Walsh, Ltd., who run a large store establishment in High Street, announce an extension of their circulating library department. They have taken up the system recently abandoned by Boots, Ltd., whereby readers can deposit half-a-crown as security and borrow a book at 2d. per week, and appointed a librarian. The ordinary subscription is 7s. 6d. per annum for one volume, 12s. 6d. for two, 16s. 6d. for three, and 21s. for four. The firm state that by arrangement with Mudies and the leading publishers they are able to greatly augment the number of books in circulation.

The agitation among book lovers for the provision of a central library and reading room which will do credit to the city, proceeds; but while the authorities are thoroughly ashamed of the existing facilities and recognise that something ought to be done to improve matters, they are deterred from embarking upon expenses which are not absolutely necessary by the upward tendency of the rates. Probably no large town in England possesses such a dingy and inconvenient central library as Sheffield. People of refinement will not enter the building, and the reading facilities are consequently not taken full advantage of.

The advent of spring and the improved weather have caused a run on tourist and guide books; but this branch of trade has suffered by the vast amount of information which is now gratuitously circulated by railway companies and the governing bodies of innumerable health and holiday resorts in Great Britain. Business is still flat in the more expensive books, the trade of the city having undergone no improvement.

For a good many years Mr. Edward Carpenter, the poet and philosopher, has made his home in the Cordwell Valley (a pleasant woodland and pastoral spot about six miles from Sheffield), and his figure is familiar to Sheffield people. Mr. Carpenter lives the simple life, taking great delight in the cultivation of fruit and vegetables, and does much of the work of the garden with his own hands. A near neighbour is Mr. G. Murray Gilchrist, author of novels dealing with Derbyshire life, who obtains his local "colour" from the district. Several journalists and people of literary taste also favour this beautiful valley. Mr. Carpenter has lately been subjected to newspaper criticism on the ground that some of his writings are not conducive to good morals. The fact is, Mr. Carpenter holds some extremely advanced views on the sex and marriage question, as he does on social and political subjects, and some of his writings are not intended for general circulation. During his long residence in the neighbourhood of Sheffield Mr. Carpenter has won the regard of many people, not excepting those who are quite out of sympathy with his beliefs and teaching. No amount of criticism will lower their personal esteem of him as a kind-hearted gentleman of unblemished life and character.

An action commenced by the proprietors of the Ironmonger against a rival trade journal known as the Hardware Trade Journal for infringement of copyright has been withdrawn on the defendants paying £50 damages, full costs, and publishing ample apologies. The defendants (Benn Brothers) recently published what was described as an Encyclopædia of Hardware, and it was complained that this volume contained a quantity of tables, technical articles, &c., which had been "lifted" from various copyright publications of the Ironmonger.

BATH

"The English Jerusalem" is the title of a historical guide to Glastonbury, which Mr. George Gregory, of Argyle Street, is just about to publish. Its object is not so much to give a dry bone for archæologists to mumble, as to help ordinary English people to learn some of the beauty and romance of that land of noble dreams. So far from dismissing with a short sneer the traditions of 70 generations, the author is bold enough to stand for the defence. St. Joseph, St. Patrick, King Arthur, St. Dunstan, St. Alfege, the Holy Graal, the Spine from the Crown of Thorns, the mystery and romance which has filled England with poetry, these names are not accounted as expressions for light and lying legends. If anyone is dealt hardly with it is the scornful detractors, who think that monks long dead are fair butts for random slanders. The author is unable to accept Dom Gasquet's verdicts upon the last Abbot, but rather reverses these. Consequently the book is likely to create some opposition. The writer is the Curate of Hambridge, near Taunton, the first discoverer and literary editor of the now famous Folk-Songs from Somerset.

Mr. Gregory will also publish shortly a pamphlet by the Rev. P. E. O'B. Methuen, M.A., on "The Education Question, or Why not be Just?"

BLACKPOOL

James Ainsworth, bookseller, Bank Hey Street, was summoned at Blackpool to show cause why 18 copies of the book called "The Yoke" should not be destroyed. The defendant did not appear, and the Chief Constable explained that last night Ainsworth called at the police station and stated that he was perfectly willing for the police to do anything they liked with the books, and he would pay all the costs.

Supt. Derham stated that yesterday morning, in company with Detective-Sergeant Leeson, he visited Ainsworth's shop. There was a lady assistant, aged 21, in the shop, to whom he explained that he held a warrant to search the premises for a book called "The Yoke." She replied that they had only a few left, and she produced 17 from a shelf in the shop. There was also another produced, which bore a ticket marked 1s. 6d., whereas the published price was 1s. When witness was leaving the shop, Ainsworth entered, and said to him that he had found one more than he thought he had. Witness told Ainsworth that he must be at the Police Court in the morning.

The Magistrates' Clerk: This work has been suppressed in London?—Yes.

CROYDON

At the Borough Bench on Monday, before Mr. F. Link (in the chair), Alderman J. Trumble, Alderman D. B. Miller, and Councillor T. Betteridge, Henry Piggot Corbutt, of 21, Clowdesley Street, Islington, was charged on remand with stealing from the Thornton Heath Public Library, a book, the property of the Corporation, and with stealing two books from the Central Reference Library, the property of the Corporation.

John Warner, 98, Holmesdale Road, an assistant at the library, said in consequence of the letter received from Mr. Tutenberg he went to his residence and saw three books. Some of the stamps were obliterated. One book, "Ye Parish of Camberwell," he could not identify, as the stamps had been removed and the label also. They had one similar to it in the library and they had missed it.

The other case was completed on the last occasion.

DONCASTER

Presentation to Mr. T. W. Turner, late Manager of Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son, Railway Bookstall, Doncaster. On Tuesday, April 6th, at the Angel Hotel, Doncaster, a very interesting event took place—an event which is as uncommon as it is rare, for few men can boast of a service of 45 years to one firm, 37 years of which had been spent at the Bookstall, Doncaster Station. Because of this the townspeople came together in goodly numbers to do honour to the man, and celebrate the occasion. Thus to mark the time of his retirement no less than £113 16s. 6d. was presented to him together with an illuminated address, subscribed to by ladies and gentlemen from all over the county. To the testimonial fund Mr. F. H. Buckland acted as Secretary, and Mr. W. H. Lindsey, Station Master, performed the duties of Treasurer. Councillor J. Franks, J.P., presided, and made the presentation. There was a large number present, which included many of the influential Doncaster residents, including Councillors G. Smith, J.P., J. T. Spencer, N. Gyles, G. T. Tuby, P. Stirling, W. C. Wright, Mr. F. H. Buckland, Mr. W. H. Lindsey, and Mr. R. Martin, the new Bookstall Manager. Letters of apology for inability to be present were read from Sir Frederick Fison, Bt., Hon. H. W. Fitzwilliam, the Provost of Dunblane, and others. Mr. Lindsey in a very fitting little speech said he had never experienced such little difficulty in obtaining subscriptions to a testimonial—the money had been given quite voluntarily and spontaneously, ranging from £5 5s. to 1s.

Mr. Franks in making the presentation remarked that nothing could have given him greater pleasure than to be honoured by standing in the position he was that night, he had known Mr. Turner for over a quarter of a century, and had no hesitation in saying that during the whole of that period he had always met Mr. Turner in the most kindly way. They must not forget also what splendid service Mr. Turner had rendered to others, having collected no less than £1,500 at various times on behalf of deserving objects, therefore it gave him the greatest pleasure to hand Mr. Turner a purse of gold, also the illuminated address, and he hoped Mr. Turner's sons would look back upon it and say, "Well done, father, we will endeavour to follow in your footsteps." (Applause.)

Mr. Turner suitably replied, and said it placed him in both an enviable position and an unenviable one; enviable because he had received such handsome gifts, and unenviable because he did not know how to reply to such eulogistic remarks, but he wished to tender to all his heartfelt thanks.

HULL

Messrs. William Cussons, Ltd., Beverley Road, who have a great many branch shops in the city, have signed the Net Book Agreement.

One of the best local books which has appeared for some time, is "The Cliff End," by Booth. The scene is laid at Aldbro, a small village on the coast between Hornsea and Withernsea, which, has suffered considerably by the encroachment of sea. The illustrated edition of Mr. Booth's book sold well as a Christmas gift last December.

"Oh Christina!" by author of "Wee Macgregor," is going well amongst the shilling books just now.

LEEDS

The book trade here during the week just passed has been quiet and featureless. The recent death of Mr. Swinburne has overshadowed everything else in the book world, and has given cause for many inquiries after his works. How his death will affect the market in first editions of his Poems remains to be seen.

I take this cutting from the Yorkshire Evening Post of last Saturday:—

SWINBURNE'S TRIBUTE TO A LEEDS POET

It is not generally known that a sonnet, written by Swinburne, appears on a tombstone in Adel Churchyard, near Leeds. The monument is erected to the memory of Mr. J. W. Inchbold, the Leeds Poet-painter. Twenty or thirty years ago Mr. Swinburne and Mr. Inchbold were close friends, and might frequently have been seen together in the streets of Leeds. The eight-line stanza, which bears the inscription, "A. C. Swinburne," is as follows:—

If far beyond the shadow of the sleep
A place there be for souls without a stain;
Where peace is perfect and delight more deep
Than seas or skies that change and shine again.
There, none of all unsullied souls that live
May hold a surer station, none may lend
More light to Hope or Memory's lamp, nor give More joys than Thine to those that called Thee Friend.

A new edition of Colonel Moore's well known treatise on "Sanitary Engineering" revised and in part re-written by Mr. E. J. Silcock of Leeds, has just been issued in two handsome volumes at £2 2s.

Mr. Samuel Waddington, the Poet, whose biography was published this week, was born at Boston Spa, near Leeds, in 1844.

NORWICH

The annual dinner of the Norwich Newsagents' Union at the Criterion Restaurant on April 15th, was made the occasion of a very pleasant gathering, there being a full muster of members, whilst ladies and friends of members were also present. Following dinner an admirable programme of vocal and instrumental music was gone through, contributors to the harmony being Mrs. Loades, Messrs. Basted (pianist), Fuller, S. Turner, Taylor, E. Olley, Roberts, Chilvers, and Mendham. The President (Mr. W. R. Sillett) was in the chair, and amongst those present were Messrs. Arthur Spurgeon (Cassell & Co.), A. Cozens-Hardy, Herbert Jarrold, R. W. Nockolds, R. J. Brett (Vice-President), J. J. Rice, E. Chambers, F. Easton (Secretary), J. Loades, W. Tyrrell, J. Mann, A. Mann, W. L. Mendham, A. Jenkinson, A. H. Roberts, F. Smith, W. E. Walmsley, W. T. Denmark, J. Watson, H. Walker, E. Ellis, and H. Wells. Mr. Spurgeon responded to the toast of "The Publishers," with which was coupled the names of Mr. A. Spurgeon, Mr. A. Cozens-Hardy, and Mr. Jarrold.—Eastern Daily Press.

OXFORD

Messrs. Alden & Co., Ltd., of the Bocardo Press, will publish early in May, through Messrs. Simpkin & Co., a new work entitled "Indian Dust," by Mr. Otto Rothfeld, F.R.G.S., of the Indian Civil Service. The book consists of stories of modern Indian life, as lived by the natives of India. Mostly they deal with that part of the country inhabited by wild forest tribes and ruled by independent Rajput chiefs under what can almost be described as a feudal system. While thus surrounded by a picturesque and romantic atmosphere, their aim is frankly realistic—to portray the lives, the crimes, and the loves of natives of India as they are. One of the stories is concerned with the effects of political agitation on the mind of a student. Mr. Rothfeld is already well known in India for his knowledge of native languages, and for his broadness of sympathy with native life.

WINCHESTER

Messrs. Warren & Son have just published a fine book on "The Church Plate of Hampshire." It is edited by the Rev. P. R. P. Braithwaite, Canon of Winchester Cathedral, and contains 25 photogravures and 42 half-tone illustrations. Only 300 copies have been printed.

Cassell's Academy Pictures

A SPLENDID pictorial record of the Royal Academy pictures and sculpture for 1909 will be issued by Messrs. Cassell on May 3rd. "Royal Academy Pictures and Sculpture" is undoubtedly a most representative and sumptuous record of the Royal Academy exhibits. The pictures are reproduced on a scale sufficiently large to give due effect to every detail, and the work contains many reproductions of notable works of art which appear in no other publication. A beautiful Rembrandt photogravure, "Flowers of June," by Frank Dicksee, R.A., will be presented with the volume. The work will be published in one complete volume, paper covers, 3s. net, on May 3rd, and in cloth, 5s. net, on May 7th. Also in five parts, price 7d. net each. Part 1 ready May 3rd.

"Moral Education in Eighteen Counties"

UNDER the title of "Moral Education in Eighteen Countries," Mr. Gustav Spiller, the organiser of the recent International Moral Education Congress, has compiled a remarkable work, which supplies, from first-hand sources, detailed information concerning the action or inaction of the various Governments and the leading educational authorities in promoting moral education in the national schools. Particulars are also given of the moral teaching contained in the religious manuals (Protestant, Catholic, Jewish, &c.) of all the principal countries; and a bibliography is appended containing no less than 750 items. The work, which is being published this week by Messrs. Watts, is addressed to all those engaged, or specially interested, in the education of our youth.

Specimen Copies.—We shall be pleased to send free of charge a few specimen copies of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR to any who will apply for same and distribute them to the best advantage. Send a postcard to Manager, PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR Office 19, Adam Street, Adelphi, London, W.C.

The New American Tariff Bill and the Book Trade

OUR American contemporary The Publishers' Weekly, in its issue of April 10th, gives a list of the items relating to books and book materials imported from England, &c., which are to be taxed "to provide revenue, equalise duties, and encourage the industries of the United States" if Mr. Payne's Tariff Bill becomes U.S. Law. Our contemporary also has the following remarks on the Bill:

"The Tariff Bill as reported from the Ways and Means Committee affects the book trade less than might have been expected. The duty on books remains at 25 per cent., and the duty on children's books printed by lithographic process at 8 c. per pound. The book trade is not to any extent affected by the freeing of wood pulp and the reduction of duty on the lower grades of wood pulp papers, for these changes are confined to papers suitable only for newspapers, in response to the demand from the daily press, and do not cover or affect papers good enough to be used in the manufacture of books, or even in weekly and monthly periodicals. As to changes in the materials used in the manufacture of books, either there are none or they are not substantial. The most important perhaps is that—in the general reduction of the leather schedule following the freeing of hides from duty—book leathers are reduced 5 per cent. (from 10 to 5 per cent. ad valorem); but, of course, the effect of this is confined chiefly to the binding of individual volumes, outside of law books and the few general books in leather-bound editions.

It will be recalled that the United Typothetæ in an argument before the Ways and Means Committee put forward an absurd suggestion that the duty on books should be increased to 75 per cent. This was quite wisely ignored by the Ways and Means Committee. On the other hand, it has been understood that in the Senate, where the real fight on tariff revision will be, and where the form of the new tariff may be substantially decided, there has been some tendency to put books on the free list without providing for a reduction on the materials of book manufacture. As it is, books over twenty years old, as well as books in foreign languages, remain on the free list, and the duty is confined to English books of current or recent production. Under the new Bill works of art more than twenty years old are also to be placed on the free list. The argument for 'free art' is sometimes mistakenly understood to extend to 'free books.' The reason that there is no valid argument, except precedent or revenue, against 'free art,' is that the materials of a picture or other work of art cost so little as to be absolutely negligible, and the only producers, the artists, are the chief advocates of free art. On the other hand, the materials of book manufacture are substantially, and, indeed, excessively taxed, and to free books from duty without freeing or reducing the materials of book manufacture would be unsound economics and topsy-turvy policy.

It has been suggested that the requirement in the copyright law that books should be manufactured in this country to secure copyright, would confine the importation of free books to non-copyright books. It has been held throughout the copyright discussion by all upholding the principle of copyright that tariff protection has no place in a copyright Act, but the effect of the tariff change indicated would have a boomerang effect on copyright. If an English publisher could send into this market large editions of a new popular book without payment of duty, while the American publisher would be handicapped with the higher costs incident to the present tariff, the English author and publisher might agree to refrain from copyrighting such books and control the market by virtue of the conflicting provisions of the copyright and the tariff Acts, thus combined against the American publisher. This argument has not been without its effect, and it is now improbable that any such change will receive important support in the Senate.

Thus houses in the trade whose business is chiefly importation would, of course, be glad to see a reduction or abolition of the duty on books, and this is especially true as to the children's books printed by lithographic process now under specific duty of 8 c. per pound. The duty has been almost prohibitive of the importation of the products of certain foreign publishers and has added substantially to the price of this kind of literature. This specific duty is understood to be equivalent roughly to about thirty per cent. ad valorem on lithograph children's books, and could probably be reduced to good purpose, were it not for the endeavour of the lithographers to maintain or increase tariff duties on lithographic material. The lithographers and the post-card manufacturers together have been successful in obtaining from the Committee on Ways and Means the enormous increase on the duty on post-cards, which was raised from twenty-five per cent. to five cents. per pound and forty-five per cent. ad valorem.

The passage of the current Bill in the House in substantially its present shape is practically assured, and interest will presently centre in the contest in the Senate, where amendments will be more freely offered and discussed, and where what may prove practically a substitute Bill may be adopted, with the result that, as in many cases before, the fate of this important measure in general and detail will be determined through legislation in Conference Committee.

Printers' Pension Corporation

THE Council of the Printers' Pension Corporation beg to notify the friends of the Institution that, owing to the great demand for seats at the forthcoming Festival under the presidency of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, applications for tickets should be received as early as possible, to avoid disappointment.

THE NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION

DEAR SIR,—Will you please be so good as to announce that His Excellency the Chinese Minister has kindly consented to preside at the Seventieth Anniversary Festival in aid of the funds of the Newsvendors' Institution, to be held in London next November.—I am, Dear Sir, Faithfully your Servant,

W. WILKIE JONES,
Secretary.

EDUCATIONAL BOOKSELLER WANTS SCHOOL BOOKS MADE "NET"

DEAR SIR,—A few months ago, two well-known publishers issued a circular to all educational booksellers, stating that after a certain date school books would only be supplied 25 as 24.

The trade, for once, protested, with the result that the regulation was withdrawn.

It does not, however, seem to have occurred to the trade that the two largest educational publishers have never supplied their educational books except on the terms they have protested against, namely, 25 as 24.

Why do we not combine and approach them on the matter?

I think the time is now ripe for making school books "net." The publisher would make a better profit and the bookseller a living one.

It is impossible to do any educational trade without giving the 25 per cent., and after that is given, and carriage paid, there is not profit enough left to pay the ordinary working expenses.

There is only one objector to net school books, and that is the schoolmaster.

He now charges the parents full price and pockets the discount. It is full time the trade realised this, and they could make the publisher realise it too if they would combine and make a united appeal.

The publishers, of course, must all work together, and I rather fancy that is the rub. The educational branch of a bookseller's business should be a profitable one; under present conditions it is the extreme reverse.—I am,

Yours faithfully,
EDUCATIONAL BOOKSELLER.

LIBRARIES WHICH SUPPLY THE TRADE

DEAR SIR,—Can you, or any of your readers, give me the names and addresses of Libraries supplying the trade, other than Miles, Mudie, and W. H. Smith & Son? Any information on the subject will be welcome.

Yours faithfully,
J. COWING,
Barnet. Bookseller.

ANOTHER HOWLER

SIR,—Another "howler," this time perpetrated by Mr. W. Pugin Thornton, critic of a critic of a critic. He speaks of "a correspondent to the Daily Mail." In what respect, may I ask, does this correspondent of the Daily Mail correspond "to" the Daily Mail? What is the resemblance?—Respectfully,

EDWIN C. WALKER.
Publisher and Bookseller.
New York.

BOOKS WHICH WERE NEVER PUBLISHED WHICH ARE OFTEN ASKED FOR

SIR,—In your "Books Wanted" section I constantly see Lytton's Dramatic Works Vol. 2, Knebworth Edition. This volume was never issued, nor was the second volume of Gillman's Life of S. T. Coleridge, which appears periodically among "Wants." The first volume was published in 1838, and will never have a successor.—Yours faithfully, OLD BOOKSELLER.

Messrs. Witherby & Co. have in the press "A History of the Birds of Kent," by Dr. Norman F. Ticehurst, the well-known ornithologist, with plates of birds and their haunts, and a large map. The edition will be limited.

MENTION THE "P.C."—Our readers who order books, &c., they see mentioned or advertised in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. H. R. Allenson, Ltd.—"The Mystery of Pain," a Book for the Sorrowful, by James Hinton. Presumably there are sufficient readers of the English language who rank amongst the sorrowful to make the book carry its monetary reward. Its chapters are—The Problem of Pain, The Discipline of Pain, and so on, ending with one on The Profit of Pain, which, putting on one side the monetary reward, help to bring solace to sufferers. We recommend this booklet to those it is intended for.

From Messrs. Bagster & Sons, Ltd.—Two recent additions to Bagster's Sixpenny Series are "The Loveliness of Christ" and "The Wisdom of Solomon" from "The Apocrypha." These are done in cloth, in paste grain gilt top, and in velvet Persian Yapped gilt top. We have already referred in terms of praise to this little series.

From Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd.—"Faith, its Nature and Work," by Dr. Handley Moule, Bishop of Durham. The Bishop makes no pretension to rival his great predecessors, Butler, Lightfoot or Westcott, in scholarship or learned research; but this little book, like all that he has written, is inspired by Scriptural power and practical earnestness. On Faith in its relation to the Bible, the Sacraments, to difficulties and doubts, it has much to say that will comfort the believer.

From Messrs. W. H. & L. Collingridge.—"Lawns and Greens: their Formation and Management," by T. W. Sanders, F.L.S., F.R.H.S., Knight of the First Class of the Royal Order of Wasa, Sweden. A reviewer has only to note that his book is by the editor of Amateur Gardening and his work should be done. If he peruse Mr. Sanders' 134 pages, he will see how correct his assumption has been. "Lawns and Greens" should go through many editions. It is exceedingly well illustrated, some of the garden scenes being quite "pictures."

From The Connoisseur's Press, Jersey City.—"Betelguese," by Jean Louis De Esque. The sub-title is "A Trip through Hell," and the style of verse and vocabulary used are certainly appropriate. We select the following words from p. 57: skink, spastic, skelp, gomes, winzes, syrt. The succeeding lines are typical of the author's charming muse!

> "Where restless hawks and chainless ghouls
> Blink bleary orbs at dust and stone;
> And glozing night-gnomes love the sight
> That geysers toss upon their crest,
> Fear afrites bathe in a pool
> And wash each harlot's bloody bone."

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—A real addition has been made to this firm's choice pocket series, "Les Classiques Francais," by the inclusion of Victor Hugo's "Poèmes" (1822–65). The little book contains a portrait of the poet, and a special preface contributed by Mons. L. Aguettant.

From the Same.—"Nora and the Shepherd, and other Poems," by R. G. D. Frampton. The varied poems which form the contents of this first promising volume prove their author to possess the needed imagination to become "Nature's cherished amanuensis." The book is one to which we can honestly invite attention, if only for such portions as "The Shepherd Alone," and

"Rambles with a Child," both of which display a sincere poetic expression in combination with a tender human sympathy finely and seriously uttered.

From Messrs. Digby, Long & Co.—"The Dexter Entanglement," by Mr. G. W. Appleton. A bewildering story of the return of Mr. Thomas Dexter, an Australian millionaire, after twenty-five years' absence from England. He visits his sister, and finds there a charming niece to whom he bequeaths £100,000; but then, taking a dislike to her sweetheart, Dick Capper, imposes the condition that she must give up either Dick or the legacy. Complications follow, till it comes out that the whole thing is a practical joke of a friend of "the real Simon Pure Thomas Dexter," and the latter comes over on purpose to put things right and attend his niece's wedding. Treat the improbabilities with leniency, and you may derive much amusement from this story.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—"A History of Art," by Dr. G. Carotti. Vol. 11, revised by Mrs. S. Arthur Strong, Litt.D., LL.D., and translated by Beryl de Zoete, deals with Early Christian and Neo-Oriental Art, and European Art North of the Alps. There are no less than 360 illustrations. The value of the work consists in the panoramic view it gives of long periods of artistic production; the author is able to take large outline surveys and impress them on the mind of the reader. Master of detail, he is also a master of general tendencies and effects, and few writers are so fitted as he to indicate directions of development and retrogression.

From Mr. Henry Frowde.—"The Complete Poetical Works of Edgar Allan Poe, with Three Essays on Poetry." We welcome this author of "distinction and genius" among those whose names appear in the "Oxford Library of Prose and Poetry" Series. A sympathetic prefatory memoir of the poet, by R. Brimley Johnson, the Editor, is affixed to the volume, which has a frontispiece portrait of Poe, also textual notes, and a bibliography.

From Messrs. Gale & Polden, Ltd.—"Catechism on Field Training," revised and edited by Lieut. Col. W. Plomer. This work in the Aldershot Military Series bears evidence of its value, being in the fourth edition. It is a happy means of conveying knowledge to the soldier, being arranged throughout in questions and answers. Take for example the commencement of the teaching of "Infantry in Attack and Defence" (p. 4). Q.: "Why can fixed rules not be laid down beforehand for movements before an enemy?" A.: "Because these vary according to the circumstances of each situation which may arise." The 38 plates at the end of the book are perfect, satisfying every requirement.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—"The Scribblers' Club," by Charles Garvice. The humorous vein in which these memos of the Scribblers' Club, which the author admits exists only in his imagination, are written is continued throughout the book until the concluding chapter. This chapter is somewhat pathetic, adding a charm to the book, and making an impression upon the memory which would not otherwise have been produced.

From the Same.—"The Future Leadership of the Church," by the Rev. J. R. Mott. Mr. Mott, who is the General Secretary of the Student Christian Federation, deals in this book with the important and pressing question of the Christian ministry. It appears that the decrease in the supply of fit candidates for the ministry is not peculiar to the Church of England; but is causing equal anxiety in America, Germany, and elsewhere. Mr. Mott shows that to secure a sufficient supply of able clergy is of vital importance to the future of Christianity itself. He deals with the problem on broad lines, and offers valuable suggestions based on very wide enquiry and many years' experience.

From the Same.—"Easter in the Heart." A truly delightful booklet both for young and old, containing a varied number of devotional passages and verses, adorned with pictured reproductions in colour in perfect harmony with the text. It will prove to many a permanent "joy and consolation."

From the Same.—"The Gospel according to St. John," by the Rev. Campbell Morgan, D.D. Dr. Morgan having completed in three volumes his "General Review of the Bible," now enters upon an exhaustive analysis of the contents and message of each book. The Gospel above named lends itself better perhaps to this mode of treatment than some others which bear a less evident stamp of unity of authorship and plan; and Dr. Morgan's analysis of the Gospel, with his illuminative commentary is very helpful in making clear the purpose and methods of the inspired writer.

From The Magazine Syndicate, Southport.—"Tale-Writing for Money," by R. A. H. Goodyear, formerly a publisher's reader. "I had a heart (a foolish thing for a publisher's reader to possess, but there it was), and it daily bled to the point of exhaustion for the poor, misguided people who were wasting time on stories which, except by some Arabian-Night-like miracle, could never see the light of day." For the guidance of these deluded people, we presume, Mr. Goodyear has compiled this little pamphlet, and although it cannot, of course, give much help in the actual writing of stories, it will give the novice a better chance of doing himself justice, and may possibly save him the humility of having all his attempts returned with thanks.

From Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd.—"A Dickens Dictionary," by Alex. J. Philip, being the characters and scenes of the novels and miscellaneous works alphabetically arranged. A most useful publication for all lovers of Dickens, it will suffice to give as an example one entry selected at random:

STUMPS: Bill, A Labouring Man—Pickwick Papers XI. The man who was reported to have said he was responsible for the letters on the famous stone.

Original. Founded on episode in "Memoirs of a Sad Dog," Chatterton. Has also been suggested as having been founded on Kit's Coty House, with which Dickens was well acquainted.

Mr. W. B. Matz, the Editor of The Dickensian, has also assisted with this publication, a further testimony to its utility.

From the Same.—"Carthen: a Tragedy in Three Acts," by Wm. Percival Cook. Mr. Cook's drama shows ability in the manipulation of the plot, but the blank verse is undistinguished and occasionally faulty. Neither the Britons nor the Caledonians live, for their stilted and uninspired speech speedily becomes tiresome.

From the Same.—"Speaking in Public," by Charles Seymour. Mr. Seymour is the author of "How to Speak Effectively," a book that has obtained a wide and deserved popularity. The present work is concerned with the production of ideas and the acquirement of fluency, and it goes into the subjects in a clear and scientific manner. The first part deals with the verbal expression of thought; following this are a number of exercises for ideas and fluency; the third part is concerned with the preparation and construction of speeches; whilst the concluding section is devoted to various subjects, such as the delivery of sermons, and records of ability in oratory.

From the Same.—"The Status of Women Under the English Law," by A. Beatrice Wallis Chapman, D.Sc., and Mary Wallis Chapman, B.A. A compendious epitome of legislative enactments and social and political events from 1066 to the present day, arranged as a continuous narrative with references to authorities and Acts of Parliament. It has been carefully prepared and lucidly arranged, and will prove of the greatest service for purposes of reference.

From the Same.—"A Book of Battles and Sieges." A volume in the Miniature Reference Library, containing a concise report of nearly 2,000 battles and sieges. These are nice little books, well-printed and produced.

From The University Tutorial Press, Ltd.—"Technical Electricity," by H. T. Davidge, B.Sc., M.I.E.E., and R. W. Hutchinson, B.Sc., &c. The second edition (third impression) of this important work has been enriched by the addition of a quantity of new matter, more especially in connection with Electrolytic Resistance, New Lamps, Principles of Alternating Currents, Armature Windings, Alternators, Motors, and Thermo-electricity.

The New Cure for the Blues

Alice Hegan Rice, who discovered Mrs. Wiggs, has found a new cure for the blues in "Mr. Opp." So she has written a book about him just as she wrote about Mrs. Wiggs, only the story is nearly twice as long. Mr. Opp is a country editor in a little Kentucky River Town, a most ridiculous, pompous little man, but with a heart large enough to please Mrs. Wiggs—and that's large enough to please a million readers.

THE

A Publisher on the Cheap Copyright Novel in Cloth

THE following article represents the views of one of our leading publishers, and we believe of many others interested in the future of fiction :—

"The sevenpenny novel, in cloth, is now creating a considerable stir in the book world, and indeed the advent of this comparatively new feature in book production is likely to have more far-reaching consequences than at first sight might appear probable.

The sixpenny novel in paper covers was treated as a magazine, and was generally bought to be read and thrown aside. It was not worth while to spend another 6d. or 8d. in having it bound and kept in a library.

The sevenpenny book, owing to the cost of binding, is a cheaper product, and is more permanent, and if it has "come to stay" readers will wait for their favourite novels until they can purchase them in this form and will not look at a 6s. edition.

All publishers and booksellers know that the large sums paid to successful and rising novelists are based on the 6s. volume, and the number of losses incurred by publishers in this form of speculation bears no inconsiderable proportion to the number of successes.

The sevenpenny edition has won its position so far by being applied to books which have been successful at 6s. ; but if it becomes more general, the 6s. book will go, and with it will go some part of the large profits of the few really popular writers, and all the profits of the smaller fry.

A sevenpenny book can only pay its expenses on a sale of many thousands, and it is probable that the few successes, even of the selected books which are now appearing in that form, must bear the burden of the many losses.

The question is this, Can sevenpenny books pay their way as a whole, if the testing ground of the 6s. edition be done away with.

We believe that they cannot ; but the system is on its trial, and we sincerely hope that publishers generally will not be too eager to adopt it until it has been fully tested.

This is mainly an authors' question, and we understand that the Authors' Society are considering it carefully in consultation with the Publishers' Association.

Indirectly the destruction of the 6s. novel would have a great influence on the large body of readers who depend on circulating libraries, as circulating libraries will not touch sevenpenny books.

We sincerely hope that publishers will be content to move slowly, and at any rate will do their utmost to oppose sevenpenny editions of any books which have been out less than 2 or 3 years, or continue to have a steady sale at 6s.

The principal booksellers regard the sevenpenny volumes with grave misgivings, if not with disfavour, as injurious to the best interests of the trade."

The Cheap Copyright Novel Question

THE revival of the question of the issue of copyright fiction in cheap cloth bound volumes at a few pence has for some time past been occupying the attention of the Authors' Society and the Publishers' Association. The desire of several of our leading publishers is, as one of them said to us, "To get over this friction if we can, and not to have any ill-feeling in our ranks."

"Substantial Manufacture of Books Hinders their Sale"

"When publishers and authors try to explain why their books do not sell, their speculations," as the New York Tribune points out, "once carried outside the books themselves, range far and wide. The recent unsatisfactory season in London, for example, was accounted for in some curious ways. The habit of dining in restaurants and going to the music halls was among the novel 'causes' cited. Sidney Low maintains in the London Outlook that the trouble lies in the indestructible form given to the modern book, irrespective of its contents. There are, to begin with, altogether too many books, so that, as Mr. Low remarks, the man who would endeavour to read a small fraction of the year's publications would have no time to eat or sleep. But suppose he at least made an effort ? Where could he find room for all those stoutly-bound volumes ? For the cloth-bound book is not by any means easily to be put out of existence. Says Mr. Low :—

> You cannot tear it to pieces and throw it in the wastepaper basket or dustbin, or dump it out of a railway carriage window, as you would a paper-covered French or German work. Even to leave it about casually on the chance that it will disappear is hopeless. It is far too respectable in its aspect for that ; somebody is sure to pick it up and bring it back to you, possibly with the expectation of a reward, as being a valuable piece of property that you would not willingly lose.

The solution of the problem, therefore, in Mr. Low's opinion, is to fall back upon paper covers and low prices. Also, of course, these expedients should be adopted in the publication not of novels alone, but of many books which, if nominally of more serious interest, are nevertheless but of transient value."

Notes and Announcements

QUEEN WILHELMINA OF HOLLAND, who has the good wishes of millions in addition to those of her intensely anxious subjects, has graciously permitted Miss Mima Nixon to make drawings at her summer palace, Het Loo. They are for a work on "Dutch Bulbs and Gardens," which Messrs. Black are adding to their wonderful series of colour books—the text is by Miss Una Silberrad, who writes such delightful novels, and Miss Sophie Lyall.

The "All Red" Series of books on the Empire, announced by Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., deals, it is said, with the history, development and present-day condition of the younger States attached to the English Crown. The volumes are to be written by men of whose thorough intimacy with their subject there can be no question. The Hon. Bernhard Wise has done the first volume in the series, namely, "The Commonwealth of Australia." Mr. Wise's former official position as Attorney-General of New South Wales, added to his experience as a writer, is a qualification for the task that warrants the reader in anticipating the acquirement of thoroughly trustworthy information and instruction.

The Nineteenth Century and After for May contains, among others, the following important articles:—Six German Opinions on the Naval Situation; The Declaration of London, by Thomas Gibson Bowles; The Origin of the Revolt in Turkey, by Halil Halid Bey.

Owing to the great demand for Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft's Book of Recollections, Mr. Murray has found it necessary at once to put a second impression in hand.

Mr. C. E. Hallé's forthcoming volume, "Notes from a Painter's Life" (to be published by Mr. Murray), traces the history of the Grosvenor and the New Galleries and incidentally gives interesting glimpses and anecdotes of many distinguished votaries of the arts of music, sculpture and painting.

Mr. C. E. Lawrence's new novel, "Much Ado About Something," is now ready and will be published by Mr. Murray on May 6th—the same day as he will also issue "The Shuttles of the Loom," by K. M. Edge, which is the pen-name of Mrs. Caulfield.

On May 3rd Mr. T. Fisher Unwin will publish Countess Martinengo-Cesaresco's book, "The Place of Animals in Human Thought." This is probably the most comprehensive work that has yet appeared on the conceptions of animals manifested in the speculations of primitive man, and in the great religions of the world. It has a large number of illustrations, chosen with great care, and showing animal life reflected in the art of many ages.

The Rev. J. D. Jones, the new Chairman of the Congregational Union, is the subject of an article in the May issue of the popular home magazine, The Free Churchman.

Messrs. John Ouseley, Ltd., are to publish in their Shilling Series "Myself and My Piano," by Margaret Cooper, the well-known society entertainer.

The publishers to the English Church Pageant Committee, Eyre & Spottiswoode (Bible Warehouse), Ltd., announce that they will issue on Monday, May 3rd, the Official Handbook of the English Church Pageant, to be held in the grounds of Fulham Palace, June 10th to 16th. Published at 6d. net, the Handbook will contain some forty pages of descriptive matter and illustrations.

In "John Cave," a novel that Messrs. A. Treherne & Co., Ltd., bring out on May 15th, the author, W. B. Trites, "describes an American press of great cruelty and vulgarity; he ridicules the modern American advertisement, and he gives the motives that lead many Americans to live abroad. Nor does he neglect the study of love, marriage and dissipation in his book," which is being published simultaneously in England and America.

Mr. John Lane will publish immediately "Joan of the Hills," a novel by T. B. Clegg, author of "The Love Child." Mr. Clegg's previous novels have given him a position as an Australian novelist to be reckoned with. The present story opens in London, but Mr. Clegg is soon back in Australia, describing the life on a remote Australian station with its refreshing bush atmosphere. "Joan of the Hills" should increase the reputation that Mr. Clegg has already achieved.

Admirers of Mr. Arthur Applin's novel of stage life, entitled "The Chorus Girl," will be glad to learn that a companion novel by the same author, entitled "The Stage Door," is announced for immediate publication by Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co., in the Colonial Library.

Mr. Heinemann has this week published the long-expected book on Servia by the Servians, edited by Mr. Alfred Stead.

On Monday Messrs. Cassell will publish "Royal Academy Pictures and Sculpture" for 1909. The pictures are reproduced on a scale sufficiently large to give due effect to every detail, and the work contains many reproductions of notable works of art which appear in no other publication. A Rembrandt photogravure—"Flowers of June," by Frank Dicksee, R.A., will be presented with the volume, which will also be published in five parts.

Messrs. Longmans & Co. will publish immediately a book by Mr. John Atkinson Hobson, which deals with a subject of special interest at the present time. The title will be "The Industrial System; an Enquiry into Earned and Unearned Income."

Another volume from R. Andom, the author of "We Three and Troddles," to be entitled "The Magic Bowl," is promised by Messrs. Jarrold & Sons during the next few days. The vivacious humour and incident of this writer are universally known, and those who have enjoyed his previous works may well anticipate a right pleasant time with this forthcoming volume.

The famous Wallace Collection is the latest addition to Cassell's series of Great Art Galleries, and contains reproductions of sixty of the principal pictures in the Collection, with brief explanatory notes. The Galleries already included in this series are—the National Gallery, the Louvre, the Tate Gallery, and the Luxembourg.

Messrs. Methuen are about to publish a translation by Mrs. Charles Weekes of "Criminal Types in Shakespeare," by August Goll; also A. R. Allinson's translation of "Walks in Paris," by Georges Cain, the Curator of the Carnavalet Museum. All true lovers of Paris will welcome this fascinating book, illustrated by views and plans mainly from old prints. "Set in Silver" is the title of the new novel by Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Williamson, which is to be published on May 6th by Messrs. Methuen. The book describes a motor tour through England.

Mrs. Oona H. Ball, author of "Barbara goes to Oxford," has written another story of life in Oxford, and it will be published on May 6th by Messrs. Methuen under the title of "Their Oxford Year." Mrs. Goodenough, the wife of the hero, describes her adventures among the young gentlemen and others of the University to her grandfather in Canada.

Some years ago Messrs. Methuen commenced the publication of a facsimile edition of the four folios of Shakespeare. They commenced with the fourth edition, then the third, and the second folio is now ready. The reproduction has been most carefully done under continual supervision, and the paper on which the edition is printed has been specially made to resemble the paper on which the original was printed. Messrs. Methuen are now engaged in the reproduction of the first folio.

Mr. E. Ponsonby, of 116, Grafton Street, Dublin, has just published a 6d. pamphlet, entitled "Could Bacon have Written the Plays?" by Rev. George O'Neill, M.A., S.J., who writes to prove Bacon was also Shakespeare; he does so in a way which ought not to offend Shakespearians, though we do not think it will convince any of them.

It is a good while since an author has made a bid for public favour with a novel of the "restful style" formerly affected by Thomas Love Peacock; but the epithet is said to apply distinctly to "The Old Home," by Gerard Bendall, which Mr. Alston Rivers announces for immediate publication. Mr. Bendall has already shown that he possesses a pretty sense of humour as well as literary ability, but in "The Old Home" he has found a theme far better adapted to his peculiar touch than in his previous work.

Worcestershire is to be the subject of the next volume in Messrs. Black's series of colour-books, the text is by Mr. A. G. Bradley. Mr. Thomas Tyndale has done the illustrations.

It is not long since Mr. William Le Queux's story, "The Invasion of 1910," was being freely discussed. Now he is engaged upon a book "dealing with the spy work of German agents in this country, the extent of which will probably be a revelation to most people." Though written in the form of fiction, it is understood that the book is based upon serious facts. It is to be published by Messrs. Hurst & Blackett.

We wish to call the attention of those interested in Scottish matters to the Old-Lore Series issued by the Viking Club. The object of the series is to bring together material for the history of Orkney, Shetland, Caithness, and Sutherland from all available sources. The annual subscription is 10s. 6d., and this entitles the subscriber to all the publications. We have before us several numbers of the series, including the Old-Lore Miscellany (April, 1909). It contains, amongst other things, an interesting account, with full-page portrait, after Romney, of the Duchess, Countess of Sutherland, 1765–1839.

We understand that orders for Cassell's "Royal Academy Pictures and Sculpture, 1909," ready on Monday next, have been particularly heavy, and record sales are anticipated. The advertising matter is exceptionally attractive, and the new cover is sure to arrest attention.

"A Minstrel in the South" is the title of the volume of short poems by Miss Millicent Wedmore which Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. are about to issue.

A short Memoir of Sir Redvers Buller, by Mr. Lewis Butler (late Captain in the King's Royal Rifle Corps), will be published immediately by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. Mr. Butler has elaborated the work from the Memoir which he contributed to The Chronicle of the Rifle Corps, having had access to a considerable number of private documents. The book contains three portraits of General Buller and a facsimile of an interesting letter written to Lady Buller by the General on his entry into Ladysmith.

"Is Death the End?" by a well-known writer, is the title of an important book appearing in a few days with Mr. Francis Griffiths. The case for immortality is presented on the psychological and scientific side, with little or no reference to theology. The book also contains opinions by the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, Sir Oliver Lodge and Professor Jevons.

A valuable contribution to Liberal Theology is contained in a forthcoming work, entitled "Is a World Religion Possible?" by D. Balsillie. Dogma and doctrine are alike brushed aside by the author in order to present a clearer view of the founder of Christianity. There are some philosophical chapters, but the emphasis of the work is laid on the Divine man, as leader of men, and in no way the founder of ritual. Mr. Francis Griffiths is the publisher.

"Proverbs of Wales," by F. R. Roberts, shortly to be published by Mr. Francis Griffiths, contains the cream of the proverbial sayings current in the Principality. The English as well as the Welsh version of the proverbs is given in this attractive little volume.

Mr. John Long and Mr. Nat Gould

ALTHOUGH Mr. John Long has been in the business little more than twenty years he has now probably the largest six-shilling novel publishing business in this country or in America.

Mr. Long's success is due to his business ability, his untiring energy and in no slight degree to his affable nature. He makes friends of his authors, as will be seen from what Mr. Nat Gould says, and a glance at the list of names of those whose works he publishes proves this, for in nearly all cases he does business direct.

MR. JOHN LONG

¶ Mr. Long informed us that he was born forty-four years ago, at Dainton (near Ipplepen), Devonshire. He was educated partly in Jersey and partly in France. In 1881 he came to London to study for the Civil Service; but gave that up for a commercial career, and commenced publishing in 1887. It is quite unnecessary to give a list of the authors for whom Mr. Long publishes; they have so often been mentioned in our columns, and at very frequent intervals new works by them and by new writers are announced as to be published by Mr. Long.

Mr. Long on the Cheap Cloth Copyright Novel

In response to our suggestion Mr. Long gave us his views on the question of the cheap cloth copyright novel. He said he really had not bothered very much about it—he had not any reason to complain that it had affected his profits in the past, and he had very little fear of it for the future. It was manifestly unwise to shake the confidence of the booksellers by publishing cheap permanent cloth-bound editions of copyright novels, especially by premature publication. He thought the ephemeral paper-covered sixpenny did far less harm to the bookseller and to the circulating libraries. Mr. Long doubted very seriously whether these copyright cloth books, published at the price of a quartern loaf, would sell in editions large enough to repay the cost: they had to compete with the non-copyright masterpieces of literature. It was a well-known fact that as the sixpenny paper-cover novel increased in numbers, so the numbers printed of each new one decreased, until in many cases the point was reached where cost left no profit. At one time there was quite a fair revenue obtainable from general advertisements in the sixpennies; now that was reduced to a meagre percentage on the cost of paper and print. So these new copyright cloth sevenpenny editions cost more and produce less than the paper sixpenny.

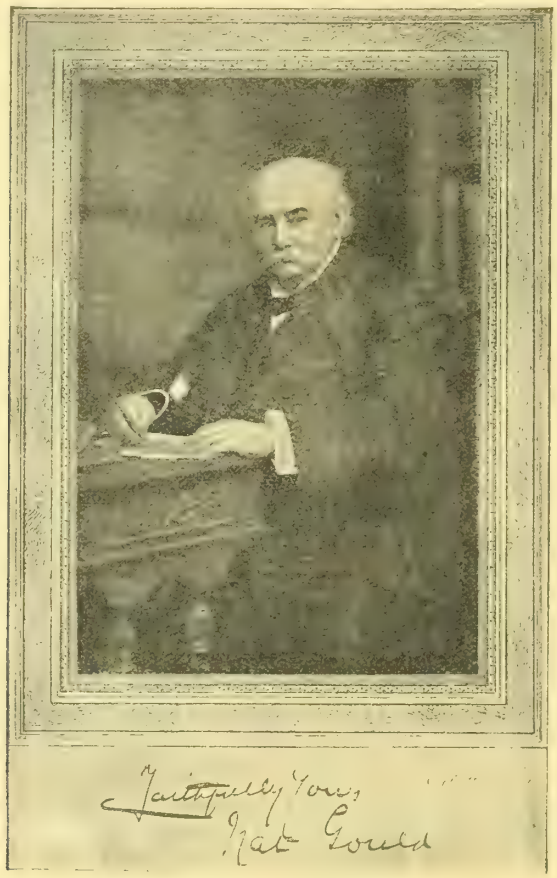
Mr. Nat Gould and Mr. Long

In his bright and breezy work, "The Magic of Sport," by Mr. Nat Gould (noticed in another column), one of the pleasantest things we met with was the following hearty tribute from one of the most successful authors to one of the most successful publishers of the day.

Mr. Gould, of whose works over six million copies have been sold, chiefly in the cheap "yellow back" and paper-cover editions, says on page 198



"I came into contact with my present publisher, Mr. John Long, about five or six years ago. The first time we met he asked me to place a novel with him. This I promised to do. I am still writing novels for him, and hope to do so for many years to come. With Mr. Long my intercourse has always been of a pleasurable character. We have had no differences of opinion that were not easily overcome by frank explanations. He has never met me with a refusal when it came to asking a certain sum for a book. I do not think I have a grasping disposition; I am sure he has not. An author and a publisher ought to row together, pull in the same boat, to their mutual advantage.

"There seems to be an idea, even among authors, that publishers are grasping—that they take more than their share of the spoil. This has not been my experience. From the first I have met with nothing but friendliness from publishers. It is a mistake to go from one firm to another; at least, such is my opinion. Why change publishers when you are satisfied? I always think it shows a sign of weakness when an author goes from one publisher to another in the course of a year or two; it seems to imply that the first will not risk an enhanced price although he knows exactly how the books sell. I have always been a welcome visitor at publishers' homes. At Mr. Long's charming residence at Surbiton I have spent many pleasant hours and been entertained hospitably in his household. This is as it should be."

Mr. Long told us he found his business too exacting ever to be able to take long holidays; but he is too wise to breathe nothing but office air, and a few hours now and then spent motoring, or with the golf clubs, help to keep him fit for work.

We hope that his very pleasant and profitable relations with Mr. Gould and his numerous other authors may long continue. He informs us that he has some important works in general literature on the stocks to be published at 15s. —"I have a lot of important works coming," he added. "Please tell your advertisement manager that I shall want three pages in your Export Number."

We hope, as Mr. Long is going to motor in the country of General Literature he will remember to take heed of the danger signals which come into view automatically in the publication ledger, but which are so often ignored.

MR. NAT GOULD

Mr. Nat Gould's "The Magic of Sport"*

THE name of Nat Gould has for many years been a household word in sporting circles; his stories, racy and romantic, are read by all interested in open-air life: stable-boy, jockey, and race-horse owner, as a rule, know a good thing when they see it, and Nat Gould can always be depended upon for a first-rate yarn.

His "Magic of Sport," however, is not a novel. It is a chatty account of his life from his early days, and contains reminiscences of men and women famous in the journalistic world, on the stage and in sporting circles. Nat Gould has lived a full life. He was born in Manchester in 1857, and was the son of a prosperous tea merchant; at an early age he developed two great passions—one for sport, the other for reading. Active in body and mind, loving the open air, and full of the spirit of romance and adventure, it was hardly to be expected that he would take kindly to the tea trade; as a matter of fact, his short business career was very far from being a brilliant success, and he went for a holiday to the house of his fathers in Derbyshire, afterwards going to Bradbourne to learn farming. Not having sufficient means to buy a farm of his own, he abandoned the idea of tilling the land and adopted the career of journalism.

Now, journalism is not a munificently paid profession, but "money is not everything. A modest salary, with health, happiness and work a man loves, is far better than a huge income and a life of gilded misery." We agree. Nat Gould made a start on the Newark Advertiser, and seems to have been a success from the very outset. For one thing, he liked the work; for another, he was not afraid of having too much to do; and lastly, he was (and is) a jolly good fellow. This last fact we gather from his books, and from his photograph. After a few full happy years in Newark, he went to Australia. First of all, Brisbane, then Sydney and Bathurst claimed his energies; his work was a joy to him, he was well paid, and he was happy.

During his stay in Bathurst, Nat Gould was asked to write a story for the Referee, Sydney. He complied. "I sat down at my table without the least idea of what I was going to write about, except that it was to be a racing story." It ran to forty odd chapters, and later on Messrs. Routledge offered for the book rights a sum running into three figures. This, for the first book by an unknown writer, was a handsome offer, and Nat Gould does not disguise his joy at having received it. From that moment to this his tales have been enormously successful. They are the best railway-train literature on the market, being fresh, vigorous, healthy and free from all mawkish sentiment. Mr. Gould is free from all shams; he knows he does not write literature, and he does not pretend to; but he also knows (and we share the knowledge) that he can turn out a rattling yarn that can retain the attention of the reader from start to finish.

The second portion of the book is devoted to racing in the Colonies and at Home. There is not a dull page in the book. It is full of anecdote, of curious and useful information, and it contains numerous excellent photographs of people and places. Mr. Gould is still in his early fifties, and will no doubt live to write a few more score of stories—for he writes five every year! Another volume of autobiography may be confidently looked for some years hence, for the author has an excellent memory, and he excels in this form of writing.

In our article on Mr. John Long we have referred to the happy relations existing between him and Mr. Gould, who has this in common with Homer, an unfeigned love and admiration for that noble animal, the Horse—and this to a large extent accounts for Mr. Gould's millions of readers; also Mr. G. knows how to be racy without being rancid.

Scarce and Interesting Americana

MESSRS. MAGGS BROS., 109, Strand, London, have just published a most attractively illustrated catalogue of choice engravings of importance in connection with American history, including, for instance, a view of New York with a man-o'-war saluting the British Flag on Fort George; also political cartoons, emblems, and views of scenery. It is issued by Messrs. Maggs Bros., as a supplement to their large and finely illustrated catalogue (No. 248) of choice engravings, etchings, &c. These two lists represent only a small portion of their stock of the finest examples of engravings, etchings, and drawings by the most famous English and foreign artists from the earliest periods to the commencement of the XIXth Century, including also modern etchings by Whistler, Seymour Haden, Cameron, and others. Having a large American connection, Messrs. Maggs Bros. make shipments to America every week.

Nash's Magazine, No. 2.

"Brassey's Naval Annual" for 1909

BY the opening of Messrs. J. Griffin & Co.'s London office at 60, Chandos Street, W.C., as announced in our issue of November 14th last, we are pleased to inform the trade that all copies required of the "Naval Annual," edited by the Hon. T. A. Brassey, 1909 edition, can be supplied direct from their publishing office. Among the many important items to appear in this edition, Part 1 supplies chapters dealing with the work of the past year, both in British and foreign navies, and their comparative strengths. John Leyland writes on "The Naval Expansion of Germany," "The British North Sea Operations," &c. The Marquis of Graham contributes "The Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve"; Alex. Richardson on "The Alternative Systems of Propelling Machinery"; W. H. Henderson and H. Russell on "Dockyard Administration: Past and Present." Part 2 will comprise list and plans of British and foreign ships by Commander C. N. Robinson, R.N., John Leyland and S. W. Barnaby, M.I.N.A. Part 3, Gunnery Progress, Armour and Ordnance, by Commander C. N. Robinson, R.N. Part 4, Statistics, official statements and papers including British and foreign naval estimates. Lord Brassey will contribute a note on the "Forth of Clyde Ship Canal." Several full-page illustrations of recent ships, including America's first Dreadnought, will accompany this comprehensive and reliable work of reference. The book is announced for publication immediately.

New Paper-Making Plants

Newfoundland Paper Mill

AN area of one thousand square miles on the South Coast of Newfoundland has been purchased by a New York concern, of which W. R. Hearst is said to be the leading spirit, as a result of negotiations with the new Morris ministry, and it is announced that it will be made a centre of paper-making operations. It is understood that the plans provide for the erection, at a cost of about $10,000,000, of a plant with a capacity of 450 tons of paper daily.

Cotton-Stalk Paper Mill

The Southern Cotton-Stalk Pulp and Paper Company of Atlanta has purchased an entire block at Cordele, Ga., for the erection of a mill to make a commercial paper from cotton-stalks.

The mill to be built at Cordele is the first of the kind to be put up in the south and will be the first mill ever built to manufacture paper exclusively from cotton-stalks. It will be of sufficient capacity to consume the cotton-stalks product for a territory of twenty miles around Cordele, and will cost $150,000.

Harvey Jordan, President of the Southern Cotton Association, is interested in the company. He says that paper can be made from cotton-stalks in commercial quantities, and at a profit, as shown by tests made by the Federal Department of Agriculture.

Boy Scout Postcards

THE Boy Scout movement has taken such a hold upon lads in every town and village that there is certain to be a large demand for the series of postcards published by Messrs. Jas. Brown & Son, Boy Scout publishers, Glasgow. These show Boy Scouts at work and play, and there are thirty cards done up into sets of six, retailing at 6d. the set. The cards are attractive and nicely printed, and show such incidents as Crossing a Stream, Taking Cover under Road Bridge, Negotiating a Dangerous Passage, On the Trek, &c.

Baedeker's "United States"

A NEW edition (the 4th) of Baedeker's "The United States" will shortly be issued by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin, the English publisher of the Guides. It deals with Mexico, Cuba, Port Rico, and Alaska, as well as with the States themselves, and contains more than 800 pages, with 33 maps and 48 plans. The introduction—100 pages—is specially elaborate, and embodies valuable monographs by distinguished specialists. The article, for instance, on the Constitution and Government of the United States, is written by Mr. James Bryce.

Suggestions for Helping to Place the Retailing of Books on a Paying Basis

(From the New York Publishers' Weekly)

DEAR SIR,—As a suggestion to help place the retail sale of books on a sane merchandise basis, I advise —

First: The publishing of all books at a fixed price, the price to be made by the individual publisher, postage additional.

Second: A discount of not less than one-third off list price, to be allowed the dealer.

Third: Publishers to discontinue suppyling individuals not in the book business. All orders for books by mail to be referred to the local booksellers.

Fourth: New publications to be sent to dealers, not to exceed one copy, on order from dealer, on consignment for sixty days.

Fifth: Publishers to announce in their advertising in newspapers and magazines and all other kinds of advertising, for sale at all bookstores.

Sixth: Publishers to discontinue selling to public libraries direct. All orders so received to be referred to the local bookstores, who will be allowed to give a public library a discount of 20 per cent. from fixed list price.

Seventh: A committee of the booksellers, to be agreed upon at their annual meeting, to interview the more important publishers, to decide some such points as given above.

University Reform

"Principles and Methods of University Reform," being a letter addressed to the University of Oxford by Lord Curzon of Kedleston, Chancellor of the University, has just been published by the Oxford University Press. This volume, consisting of upwards of 220 pages, had its genesis in the debate in the House of Lords in July, 1907. Lord Curzon's eleven chapters deal with the Constitution of the University of Oxford, the admission of poor men, the system of Scholarships and Exhibitions and Fellowships, University examinations, the relations of the Colleges and the University, and the organisation of teaching, the revenue and expenditure and financial administration of the University, the executive machinery of University government, the encouragement of research, and independent subjects, including degrees for women. On all these subjects suggestions are submitted by the Chancellor to the Governing Authorities of Oxford University, who, it is understood, will proceed to their examination without delay.

"Engineering Wonders of the World"

No. 1 of Messrs. T. Nelson & Sons' great new serial "Engineering Wonders of the World" is now launched on the market, and the demand is far exceeding all expectations. The first huge edition was exhausted on the day of publication, and a second edition is in course of preparation; this will be ready in a few days. Booksellers should bring this serial to the notice of their customers; it is a real good thing, there is nothing like it, and the extensive advertising by Messrs. Nelson & Sons should create a big demand. Orders for Part 2 should be sent in at once; it will be ready on May 10th.

Emigrant to Millionaire

Romance of a Publisher

Mr. Peter Fenelon Collier, the millionaire publisher and sporting patron, died suddenly on Saturday, at the age of sixty, in the Riding Club, New York (cables our correspondent), after a jumping contest in which he had taken part.

At the age of seventeen he left Ireland and got work in car-shops at Dayton, Ohio. With two years' savings he entered a Roman Catholic seminary, which he left to be a salesman in a New York publishing house. In six months he saved £60, bought a bankrupt stock of plates of a popular Catholic book, got credit for paper and printing, and became a pioneer of the instalment system of purchase. Thus, and by issuing cheap reprints he was presently making £18,000 a year.

Afterwards he devoted his attention to publications of a higher character. Collier's Weekly, which is managed by Mr. Collier's son, Mr. Robert J. Collier, is notable for its lavish expenditure on literary contributions and illustrations.

The late Mr. George Winterburn of Bolton

We regret to have to record the death, at the age of 75, of the well known bookseller, Mr. George Winterburn, of Bolton, who died on April 27th at his residence, 3, Mornington Road. The deceased had only a short illness. The following extracts from the Bolton Evening News will show in what esteem Mr. Winterburn was held.

Mr. Winterburn was a son of the late Mr. George Winterburn, and was born in Bolton, subsequently joining his father in the bookselling business in Deansgate, to which he succeeded, and which has been established over 70 years. The shop in Deansgate has been for generations back the rendezvous, so to speak, of many

Boltonians, "Winterburns" being perhaps the best-known business house in the town; and this is accounted for probably by the genial disposition of Mr. Winterburn and his father before him. Chatty, witty, always ready with pleasant repartee, and a genial smile always on his face, the deceased had a host of friends, and, it may safely be said, not a single enemy. He leaves five children, three sons and two daughters, with whom much sympathy will be felt.

Though not a public man, it could be said of the late Mr. Winterburn that he was one of the best-known gentlemen in the town and district. Of Mr. Geo. Winterburn it may be asserted that he was an educational force in the town, in the days when books were not so cheap. He had an abhorrence of the discount system which has

of the whole bookselling world for some years. His memory concerning book-titles, prices and authors was extensive indeed, especially with reference to the writers of two and three generations ago.

"He had not an enemy in the whole town," says one who knew him well; and that kindly thought will be re-echoed in many a home.

Football in the Trade

Simpkin Marshall v. Hamiltons

The above game was played on Saturday, April 24th, which resulted in a most decisive win for Simpkins by 5 goals to nil, after a most enjoyable game, although one sided, no ill-feeling being shown. Simpkins had the misfortune to lose the toss, but despite this they never had much trouble to keep their opponents in their own half. After some good passing, Bull opened the scoring for Simpkins, this was soon followed by another from Youthed after some pretty combination work on the left wing. Still another goal was forthcoming before half time, which was again registered by Bull. After the change of ends Simpkins had more of the play than ever, but only managed to score two more goals, this being due to the fine goal-keeping of Bull (Hamilton's captain). A pretty individual run by Smart resulted in the same player scoring a very good goal, this was soon followed by another from Youthed, who had no difficulty in beating the goalie after a clever run on the right wing. This is the second time Simpkins have beaten Hamiltons this season, the previous game ending thus —3 goals to 2 in Simpkins' favour after a more even game. For Simpkins Newman and Palmer played well.

BOLTON

We regret to announce the death, on Tuesday morning last, of Mr. Geo. Winterburn, the well-known and much respected bookseller, of 65, Deansgate. Mr. Winterburn was in his 75th year, and carried on the business commenced by his father; this business will be continued as before by Mr. Geo. R. Winterburn, who has already had about 35 years' experience. Mr. Winterburn was one of the oldest booksellers in Lancashire. Further particulars will be found in another column.

DUBLIN

Extract from Annual Report, 1908-9 Booksellers' Association

The past year has been significant in the annals of bookselling in general, and the Dublin Booksellers' Association has had its special features of interest.

Since our last annual meeting we have had six special meetings. The first of these was convened to consider the action of Macmillan & Co. in supplying, through Mrs. Green, at 3s. 6d., a book which was being sold through the trade at 10s. net. A strong protest against such a course was made, and we may reasonably hope that a similar grievance will not arise again.

In August last we had a meeting, in conjunction with the other branches of the Booksellers' Association, to consider the question of the payment of carriage on net books, and there is reason to regret that this very obvious admission of an equivalent to discount on net books was sanctioned by the Publishers and Booksellers' Associations.

EDINBURGH

Mr. John Currie, for many years manager to Messrs. E. & S. Livingstone, has opened a business at 16, Teviot Place as a publisher, bookseller, and printer. Mr. Currie was with Messrs. E. & S. Livingstone for twenty-three years, having practically full control of the bookselling business, and until recently of the publishing department.

The Messrs. E. & S. Livingstone now being both deceased, the business has changed hands, therefore Mr. Currie has decided to sever his connection with the firm.

GLASGOW

We regret to record the sudden death, on 19th ult., at the early age of 46 years, of Mr. James McKenzie, bookseller, 238, Buchanan Street, Glasgow. The immediate cause of death was pneumonia resulting from a chill, the illness being of only three days' duration. Beginning his career as assistant to a bookseller in the Old Bazaar, Candleriggs, Glasgow, he early displayed more than ordinary aptitude for the business, and with his intuitive knowledge of books was soon able to start on his own account. For about thirty years he has held a prominent position in the front rank of the trade here. Added to his wide knowledge of literature, his genial and always kindly manner attracted a large circle of clients, all of whom regret most sincerely the loss of a friend and a faithful and trusted adviser. In the trade, especially those who were most intimately associated with him in Glasgow, and who best knew his worth, will lament him most.

His was a well known figure at local book auctions, valuable to the auctioneers, and of good service to those who entrusted him with their confidence.

We are certain that all who knew him will share in the grief of his sorrowing relatives.

LEEDS

The Leeds Arts Club has been giving during the week, in its premises at Blenheim Terrace, an interesting exhibition of the works of Mr. Muirhead Bone, by the kindness of Mr. Charles Rothenstein, who lent the drawings and etchings from his own collection.

The conductor of the Leeds Musical Festival, Sir Charles Stanford, has recently been engaged on a new work, entitled "An Ode to Discord"; the work is described as a piece of subtle musical satire. In it the methods of leading contemporary composers will be travestied. The Ode will be performed at Queen's Hall, London, on June 8th.

A book of stories by a new author, Mr. R. E. A. Wilson (says the Yorks Evening Post), is to be published by a Leeds firm under the title of "Dead Shadows." The theory of the book is that pain and suffering are joys when they are undergone with the supreme idea of sacrifice, and wounds are balm when received in the service of the loved.

The Leeds poet-painter, Mr. J. W. Inchbold, mentioned in last week's "Notes," published a volume of sonnets, entitled "Annus Amoris" in 1876, which is now rather scarce.

The other day I came across a catalogue issued by a Leeds bookseller in 1843. Those were indeed the halcyon days of book collecting judging by such finds as these:—Manuscript, in 4to, time of Charles I., containing advice to a Favourite. The King's Message on his Removal to York. Sir John Hotham's refusal to let the King into Hull, &c. with Ralph Thoresby's Autographs, and described in his Ducatus Leodiensis, page 86, No. 144 of his catalogue, 10s.

I've a shrewd idea what became of it, but I wonder whether its custodian knows. I rather suspect not. If a guinea or even two could tempt its owners to part with it please ring me up: Tel. No. 1, Leeds.

Then who would not gladly fork out a guinea for this lot?—Shadwell's Dramatic Works (1st edits.), viz.:—The Sullen Lovers, Royal Shepherdess, Humorist, The Miser, Epsom Wells, Psyche, The Libertine, The Virtuoso, Timon of Athens, A True Widow, The Woman Captain, The Lancashire Witches, The Squire of Alsatia, Bearry Fair, Amorous Bigot, The Scourers and the Volunteers—in all 17; 4to., calf, very neat, rare, £1 1s.

I am not at all tempted by the next item, notwithstanding it's a "very desirable copy."—Keach's (Benjamin) Key to open Scripture Metaphors, best edition, two vols. in one, folio, calf, neat, 45s. A very desirable copy.

I've a philosophic doubt it is not worth that much; besides, I want the money for Whitsuntide, and in any case, even at the risk of being considered prejudiced, I confess I prefer the old plays.

The books which are going best just now are books dealing with wild nature, novels, cyclists, tourists' hand-books and guide-books to the country and seaside.

For lo, the winter is past,
The rain is over and gone,
The flowers appear on the earth;
The time of the singing of birds is come
And the voice of the turtle is heard in our land.

LINCOLN

The book trade since Easter has been rather quiet here, the chief demand amongst theological books being Challoner's "Ara Coeli," Figgis's "Gospel and Human Needs," Swete's "Appearance of Our Lord after the Passion," and Robinson's "Ephesians" (an exposition). Turning to fiction, the various shilling editions have been in steady demand, Baroness Orczy's works finding a ready sale. Diver's "Captain Desmond," which has had an exceptional sale locally, still heads the list. Collin's Pocket Classics and Nelson's new Shilling Library have also sold freely. Sevenpenny novels and sixpenny reprints also sell as well as ever. John's "British Birds" has sold well to buyers of nature books, the illustrations being above the average quality. The new edition of Haslam's "Everyman's Book of Garden Flowers" has found a ready sale.

READING

There is not much moving in bookselling. At the Libraries the books most enquired for are the Baroness Orczy's "Old Man in the Corner," Ashton Hilliers' "As it Happened," and Maud S. Rawson's new book, both these two latter being local writers.

TAUNTON

Messrs. Barnicott & Pearce, of The Wessex Press, will publish by subscription a work on the great Civil War between Charles I. and his Parliament in so far as it affected Dorset. It is entitled "The Civil War in Dorset, 1642–1660," and is written by A. R. Bayley, B.A. Oxon., F.R.Hist.S.

The size of the volume will be demy octavo of about 500 pages; it will be printed in legible type on good paper, and will be issued in cloth binding, uncut edges. The edition will be limited to 250 copies.

When Jane Austen was Writing

If "Madge" of Truth is a true prophetess, we are in for an awful time presently. She says in this week's issue:—"The clothes that were being worn in Parisian salons while Jane Austen was writing in quiet England are to be the glory of Mayfair drawing-rooms this season. No petticoats are possible with the narrow skirts, which are in some cases of chiffon or lace, and semi-transparent. The colourings are quite exquisite, both in themselves and in the wonderful combinations of such things as a blue gauze skirt with a pink and green chené coat, an 'autumn silk' coat with a chené skirt, or a dress of pale shot silk with a scarf of deep, bright purple, knotted and gathered into a capeline."

No wonder Madge adds that "We must prepare for a startling summer." Let us hope that the "tempestuous petticoat" will re-appear in the Autumn.

Anne Warner

One of the most charming and successful writers that America has produced is Mrs. Anne Warner, whose portrait we have much pleasure in giving. As the creator of one of the most notable and amusing of modern characters in fiction, Susan Clegg, Mrs. Warner is well and widely known to the English reading public. Messrs. Gay & Hancock, the English publishers of "Susan Clegg and Her Neighbours' Affairs"; "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary"; "As Queens are Wed"; "Seeing France with Uncle John," and other works by Mrs. Warner, inform us that she considers "As Queens are Wed" her best book so far, and, in referring to it in a letter, says:—

MRS. ANNE WARNER

> The one character that I did take, and take bodily, from life was (is) "von Ibn" in "As Queens are Wed." "Ibn," by the way, is the Turkish equivalent of the German "von" and the French "de," so the name is the blankest kind of a make-up. But there was nothing blank about the original, and nothing made-up. He was the strongest, most individual, and—as a companion for a few hours—the most startlingly delightful man that I have ever met. He was the caviare in all the long menu of my men friends. No woman could exist as the wife of such a man, but to have his friendship is a perpetual reminder that a kaleidoscopic joy of conflicting ideas may be going to happen again sometime. The charm of the unaccountable is very strong for anyone who knows the reasons for most of what happens, and the further charm of the eternally surprising is altogether irresistible to one who often sees what is going to be said long before the speech is made.
> The other day a curious coincidence brought the proof of the English edition and the gentleman himself to me at the same time. I hadn't seen him but once in six years, but he was not at all changed. He wrote that he would call at any hour which I might set, and I set four o'clock on Wednesday—he came at eleven a.m. on Thursday.
> "Did you expect me yesterday?" he asked.
> "Yes, I did," I answered.
> "What did you think?"
> "I thought that you had stopped in Göttingen."
> "Göttingen—why should I stop in Göttingen? Don't you know that Göttingen is so stupid that they say that the dogs there run up to strangers and say, 'Kindly kick me so that I shall have something new to think about?'"

L. UPCOTT GILL, Bazaar Buildings, Drury Lane, London

"What have you learned in these six years?" he asked after a little.

I felt staggered, because in the six years I had learned that I could write books and couldn't write plays, and each of the lessons had been bewildering.

"I have learned that all men are pretty much alike," I said.

"But not me."

"Of course not you. You are the one exception to every rule in the world."

He looked at me and considered.

"I think you made me rather a fool in that book," he then said.

"Oh well, it's only a book," I reminded him, smiling.

Mrs. Warner is a welcome contributor to Harper's, Scribner's, and other of the best magazines, and few writers have made for their writings such a large circle of readers as Mrs. Warner enjoys in the whole English speaking world.

We have to thank Mrs. Warner's publishers, Messrs. Gay & Hancock, for the use of the accompanying portrait of the lady.

Letters to the Editor

La Grande Revue

DEAR SIR, — In reference to your appreciative notice of La Grande Revue, may I point out that my firm is the recognised agent for this periodical in Great Britain?

I enclose a prospectus offering the first quarter of the present year at the exceptional price of 5s. This offer still holds good.

Yours faithfully,
DAVID NUTT.

57–59, Long Acre, W.C.

[We are very glad to hear that this fine publication is in such good hands in this country.—ED.]

From the "Critic of a Critic of a Critic"

SIR,—I thank Mr. Edwin C. Walker for the suggestive suggestion which he suggestively suggests. He has given me a conundrum which I cannot answer, unless it is with the little word "of."

Yours faithfully,
W. PUGIN THORNTON.

Broadstone.

"Books which were Never Published"

SIR,—The statement of "Old Bookseller" in the P.C. of this week, that Lytton's Dramatic Works, Vol. 2, Knebworth edition, was never issued is not correct.

A considerable delay occurred over the issue of this volume through the dramatic copyright of "Darnley" and the absence of the then Lord Lytton from England The first volume was published in 1876, and the second volume in 1882 (dated 1883) by Routledge.

Yours truly,
BIBLIOPOLE.

[We are much obliged for this correction. "Old Bookseller" is usually very correct, but the English Catalogue proves "Bibliopole's" statement to be accurate.—ED.]

Book Supports

What is more injurious to bindings or more unsightly to the eye than books leaning diagonally against other books to support them on a half filled shelf? Cheap, strong, metal supports, taking up no room and smoothly enamelled, are made for this very purpose. Illustrated List sent free on application.

THE ART OF HEALTH. By UPTON SINCLAIR and MICHAEL WILLIAMS. 256 pages, Full Cloth. 5/- net.

A work embodying the personal experiences of the famous authors in the pursuit of health. Contains much that is entirely new on the subject and is a work of interest to everybody. The authors tell the story of many interesting and valuable experiments, and publish a number of facts and figures on Foods and Health generally which have never been printed in such a book before.

THE WAY TO LIVE: Health and Physical Fitness. With the Story of My Life. By GEORGES HACKENSCHMIDT. Over 60 Illustrations. Edition de Luxe, signed by Author (limited edition), 5/-. Cheap edition 2/6 net.

This is not a "strong man" book. The contents constitute a very notable addition to the information and experience available on the proper method of living and the most reliable ways of obtaining health and physical fitness. Mr. Hackenschmidt has had his book in preparation for a number of years, and has spared neither time nor expense to make it reliable and valuable. He has employed competent authorities to search out data for him, but every line in the book reflects the experience and knowledge of a man who has spent a lifetime studying the subjects on which he writes. The book covers the whole question of physical fitness and development for every age and for both sexes. The training and exercises are many of them unique, and the information is thoroughly complete. A most valuable and interesting work.

MY SYSTEM: Fifteen Minutes' Work a Day for Health's Sake. By J. P. MÜLLER, ex-Lieut. Royal Danish Engineers. With 44 Illustrations and a Time Table. 2/6 net. With Stiff Covers, 3/6. CHART OF EXERCISES (on Cardboard), 6d.

This is a unique work upon the hygiene of the body by an authority who has made the subject his especial study. The system has enabled Lieut. Müller to gain a degree of success as an all-round athlete that must be almost, if not entirely, unprecedented. In this volume the author deals with the various sources of health, and prescribes a complete system for both sexes of all ages and occupations.

THE FRESH AIR BOOK. By J. P. MÜLLER (Author of "My System"). Profusely Illustrated with photographs. 2/6 net. Cloth Covers, 3/6.

Contains all the latest knowledge on the value of Fresh Air. Deals exhaustively with Sun and Air Baths and their curative values. Is a most interesting book on a subject very much to the front. Chapters on the "Back to Nature Cult"—The Air and Sun Baths of the Continent—The Wearing of Sandals—Linen-next-the-Skin—Why you should Run—How you should Run—How to Lie Abed—Bathing—Ventilation—Dieting, etc., etc.

SCIENTIFIC BOXING AND SELF-DEFENCE. By TOMMY BURNS, Heavy-Weight Champion of the World. 40 full-page photographs, specially posed for by Burns. A few copies of the Edition-de-Luxe, signed by the Author, can still be had, 5/- net. 2/6 net.

In writing this book the Author has avoided, as far as possible, the lines of the ordinary book on boxing, and has expressed his own ideas and not the orthodox. His own notions of successful fighting and Ring generalship, together with his methods of training, and history of his fights, are clearly and admirably expressed. Described in The Sportsman as the best book on boxing ever issued.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF PHYSICAL POWER. By ARTHUR SAXON, the Strongest man in the World. 3/- net.

"My aim in this book is to instil the value of genuine power and the importance of building up energy and stamina without necessarily any attempt to obtain large muscles." ARTHUR SAXON.

RUNNING AND CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNING. By ALFRED SHRUBB, World's Champion Long-Distance Runner. 2/6 net.

The most authoritative and instructive book on Running issued for many years. Illustrated with 32 whole-page photographs showing the author in different running positions. Shrubb has never been beaten, and created a sensation in America last year. Is well-known throughout the Colonies.

TRAINING FOR ATHLETICS. 2s. 6d. net.

The most complete and authoritative Manual of Training ever published. Most of the Authors are World's Champions. The following are the contributors: W. G. George (Running), Tommy Burns (Boxing), Wolffe (Swimming), Olley (Cycling), East (Rowing), A. Saxon (Weight-Lifting), T. Burrows (Club-Swinging), J. Carroll (Wrestling), Shrubb (Long-Distance Running), A. T. Yeoumans (Walking), J. Higgings (Jumping).

INDIAN AND COLONIAL EDITION

LATEST NOVELS.

THE MEASURE OF OUR YOUTH. A Novel. By ALICE HERBERT.

 A brilliant novel of modern life, by a new author. Its leading interest is the eternal one of sex; but the treatment is particularly fresh and fearless, and there is a sense of humour and of style that will please the fastidious. The realism of the writing will be forgiven for the sake of the delicate and poetic vein of thought that underlies the story, which is full of interest for the psychologist.

THE WAY THINGS HAPPEN: A Freak of Fancy. By HUGH DE SÉLINCOURT. Author of "The Boy's Marriage," "The High Adventure," Etc.

SOMEONE PAYS. A Novel. By NOEL BARWELL.

 "Someone Pays," though exemplifying a subtle train of cause and effect, is not a novel with a problem or a purpose. The story is told by means of the correspondence passing between a number of persons. We are first introduced to the post-bag at a country Vicarage where Sir Bernard Orr's son is being coached. Later the scene changes to Cambridge, and we watch the developments of a romance and an awkward entanglement.

JOAN OF THE HILLS. A Novel by T. B. CLEGG, author of "The Love Child," "The Wilderness," "The Bishop's Scapegoat."

 Mr. Clegg's previous novels have given him a position as an Australian novelist to be reckoned with. The present story opens in London, but Mr. Clegg is soon back in Australia, describing the life on a remote Australian station with its refreshing bush atmosphere. "Joan of the Hills" should increase the reputation that Mr. Clegg has already achieved.

SIXPENNY PIECES. By A. NEIL LYONS. Uniform with "Arthur's."

 Mr. Lyons' new book has for its central figure a "Sixpenny Doctor" in the East-end of London. The sketches are connected by a thread of continuous interest as in Mr. Lyons' former book—the now famous "Arthur's." The volume is instinct with a realism that differs altogether from the so-called realism of the accepted "gutter" novels, for it is the realism of life as it is, and not as imagined.

GALAHAD JONES. A Tragic Farce. By ARTHUR H. ADAMS.

 Galahad Jones is a middle-aged bank clerk, with a family. One day, on his way home, a letter falls to his feet from the balcony of a house he is passing. It is addressed "To You," and on reading it he discovers that he is requested to meet the writer in the garden of the house at 10 o'clock that night. In a spirit of knight-errantry, he decides to do so, and his chivalry plunges him into many difficulties, and leads to some very awkward and extremely amusing situations.

CHIP: A Novel. By F. E. MILLS YOUNG, Author of "A Mistaken Marriage."

THE PRINCE'S PRANKS. A Novel. By CHARLES LOWE.

 The action of this stirring story, which is laid in Queen Victoria's first Jubilee year, gives the writer—formerly "Times" Correspondent in Berlin—an opportunity of drawing a vivid character sketch of one of her Majesty's Jubilee guests—now the most-talked-of personage in Europe—who is made to indulge his versatile tastes by studying Anarchism at first hand.

DOLL BOOKS

SIZE $4\frac{1}{4}$ BY $5\frac{1}{2}$ IN.

O'KISSME SAN

BY HARVEY GASKELL

Illustrated by M. E. THOMPSON and H. M. PEMBERTON

WILHELMINA:

THE ADVENTURES OF A DUTCH DOLL

BY NORA PITT-TAYLOR. Illustrated by GLADYS HALL

A novel Series of amusing Verses and charming Pictures, with a Doll attached
Daintily ribboned, bound, and boxed

THESE charming little boxed Books, each done up as neatly as a fashionable wedding cake, are our latest sensational success in the production of Artistic Juveniles.

Buyers on all hands have pronounced them to be the most startling novelty in books for children since Dean's Rag Books burst upon an astonished world.

These dainty little DOLL BOOKS not only sell well, but look well and read well

Some toy books are produced mainly for the pictures, and it is considered that the text does not matter. We do not think so. Just as much care has been taken over the reading matter as over the work of the artist and its reproduction. The delightful stories—the one in verse and the other in prose—are just what gladden the hearts of the little ones. Nothing has been spared in the way of printing, paper, or binding.

MESSRS. BAGSTER wish to call the attention of their friends in the Colonies and in all parts of the world to the large number of new and popular books they have recently published.

In addition to new large-type editions of the Bible and the Daily Light on the Daily Path, which is still the most popular daily Text Book, and is kept in over 80 bindings, there are, among others, a series of Books for the Library and "The Sixpenny Series," the cheapest and best value of any before the public. This series already contains 15 volumes, and others are following rapidly.

In order that full lists and specimens may be sent, Messrs. Bagster would be glad to receive a postcard with address from all those who are handling such books.

Bacon's Excelsior School Maps

CONTOUR EDITION

THE increasing demand for a more scientific study of Geography has necessitated the publication of maps Physically or Orographically coloured, and a special edition of Bacon's Excelsior School Maps called the CONTOUR EDITION is, therefore, now being issued to conform to modern ideas and wishes. Instead of the maps being politically coloured in continents and countries, the new series depicts the main physical features in colours, the varying heights of the land being shown in shades of green and brown, while the differing depths of the sea have several tints of blue.

The greatest care has been taken in preparing the contours from Governmental and other surveys. The contours selected for the land are:

From Sea Level to 600 feet. 600 to 1,200 feet. 1,200 to 3,000 feet 3,000 to 6,000 feet. 6,000 to 10,000 feet and upwards

The depths of the ocean marked are:

From Sea Level to 600 feet (100 fathoms). 600 to 6,000 feet (1,000 fathoms) 6,000 feet and deeper. The deepest parts of the ocean are also indicated

The bold outlines, the clear lettering, and the colouring of the rivers of the Original series of Bacon's Excelsior Maps (the most widely circulated and the best politically coloured school maps in existence) have all been retained in the Contour Edition, and the publishers believe that they will certainly prove as popular and acceptable as the original series, and rank as one of the most useful and satisfactory aids for teaching Geography yet issued.

The series includes Europe, Asia, Africa, North America, South America, Australia and British Isles.

PRICE 16s. EACH

A Section of the Map of Europe and Full Catalogues of other Teaching Aids for Geography will be sent free on application.

FOR THE RETAIL TRADE

THE GENERAL BOOK CATALOGUE has now been before the Booksellers of the United Kingdom and its Colonies THIRTY-TWO YEARS, and its undiminished popularity abundantly proves its value as an "aid to business." As before, the Catalogue will comprise the titles of such books as are generally found in the stock of a good Retail Bookseller, and also of many Standard Works, which though not always to be found in his stock, ought to have a place in a representative List of English Works; a COPIOUS INDEX also forms an important feature of the work. The Publisher of each book is shown by means of a Special Reference Key, which is supplied to Subscribers only. It consists of about 156 pages, crown 8vo, and will be supplied in sheets* (to SUBSCRIBERS only), at the following prices:—

For Quantities of 500 and upwards - - 20/- per 100 (Including Subscriber's own Title Page and Preface if required)

For less Quantities - - - - - 23/- per 100 (Subscriber's own Title Page and Preface if required, 3/- per 100 extra).

ALL ORDERS MUST BE RECEIVED ON OR BEFORE 30th SEPTEMBER, 1909.

Special Notice to Colonial Booksellers

In order to adapt the GENERAL BOOK CATALOGUE as completely as possible to the requirements of Colonial Booksellers, the Publishers have pleasure in announcing that they will again issue a LIST OF HAZELHURST. A Book for Girls.

By ENID LEIGH HUNT. Coloured Illustrations
In "Hazelhurst" we have the same captivating qualities that made "The Advent of Arthur" such a favourite with those girls who have right tastes and instincts in the matter of literature.

THE ADVENT OF ARTHUR. A Book for Girls.
By ENID LEIGH HUNT. Coloured illustrations.
The writers of books suitable for girls are not numerous. It is not given to every generation to have its Mrs. Ewing, its Mrs. Whitney, or its Miss Allcott; but in Enid Leigh Hunt, a great-granddaughter of Leigh Hunt, the charming essayist, there has appeared a writer for girls whose due place is in the front rank.

DARWIN AND MODERN SCIENCE. Essays in commemoration of the Centenary of the birth of Charles Darwin and of the fiftieth anniversary of the publication of The Origin of Species. Edited by A. C. SEWARD, Professor of Botany in the University of Cambridge.

Royal 8vo with 2 Portraits and 3 Plates, 18s. net

At the suggestion of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, the Syndics of the University Press decided in March, 1908, to arrange for the publication of these Essays. The authors were asked to address themselves primarily to the educated layman rather than to the expert, and it was hoped that the publication of the essays would serve the double purpose of illustrating the far-reaching influence of Darwin's work on the progress of knowledge, and the present attitude of original investigators and thinkers towards the views embodied in Darwin's works. Some of the authors have more especially concerned themselves with the results achieved by Darwin's own work, while others pass in review the progress of research on lines which, though unknown or but little followed in his day, are the direct outcome of his work.

A GRAMMAR OF THE OLD TESTAMENT IN GREEK ACCORDING TO THE SEPTUAGINT.
By H. ST. JOHN THACKERAY, M.A. VOL. I.—INTRODUCTION, ORTHOGRAPHY AND ACCIDENCE.

Crown 8vo. 8s. net

A complete and independent Grammar of the LXX. has until quite recently been wanting, and the student had to be content with such casual assistance as was given in the New Testament Grammars. The Septuagint, in view both of the period which it covers and the variety of its styles, ranging from the non-literary vernacular to the artificial Atticistic, affords the most promising ground for the investigation of the peculiarities of the Hellenistic or "common" language.

THE DIGEST OF JUSTINIAN. Translated by C. H. MONRO, M.A. VOL. II., containing Books VII to XV.

"It is difficult to express too high commendation for the scholarly rendering of the text. When the labour of translation of the digest is complete it cannot fail to confer a benefit on all who desire to seek the fountain of the law. Nowhere is there collected a greater mass of erudite information, of clear exposition and logical reasoning.

Booksellers and the Empire

THE Colonial Representatives of the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland have done excellent work; they are men who occupy important positions in the Colonial bookselling world—positions which enable them to defend the interests of the British book trade against unfair competition from without, as well as from within, our frontiers.

These Representatives at the various outposts of the Empire are in most cases provided with legal powers to act on behalf of the Association, when it is necessary to prevent the sale of pirated editions, prohibit their import, and in other ways protect British copyright.

British copyright is one of the most wonderful things in the world: it may be worth nothing or it may be worth a great deal; but it springs into existence instantaneously all over the Empire, and since America has given our authors those sixty days of grace—thanks chiefly to the President of our Publishers' Association — over nearly the whole civilised world also.

Since our last Export Number appeared an event has taken place which was reported in all countries and caused the eyes of the world to be turned towards New Zealand. Only a few weeks ago Mr. Asquith and Sir Edward Grey announced that our naval supremacy was more seriously threatened by Germany than they, or their naval advisers, had thought probable or possible. Only a day or two after this ominous announcement was made came that splendid offer of a Dreadnought from New Zealand, "and more if necessary." The mere offer has been worth many Dreadnoughts to the Empire. Every man and woman loyal to our flag realised more deeply all that our flag stands for. New Zealand, with a population little exceeding that of two London boroughs, spontaneously and unanimously offers such a sacrifice as two or three, perhaps four or five, years' surplus annual revenue in defence of the Empire; and New Zealand's example has been followed. Happy are the people that have their quiver full of such children, they shall not be ashamed when they speak with the enemies in the gate.

Time was when it might have seemed out of place for a trade paper to refer to international rivalries, but that time has gone for ever. "What can I do for the Empire?" ought to be the great question for all, and our publishers and booksellers are in a position to do more than almost any other class of the community: they are the producers and distributors of all that is good or evil, wise or unwise, in every branch of literature. The future of the Empire depends in a great measure on the nature and quality of its literature. A small bookseller in some remote corner of the Empire might not consider that his modest monthly order for books and periodicals could have any influence on the things which help or injure the Empire; if he does consider it he will see that it must do so.

What use to decry and protest against this pan-Germanic competition with pan-Britannic trade? Rather should our people, the greatest traders the world has ever known, admire and lift our hat to this new great rival, and at the same time roll up our sleeves a little higher and brace our belt a little tighter.

Many of those who read these lines will live to see Trieste on the Mediterranean a great German trading port and naval base, and probably also Antwerp, on the German Ocean.

Booksellers in all our dominions, at home as well as abroad, can help themselves and do incalculable good for the Empire by remembering that Germany's vast expansion during the last quarter of a century or so is due, in great measure, to the diffusion of technical knowledge. Lord Salisbury said that the wars of the future would be Tariff Wars. It would perhaps be nearer the real truth to say they will be wars for prosperity and wealth, in which those with most energy and most technical knowledge must be the victors. It does not require much stretch of imagination to see the good which would result if booksellers took more interest in technical handbooks and manuals. The complaint of our publishers of such works is that the booksellers will not stock them or push them, and yet grumble if the publishers go direct to the public likely to be interested in them. But it is not necessary to stock them in order to sell them. All that is necessary is for the bookseller to ascertain the nature of the chief trades or manufactures, or agricultural or mineral production of his district to ask his London agents for particulars of English or other works giving the latest information on those particular branches of industry, and then report them to those in his district interested in the subject. If he is a benefactor of his country who makes one blade of grass grow where there was none before, how much more is he who helps some trade or industry by supplying new information about it. The man who does this is unquestionably helping his country It is good to know that many are doing it.

A Warning Respecting Piratical Editions of Mr. Kipling's Works

[SINCE our first article was in type we have received the following interesting commentary on the first part of it on British Copyright in the following letter from Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—ED. P.C.]

SIR,—It has come to our notice that a firm calling itself The New York Book Company, 147, Fourth Avenue, New York, is offering to supply booksellers in this country with a series called "The Famous Fiction Library," which contains at least two copyright volumes by Mr. Rudyard Kipling. We wish to point out that anybody who purchases these piratical editions will render himself liable to prosecution, and that if any case of their importation comes to our knowledge, we shall instantly take legal proceedings against the offender.

Re Sevenpenny Copyright Novels in Cloth

A MEETING of some score or so of novel publishers was held at Stationers' Hall on Monday, May 3rd, at which Mr. C. J. Longman was elected Chairman. The following resolution was proposed by Mr. Methuen, seconded by Mr. Murray, and carried nem. con.

> "That in the opinion of this meeting of novel publishers it is inexpedient to issue at less than 1s. in cloth any 6s. novel within less than 5 years from the date of its first publication in book form."

The Chairman was requested to communicate this resolution to the Society of Authors.

The subjoined letter from Mr. Keay, President of the Associated Booksellers, to Mr. Longman, was read at the meeting.

Views of The Associated Booksellers

DEAR MR. LONGMAN,—As I notice you are taking an interest in the question of the effect of the 7d. novel on the sale of the 6s. editions, I feel it would be well for you to know the feeling, or rather opinion, of our Council on the matter.

From the first we have realised that sooner or later it must be detrimental, and have advised our members to be careful in giving orders, and wherever possible obtain some guarantee that should a cheap edition be published within a given period, allowance for stock should be made.

From experience of the last two years it is found that the 7d. editions of the best authors have made a very material difference in the sale of the 6s. editions, people refusing to give 4s. 6d. even for the new novels of those authors who have had 7d. editions of some of their writings; and in consequence also of the cheap editions it has been thought unsafe to make up stock of the author.

On the other hand, with works of authors like Marie Corelli, who refuse to allow 7d. editions, the sales keep up, the public realising they cannot be purchased in the cheap form, hence booksellers keep up stock.

It is very noticeable that even with the 7d. editions, all the best authors sell freely, and that second-rate hang. It remains, however, to be seen whether the author who appeals to the better class of reader, such as Maurice Hewlett, or Meredith, will sell in sufficient numbers to justify a cheap edition, or rather make one pay, or make up for the loss sustained by the stoppage of sale of the better edition.

Further, the class of people who buy works of authors of this description can well afford to pay more than 7d.

I should like to point out that at the interview we had with the Authors' Sub-Committee, we particularly stated that although we thought a two years limit should be the least period for a 7d. edition to be published in, there were many novels that it would be suicidal to publish at the expiration of that period.

Yours faithfully,

(Signed) HENRY W. KEAY.
President of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland.

Notes and Announcements

IT is most sincerely to be hoped that on this matter of the right of publication in cheap form there will be no question of boycotting, such action would do more to break up both the Publishers' and the Booksellers' Associations, than anything else.

"Mr. Opp," by Alice H. Rice, author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which has just been published here by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton, is certain of a large sale and a hearty welcome. Mr. Opp is a man of middle age, who is always going to make his fortune, and who in spite of continual reverses of fortune "keeps his end up," as we say in this country, in the most inspiring manner. We are delighted to have made the acquaintance of the eccentric, optimistic, chivalric and sterling Mr. Daniel Webster Opp.

Mr. John Milne has in the press an important work, "The Awakening of Turkey," by E. F. Knight, author of "Where Three Empires Meet," &c. The author has been engaged on the book since his return from Turkey and, having been in constant touch with the young Turk leaders throughout the recent crisis, has been enabled to deal, in his narrative, with recent stirring events. This work is to be illustrated.

"Studies in Wives" is the attractive title of a new volume which Mr. Heinemann announces for publication early this month. The author is Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, whose two last books, "The Pulse of Life" and "The Uttermost Farthing" achieved such popularity among readers of modern fiction.

The Ormond Press will publish in time for the hot weather "Drinks and How to Make Them."

Messrs. Hurst & Blackett have ready for immediate publication a fully illustrated volume by Mr. James Carter, the author of "Six Months in Europe and the Orient," being a record of a journey round the world with a starting point in Newfoundland, of which British possession Mr. Carter is sheriff. The title of his new book will be "In the Wake of the Setting Sun."

In their "New Home Series," with bright illustrated covers in colours, Messrs. John F. Shaw & Co., Ltd., have published "Hearts of Oak—a Story of Nelson and the Navy," by Gordon Stables, M.D., R.N.; "Mistress Margery: a Tale of the Lollards," by Emily S. Holt; "Mother-Meg," by Catharine Shaw; and "Half a Dozen Girls," by Anna Chapin Ray.

The volumes in Messrs. Macmillan's 1s. net Pocket Edition of their famous "English Men of Letters" Series now ready are:—Burns, by Principal Shairp; Byron, by Prof. Nichol; Carlyle, by Prof. Nichol; Chaucer, by Dr. A. W. Ward; Coleridge, by H. D. Traill. They have also just published in their "Cheap Editions of Popular Works" at 1s. net each:—Cleveden and In Exchange for a Soul, by Mary Linskill; Her Dearest Foe and Look Before you Leap, by Mrs. Alexander; Red as a Rose is She and Not Wisely but too Well, by Rhoda Broughton; Susan Drummond, George Geith of Fen Court, and Berna Boyle, by Mrs. Riddell.

The Navy for May contains articles on "German Naval Notes," "Analysis of the Navy Estimates," "Under the Red Ensign," Reviews of Naval Works, "The Navy League Sea-Training Home at Liscard," Branch Information, and other matters of interest, illustrations, &c.

On Monday Messrs. Rebman, Ltd., of 129, Shaftesbury Avenue, London, W.C., publish "Progressive Creation," by the Rev. Holden E. Sampson. They do not hesitate to pronounce it "one of the most remarkable books that has appeared in the last half century. It affords a theory of the origin of life, of being, of nature and forms, of evil, and of the earth and heavenly bodies, which has never before, in the history of modern literature, been propounded; a theory of the deepest interest and importance." It claims to be "A Reconciliation of Religion with Science," and is in 2 vols. Demy 8vo., 21s. net.

Mr. Unwin publishes an important work by Mr. H. C. Gauss, on "The American Government—its Organisation and Officials." It is likely to prove a valuable book of reference for those who desire full and authentic information on the subject.

"Human Documents," by Lionel North, to be published during this month by Mr. Robert Culley, is a series of illustrated sketches of London life, written from an intimate acquaintance with the problems of mission work in the Metropolis.

The classified catalogue of works published by Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co., for 1909, is an excellently arranged catalogue, and one which it is a pleasure to use. We wish that all publishers would issue their lists in a similar form. The classified list of books occupies nearly two hundred pages, and there is also an index to authors extending to thirty-two pages.

Among the new works to be published shortly by Messrs. George Allen & Sons are "The Lewis Bequest" at the National Gallery, by Maurice Brockwell, with forty illustrations from the pictures; "Irish People in Irish Places," by Jane Barlow, with many coloured and other illustrations by E. J. Sullivan; "Twenty Sporting Designs for Lovers of Horse and Hound," by G. A. Fothergill, limited to three hundred copies signed by the artist; Messrs. Allen have now ready a fifth impression of "Socialism," by Father B. Vaughan, S.J.

A pleasant little gathering took place last Monday at De Keyser's Hotel, when Mr. William B. Hadley, the manager of the New York house of Messrs. Cassell & Company, Ltd., was entertained to luncheon by Mr. Arthur Spurgeon and many of the heads of Messrs. Cassell's staff.

Messrs. Macmillan's announcements include a new edition of the first and second series, complete in one volume, of Palgrave's "The Golden Treasury of the Best Songs and Lyrical Poems of the English Language."

Mr. Culley will publish a volume by F. R. Smith, "Life's Working Creed," a series of practical discourses on the Epistle of St. James; and under the title of "The Unveiled Heart," a little volume containing the private prayers of the late Walter James, a young Wesleyan minister of brilliant promise, who died suddenly last September.

Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co. are publishing a little book by Mr. James Smith, well known in Australian literary circles, who believes that he has at last discovered the true author of the Letters of Junius. He was, according to Mr. Smith, "none other than Gibbon the historian." Somehow quite involuntarily the biblical query: "Why do the heathen rage and the people imagine a vain thing?" crops up on occasions of this kind.

Mr. Murray mentions in his new list three books which are of especial interest to keepers and lovers of gardens. The first is: "A History of Gardening in England" by the Hon. Mrs. Evelyn Cecil; the second is an Essay by Sir George Sitwell, entitled "On the Making of Gardens." No man probably is better acquainted than he with the old gardens of Italy. The third is by Mr. John Weathers, who has visited and made a special study of French gardens, and in "The French System of Intensive Cultivation" explains how the methods adopted in France are economically successful.

People who are fond of riding with the hounds will soon be able to add to their libraries one of the most elaborately illustrated books on hunting that has ever yet been produced. "Hunting in Britain," which is the title, embodies general history, a history of the sport in this country, and there will be biographies of the leading men connected with hunting. The publishers, Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., are doing their utmost to make this the leading book upon this exhilarating pastime, and it will be issued in a princely style that will make it an ornament to the library.

Modest, inoffensive Miss Mitford, the author of "Our Village," under the ban of the Censor of Stage Plays! It seems incredible, and yet in a work, entitled: "The Stage Censor," by G. M. G., it is shown that a play she wrote entitled "King Charles the First" was prohibited, and that, too, by George Colman, whose language and plays were full of oaths and blasphemy. "He disallowed the use of the word 'angel' in love-making; an angel," he said, "was a character in Scripture, and not to be profaned on the stage by being applied to a woman."

The Report of the Humanitarian League for 1908–1909 states that during the year the League issued a large number of publications, including pamphlets on "The Law of the Steel Trap," by Mr. George Greenwood, M.P., "The Secret of the Reptile House," by Mr. Henry S. Salt; "The Fate of the Fur Seal," by Mr. Joseph Collinson; "Sports, Legitimate and Illegitimate," by the Rev. J. Stratton; and "Why do Animals Exist," by Mr. Ernest Bell, M.A.

A new work by the Rev. John Wilson, D.D., Lausanne, Switzerland, author of "Ænigma Vitæ" and other works, will shortly be published by Messrs. T. & T Clark, Edinburgh. This work, entitled "How God Has Spoken" "deals with the Revelation of God in Nature, in Man, in Hebrew History, and in the Incarnation and Atonement of Jesus Christ, as the progressive and closely connected stages of a great unfolding unity, viewed in the light of the most recent science."

"The Nelson Whom Britons Love" is the title of a brochure written by the present Earl Nelson, which Messrs. Jarrold & Sons announce for early publication. The work will be of the utmost value, as the writer has first-hand knowledge of his subject and possesses great wealth of material. The illustrations number some twenty photographs of rare portraits, personal relics, &c., and include a section of Nelson's Log. The work will be published at the popular price of 1s. net.

"Harper's Machinery Book for Boys" will be issued within the next few days uniform with "Harper's Electricity Book for Boys," &c. The new volume explains the principles of simple mechanics; the various kinds of power and power transmission, and the kinds of tools, machinery, and processes connected with the working of different materials.

Colonel Kenyon-Slaney was a soldier and a politician blessed with high ideals of duty and qualities of character. His spheres of activity were many, and the account of his life, told by Mr. Walter Durnford, and to be published by Mr. Murray shortly, will be found of great interest, not only to the Colonel's friends on both sides of the House of Commons, but to the public generally, for his was a career full of interest as well as of deeds of duty done.

To see our statesmen as other nations see them is always interesting, and when such an interesting personality as Mr. Arthur Balfour is the one under examination it is doubly so. In the current number of the Revue des Deux Mondes, 32 pages are devoted by M. Augustin Filon to a sketch of the British Statesman "qui a été trois ans premier ministre et qui semble appelé à le redevenir." The sketch covers Mr. Balfour's whole career, including, of course, his literary work. "A Defence of Philosophic Doubt," and the "Foundations of Belief," of which a high estimate is pronounced. Referring to him when, as Secretary for Ireland, he first rose to reply to the taunts of the Nationalists, M. Filon says he disappointed at once the hopes of his assailants, who had defeated three previous Secretaries, and the fears of his friends, and realised the line of Sainte-Beuve:—

Beau, frais, souriant d'aise a cette vie amère.

M. Filon says that when after the General Election of 1911 or 1912 Mr. Balfour's piano "returns triumphantly to Downing Street," it will not be the only instrument he will bring with him. He thinks it does not require much pretension to the gift of prophecy to imagine that the King's Speech will announce—Tariff Reform, "cela va sans dire," a fleet equal to engaging without disadvantage the two strongest foreign fleets, universal military service on the Swiss system, Reform of the House of Lords by the House of Lords, Irish Agrarian Reform in the directions most favourable to the small farmers; the maintenance of the Triple Entente and the policy of peace and equilibrium in Europe. "This," says this French observer, who for twenty years has been a close student of our politics and politicians, "will be the policy of the Unionists "si elle triomphait aux élections prochaines." It is a big "Si," perhaps the biggest in our history.

We are asked to state that "The Show Girl" now being performed in London has nothing to do with Mr. Max Pemberton's new novel, "The Show Girl," which has just been published by Messrs. Cassell.

Tried Favourites Cookery Book

A NEW and revised edition of this popular Cookery Book has just been issued by the Publisher, Mr. J. B. Fairgrieve, of Edinburgh. This makes the 136th thousand, which is a good indication of the popularity of the book. The London Agents are Horace Marshall & Son, 125, Fleet Street, E.C.

The Publishers' Circle

First Annual Report

AFTER a series of about a dozen and a half informal luncheons held from time to time since 1906, and attended by various publishers, members of the Association and otherwise, those present at the luncheon on May 7th, 1908, unanimously resolved to form themselves into a club to be called "The Publishers' Circle"; a set of rules was thereupon drawn up and approved, and the present officers elected. Since that date twelve meetings have been held, making in all fourteen.

The Committee believe that the Circle has justified its existence. A successful dinner of publishers, booksellers, and authors was organised and duly took place in October. There is, undoubtedly, a more fraternal feeling among publishers generally, and members of the Circle frequently consult one another regarding the assertions of literary agents and other literary gents. Matters of interest discussed from time to time have been—the question of sending books on sale or return to exhibitions, the case of a newspaper raising its advertisement rates, the reservation of Canadian rights, the entertainment of booksellers attending the Annual Conference of the Booksellers' Association in London this year, and the possibility of publishers taking some united action regarding the terms upon which books, especially cheap net books, are supplied to certain large wholesale houses.

The Circle entertained to luncheon six members of the Council, four of whom were subsequently proposed as members. Eight members of the Council are now members of the Circle, including the three officers and the late vice-president.

Considering the nominal amount of the subscription to the Circle, the finances are in a satisfactory condition. A small deficit, caused by the expenses of the banquet exceeding the receipts, was defrayed by fourteen original members of the Circle.

Fifteen new members have been elected during the year; and the Committee regret to have to record the death of one of these, Mr. Warner Circuitt. The present membership is forty. This figure represents twenty-five different firms.

The annual meeting was held at DeKeyser's Hotel on May 6th.

Up-to-Date Athletic Handbooks

A NUMBER of booksellers are a little chary of taking up a stock of athletic handbooks, sometimes because they are afraid it is a little out of their own line, and other times because they have not found a ready sale for the older handbooks. The latter reason seems a conclusive one, but it is not so, when it is possible to obtain good reliable text-books, thoroughly up-to-date, and written by authors who are at the top of the tree in their own particular sphere, and also constantly being advertised in the papers.

The entry of "Health & Strength," Ltd., into the athletic publishing business, has caused a revolution in regard to books of this kind. They have made it their speciality to secure as authors the highest possible authorities in each sport. The consequence is that the authors' names and reputations give a tremendous impetus to the sales of the books and ensure a favourable response from the public.

Events have moved quickly in the field of athletics and sports, during the last few years and the ideas and rules of former days are utterly useless at the present time. As "Health & Strength," Ltd., only commenced to publish books of this kind three years ago, it follows that the text-books they publish are thoroughly up-to-date and contain the latest information.

The point of these remarks is, that no Colonial or home reader of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR need be afraid to order a supply of these books. From the trade point of view, they are undoubtedly good sellers, because they are well advertised by the publishers and are got up in an attractive style, with plenty of photographs and striking covers.

The Athletic Handbook department may possibly be a new one for many of our readers, but the field is certainly one well worth going into, in view of the large sale these books are enjoying. Full details will be found in our advertisement columns, and the address of "Health & Strength," Ltd., is 12, Burleigh Street, Strand, W.C.

Copyright Congress

THE forthcoming Congress of the Association Littéraire et Artistique will be held at the University of Copenhagen from June 21st to June 26th. It will be organised under the patronage of His Majesty the King of Denmark and the Danish Government. Among the principal subjects to be discussed are the report of the results of the Berlin Conference, the annual review of legislation relating to literary and artistic property, the unification of the duration of copyright, the literary and artistic rights in photographs and cinematographs, the protection of architectural works, and the moral rights of authors.

MENTION THE "P.C."—Our readers who order books, &c., they see mentioned or advertised in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

Brotherly Bookmen

The National Book Trade Provident Society

ON Friday, April 30th, the London and District Branch of the above Society held its second annual general meeting at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet Street.

The President of the Branch, Mr. F. A. Denny, was in the chair, supported by Messrs. W. M. Meredith, H. E. Alden, B. W. Matz, H. R. Ward, J. H. Crocket, W. Tyrrell, L. D. Carpenter, the Hon. Sec. (Mr. W. H. Archibold), the Hon. Treas. (Mr. E. J. Cooper) and a goodly company, numbering about one hundred members of the trade—booksellers and librarians.

In the course of a capital and optimistic speech, which was frequently applauded, Mr. Denny justified his optimism by stating that during the past year the membership of the Branch had increased by 150—the total membership now being 350 and, he added: "there are others waiting for election at our next Council meeting." Continuing he said: "The position of the Society to-day is a strong one—I may say a very strong one—but with your assistance it may become much stronger, especially if every member realises his responsibility and privilege in the matter and introduces new members.

The next point to which I would draw your attention is the extraordinary increase in the Capital Account, which has nearly doubled since last year—a result due to the efforts of the Committee of Management, who appointed a Sub-Committee consisting of Mr. Pentland, Mr. Blackwell, and myself, to spend some of our spare time calling on the publishers and making an appeal for financial help. The result of our efforts is before you in the printed list distributed throughout the room, and for the printing and production of which we are indebted to Mr. H. E. Alden. (Applause.)

And now with regard to our 'Odd Volume' about which I am sure you are anxious to hear something. You will be pleased to know that, by the accounts which have been made up to date, there is a profit of over £350 net. (Applause.)

That means an effort on someone's part, but it does not represent all the effort which could be made. (Hear, hear.) Number 2 will be published this year. What are you going to do for it? It all but sells itself. Number 1 was magnificent value; number 2 will be better, and the little help needed to push it and make the public buy it is yours to give—and I believe our appeal to you will not be in vain. (Hear, hear, and applause.)

For the splendid work he put into it, and for the truly fine result of his labours, may I mention to you our Honorary Editor, Mr. B. W. Matz? (Cheers and applause.)

I cannot close without expressing my thanks—and yours, I hope, too—to the Officers of the Branch who have worked so uncomplainingly, so unselfishly and so successfully for the good of the Branch and the Society in general.

WERNER LAURIE, CLIFFORD'S INN, LONDON

I should also like to tender my personal thanks to the members of my Committee for the steady and ready help they have given me, and without which my position would have been one of considerable difficulty and anxiety. (Applause.)

Finally, in appealing to you to secure more members, may I say that should you meet with waverers—the 'almost-persuaded' people—you may with safety remind them that the soundest business and apparently most assured situation is uncertain in this world, which is made up of uncertainties. (Hear, hear.) And if this tempt them not, remind them of their brotherhood, appeal to their finer instincts, and make them realise that, if for no other reason (and they could not have a better) they should join for the sake of those less fortunate than themselves who, through unavoidable calamity or misfortune, find themselves reduced to poverty and distress." (Hear, hear and prolonged applause.)

Votes of thanks were then passed to Mr. Denny for his splendid work as President, to the Auditors (Messrs. A. Denny and Whittaker), to the Hon. Sec. (Mr. Archibold), and the Hon. Treas. (Mr. Cooper), also to the Committee, and especially to Messrs. Chatto & Windus for the use of their offices for the meetings of Committee—all of which were carried with enthusiasm.

Mr. Denny, having announced his retirement from the Presidential chair, proposed that Mr. W. M. Meredith be elected President for the coming year. Mr. Alden seconded, and, judging by the reception accorded Mr. Meredith, the proposal gave unbounded satisfaction to all present.

Mr. Meredith, in response, said: "Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen. I thank you for your very kind and enthusiastic reception of my name and for the honour you have conferred upon me by electing me your Branch President for the coming year. From what I have seen and heard to-night, it appears to me that the position is no sinecure, especially as I have to follow so able and so genial a man as Mr. Denny. (Cheers.) The qualification, I take it, for President of this London Branch is that one must be capable of ungrudging work. I am not afraid of work, indeed I like it, and I can assure you that if work can accomplish anything you may count on me." (Cheers and applause.)

On a show of hands it was decided to re-elect the Committee en bloc, with the addition of Mr. F. P. Minoggio.

The names of the Committee are—Messrs. Crocket, Burgher, Hodges, Tyrrell, Mitchell, Hawkins, Ward, Peddie, Carpenter, Lowson, Hardy, Matz, Wilkinson, Trotman, and F. A. Denny—the last named being also elected as Past President, an honour which he acknowledged.

Both Mr. Archibold and Mr. Cooper expressed their thanks for the continued confidence of the members, and spoke hopefully of the Society's future, and, incidentally, made a further appeal for individual effort on the part of members.

Prior to the re-arrangement of the room for the ensuing smoking concert, Mr. Denny reminded the members of the proposed visit to Birmingham on May 21st, and expressed the hope that as many as could would make an effort to attend so as to give the necessary fillip and encouragement to those who are about to establish a branch of the Society there.

By this time the attendance had risen to over 200, and a most enjoyable concert followed, for the arrangement of which the thanks of the meeting were conveyed to Mr. Mitchell.

Mr. H. S. Parry was the accompanist, and also contributed two pianoforte solos. The other ten items on the programme were given by Messrs. R. Leach (songs), Ted Honeyman (Humorist), E. Beaumont (songs), Charles Grossmith (songs), and Bert Meredith (banjo sketch and songs). All were recalled for every item, so that it was a late hour before the programme was concluded.

Mr. Denny thanked the artists in the name of the company assembled, for the pleasure they had given, and was, in turn, thanked for his Chairmanship of the evening.

Call for a volunteer to lead the singing of "God Save the King" resulted in a unanimous cry for Mr. Clifford, who, modestly protesting, was finally induced to give the company the benefit of his rich tenor. Unfortunately he forgot the third line of the solo, but needless to say the deficiency was promptly supplied by the audience generally, who finished off with a hearty chorus and patriotic cheers. R.

Our Export Number

British Book Exports and Imports

THE following figures, taken from the Government Blue Book, called "The Annual Statement of the Trade of the United Kingdom with Foreign Countries and British Possessions" (the last published) give a very encouraging test of the healthy condition of the Export of Books, and it bears out our rough calculation made in our Export Issue for 1907, that this trade was increasing at about Two thousand Pounds a Week or £100,000 a year. Here are the figures:—

	BOOK EXPORTS Value. £	BOOK IMPORTS Value. £
1901	1,552,772 ...	251,167
1903	1,752,581 ...	288,571
1904	1,836,141 ...	314,500
1905	1,916,421 ...	299,593
1906	2,028,560 ...	277,837
1907	2,084,152 ...	307,128

Of course these figures do not give any fair idea of the extent to which works of our authors are read abroad, because so many of their books are printed in the United States by arrangement with American publishers or by book pirates there; we pirate some American books in the same way.

The National Book Trade Provident Society

Extracts from the Report of the Committee of Management for the Year ending December 31st, 1908

THE Committee of Management have pleasure in drawing attention to the very satisfactory progress the Society has made during that period.

At the close of the year the books of the Society registered 553 members, of which number 482 were ordinary members and 71 life members, an increase on the previous year of 131 ordinary and 12 life members, whilst it will be seen that the Funds of the Society have increased during the year from £678 18s. 8d. to £1,141 8s. 4d. These facts the Committee submit as showing an extremely healthy state of affairs and as indicating that such a society, working in the field of our trade, was greatly needed, and is thoroughly justifying its existence.

The Society's sphere of action has been greatly extended during the last year and its Funds increased through the agency of enthusiastic members of the Committee and of the Society.

Branches are already in excellent working order in Oxford, Cambridge, Liverpool, Edinburgh, and London, and there is every hope that Birmingham and Glasgow will follow suit this year. A notable incident during the year was the welcoming and entertaining at Stationers' Hall of the booksellers' assistants from Paris, a compliment which is likely soon to be reciprocated.

Your Committee earnestly appeal to the booksellers in the British Isles to use their powers to organise new branches in the larger commercial towns of the United Kingdom. The Society desires to spread its influence everywhere, and any help that can be offered in the direction of forming new branches will be welcomed by the Committee.

Great Success of "The Odd Volume"

During last autumn the London Branch, at its own risk and on its own responsibility, published, under the able Editorship of Mr. B. W. Matz, in aid of the general funds of the Society, the first number of an annual entitled "The Odd Volume," which will, it is anticipated, realise over £300 profit when the final accounts of its sale are completed. The result of this enterprise will be shown in the Balance Sheet for 1909. The undertaking has proved a splendid success from every point of view, and the Central Committee desire to express their great appreciation of the enthusiasm of the London Branch in its initiation of so excellent a scheme so well carried out, which it is believed will bring a substantial annual sum to the Society's funds.

The Committee also wish to record their indebtedness and to offer their best thanks to the Authors, Artists, Blockmakers, Publishers, and all others whose gratuitous assistance made "The Odd Volume" possible.

To Mr. Matz the special thanks of the Committee are due for the skilful manner in which he filled the honorary post of Editor, and for the strenuous work involved in the production of what everybody must agree was a wonderful shillingsworth.

The Committee take this opportunity of appealing to booksellers and their assistants for renewed and extended efforts in helping to make the second number, which will be published this autumn, a greater success than the first.

The Annual Meeting

The Annual Meeting is to be held at the Imperial Hotel, Temple Street, Birmingham, on May 21st, at 7.30, to be followed by a social evening and concert.

The Committee have selected Birmingham as the place for meeting this year in order to stimulate interest in the Society in that city. It is earnestly hoped that all who can will be present to assist in this effort to form a strong branch in a district where the Society has at present only a very limited membership.

Special arrangements have been made at the Hotel for members of the Society who will be staying in Birmingham for the night. Those who desire accommodation should kindly communicate with the Secretary, Mr. R. W. Thornton, 17, Philpot Lane, E.C.

In the name of the Committee,

REGINALD W. THORNTON.
Secretary.

Oxford University Press Warehouse Burnt Out

THE large warehouse of the Oxford University Press in Blackhorse Yard, Aldersgate Street, was destroyed by fire early on Friday morning, May 7th. The damage is partly covered by insurance.

Edinburgh Book Notes

BY EDINA

"THE study window wants cleaning," said the booklover to his friend by way of apology. It was allowed to get dirty so as to hide the poverty of the shelves—shelves which one time, not so long ago, were his pride and the admiration of his friends. The inundation of cheap books had caused him to lose heart, and where once only those books he worked hard to buy, and enjoyed reading when he possessed, stood in stately grandeur there were rows of sixpenny and shilling editions in tawdry garishness—and he was ashamed.

The cause of his shame was that he had been tempted by the low prices to toady himself into the belief that he could enrich his mental capacity by a larger choice of dainties in literature. Did not the whole range of the world's thought and mental endowment now repose within his view as he sat and talked with his friends on the value of literature to life? Yet he felt he was poor in spirit, for the old hunger had been appeased, the appetite was vitiated, by the constant flitting from flower to flower. The sweetness had cloyed his digestive organs, and his health suffered.

He longed for the old ways and the old days, but they will never come back. He knows it, and is sick at heart.

Almost every shop window in Edinburgh bears testimony to the moral of my parable. We are building up libraries of technical excellence; but we are rearing fabrics with flimsy materials, and when the storm breaks and beats upon the literary horizon, they will be swept off by the flood; for we have disregarded the teaching of the classical masters, and are content to parade our literary tastes at the expense of that nobility of spirit which is the secret of true greatness in life. Clothing skeletons is not making a world of living men and women. Literature is not measured by the yard. It is not the volume, but the intensity of the current that is effective as power.

"Of the making of books there is no end," but the world is not enriched by the bookmaker. Since the days of Ancient Egypt we have only succeeded in one thing. The current has been made more effective because made more intense. It is the old story we have always to rehearse. Our re-creations are products of the fittest—types that survive. Speculation in futures may be debarred by law, but the present will always turn the past into the future.

We reap not the seed we sow, but the product of it. This is why advertising pays. It is a test of the ability of the sower—his faith in the fertility of the seed—his acumen in selecting the soil best fitted for the purposes of growth and healthy development. As in nature the aim of all life is procreation, so in literature. The old times return again no more, but the new times coming will be according to our ability of absorbing the past in the present output of books. If we disregard the old traditions and destroy the old landmarks, we shall suffer for our neglect. The future will condemn us.

3, ADAM STREET, ADELPHI, LONDON, W.C.

Easter-tide has come and gone uneventually here, and pessimistic booksellers still wring their hands in the waters of despair, but the optimist is keeping a keen eye on the present trend of publishing, for already there is the sound of abundance of rain. The three years of famine and depression are at an end, so set thy house in order. There is no "corner" in literary ability, and in the mansions of the bookish there is room enough and to spare. The best of friends are those whose minds we can assimilate, and athletics and motors are soon to give place to the saner enjoyments of the study shelves, where men differ without quarrelling, and the wicked cease from troubling the weary soul.

Let us gird up our loins for the struggle lying before us this season, and we shall come forth greatly strengthened by the trials we have endured.

Mr. Swinburne in "Book Auction Records"

In the January to March No. of his always useful "Book Auction Records," Mr. Karslake devotes a page or two to some notes on Swinburne which are interesting. We were about to quote them but that would be poaching on Mr. Karslake's preserves. It seems Mr. K. met the poet once or twice, and on one occasion had the benefit of a two-hours' disquisition on the poetry of the Elizabethan age from Mr. S. all to himself.

Oxford and Cambridge for French Readers

"Les Villes d'Art Célèbres." Oxford et Cambridge par Joseph Aynard, agrégé de l'Université, ancien élève de l'École Normale Supérieure. 1 vol. in-4°, illustré de 92 gravures. Broché 3 fr. 50 relié 4 f. 50. (Envoi franco contre mandat-poste à H. Laurens, éditeur, 6, rue de Tournon. Paris VIe.)

Le charme de ces deux villes célèbres qu'on a essayé de présenter dans ce livre, au public français pour la première fois, réside surtout dans les souvenirs de plusieurs siècles d'histoire. Ce sont ces souvenirs qu'on a rappelés en les commentant par les monuments de chaque époque.

On n'a pas oublié qu'Oxford et Cambridge sont avant tout des villes d'Université et c'est la vie des collèges qui tient la plus grande place dans ce récit sommaire mais puisé aux meilleures sources et qu'animent des textes choisis parmi les plus significatifs et les plus vivants, dans les chroniqueurs et les historiens d'Oxford.

On sent que livre de M. Joseph Aynard est l'œuvre de quelqu'un qui ne s'est pas contenté de visiter les Universités anglaises, mais qui y a vécu et qui a pu ainsi saisir certains traits qui ne se révèlent qu'avec le temps.

L'illustration, entièrement préparée sur place, comprend non seulement les aspects les plus pittoresques de tous les collèges, mais des reproductions d'œuvres d'art peu connues en France, vitraux, tapisseries, portraits historiques. Les détails d'architecture y tiennent aussi une grande place et comme les deux villes constituent comme un répertoire de l'architecture anglaise depuis l'époque romane jusqu'au néo-gothique, le volume représentera utilement l'Angleterre dans la déjà riche collection des Villes d'Art célèbres.

The "All Red" British Empire Series

We have pleasure in calling the attention of our readers, especially in the British Dominions and Colonies abroad to the new enterprise of Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd.—a series of handsome volumes dealing with the various countries of the Empire. "The Commonwealth of Australia," by the Hon. Bernard Wise, is the first volume to appear in the "All Red" series. It is hoped that the respective volumes, by reason of their fulness and accuracy of information, will tend to the advancement of the Imperial idea. The books will have a double interest, namely, for the general reader, and for those who live in the Colonies, or propose to emigrate from England.

We have only had time to glance at Mr. Wise's volume on Australia just received, but it certainly appears to be admirably done in every respect.

The Renaissance Library

MR. J. M. DENT has for a long time been engaged in producing a type which should be free from what he considers the rigidity of even the best modern founts.

His new type which has been specially cut from designs modelled on the letters of the great Venetian printer Jenson, is now complete; and Mr. Dent hopes that it will be found simpler and more beautiful than any type designed in our time. He intends to use it in the printing of "The Renaissance Library," a series of English, French, Spanish and Italian masterpieces of the golden age of European poetry, which will be produced in the most beautiful and simple manner possible, and issued at a reasonable price. The first volume, to be issued shortly, will be "Hero and Leander," by Christopher Marlowe and George Chapman, from the edition of 1598, edited with an introduction by Edward Hutton.

A Sikh Officer who Served the King:

His Views of London

MY host, a very handsome Sikh native officer, had recently taken his pension, and was of a type which is fast vanishing under the breath of education. Bluff and outspoken even for a Britisher, he was doubly so for a native.

Later we sat in the shamiana and he put down an astounding number of whiskies and—lemonades; and the welkin rang with his Berserk laughter, and I heard many strange tales of things I could never have heard about under more usual surroundings. It was only a year or so previous that he had been in London as orderly officer to the King.

There were difficulties about food, owing to the extraordinary orders prohibiting the beheading of sheep with sharp swords in the region of Eccleston Square.

"They told us that sheep might certainly be killed in any way we liked, but beyond the town. But, Sahib, what a town! Why, it was a day's march into the country. I sent Jiwan Singh, my orderly, who can speak English, to find out. He left at sunrise and returned at sunset, having been helped much by the police. After that we had to do with hens, fine birds, but expensive."

From "A Winter Venture," by X., in Blackwood's Magazine for May.

The King and "Dromina"

DURING His Majesty's recent visit to Malta the King honoured the mystic romancist, John Ayscough, by accepting from him the gift of his latest work, "Dromina" (reviewed by us on April 17th), saying graciously that it was a pleasure to him to receive the newest book by an author of whom he heard so much good. "Dromina" has already a circle of Royal readers and admirers (naturally, as it is nick-named "The Last Book of Kings") and has been distinguished by several continental academies of literature.

French Book Production in 1908

IN 1908 there were deposited for copyright purposes at the Bureau de la Librairie of the Ministry of the Interior, Paris, 8,805 works, or 107 more than in the previous year; but, as the Publishers' Weekly points out these figures are 2,268 less than the number of titles recorded in the Bibliographie de la France, many of the latter being ephemeral works. The principal classes of books according to numbers are:—

Religion	617
Law	556
Philosophy	187
Political and Social	566
Military and Naval	293
Natural Sciences	225
Medicine	931
History, &c.	1,295
Literature (including 515 Fiction)	1,700
Education	1,005

German Book Production in 1908

THE following statistics of the book production in Germany during 1908 were prepared by J. C. Hinrichs, the publisher of the official book-trade bibliography:—

	1907	1908
1. Bibliography, Library Economy, Encyclopædias, Completed Works, Collected Works, Publications of Societies and Universities	623	649
2. Theology	2,549	2,566
3. Law and Political Science	2,922	3,032
4. Medicine	1,849	1,785
5. Natural Sciences, Mathematics	1,556	1,754
6. Philosophy, Theosophy	743	712
7. Education, Books for the Young	4,210	4,203
8. Language and Literature	1,953	1,772
9. History	1,269	1,317
10. Geography, Atlases & Charts	1,555	1,436
11. Military Science	693	703
12. Commerce Industrial Arts, Railways	2,014	2,047
13. Architecture and Engineering	1,001	1,074
14. Domestic Economy, Agriculture and Forestry	932	1,007
15. Belles-Lettres (Drama and Popular Literature)	4,195	4,162
16. Art	869	903
17. Directories, Calendars, Year Books	616	617
18. Miscellaneous	524	578
Total	30,073	30,317

These statistics, it should be borne in mind (says The Publishers' Weekly), do not, as Professor Münsterberg seems to believe, represent the actual output of German books intended for distribution by the book-trade, inasmuch as the figures include many pamphlets, theses, leaflets and ephemeral matter issued by universities and other educational institutions, which in other countries are not regarded as books, but which help considerably to swell the figures of German book production. The actual number of books intended for sale to the public is probably nearer 10,000 than 30,000.

Specimen Copies.—We shall be pleased to send free of charge a few specimen copies of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR to any who will apply for same and distribute them to the best advantage. Send a postcard to Manager, PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR Office 19 Adam Street, Adelphi, London, W.C.

A Talk about "Notes from Sotheby's"

I WANT every bookseller who subscribes to "Book-Auction Records" to possess a copy of "Notes from Sotheby's." Not altogether for my own sake, for the work was a labour of love, done because I saw that it ought to be done and not caring very much whether it "paid" or not, but because my experience in bookselling showed me that Sotheby's catalogues contained a mine of hidden wealth which only required digging out for it to be of immense service to every seller of books. It is a volume the value of which to a bookseller cannot be realised by a glance at the title-page, or from a cursory glimpse of the contents. It is necessary to take it up when one is quiet and undisturbed, and begin to read from the first page onwards, and after an hour or two of this process you will begin to see that every note is teaching you something about your business that you did not know before, however experienced you may be. A London bookseller told me that within five minutes of receiving his copy he found a note in it which trebled the value of a book which he was putting in his next catalogue, and after using that note he still had 2,031 other notes, some of which must, of course, some day, whether late or early, be of value to him. If, among those who receive "Notes from Sotheby's" there are any who are afraid to risk the expenditure of a guinea on the strength of their own judgment—and mine—then they can acquire the volume upon such terms as will not make them realise that they are spending money. In other words, you can have it on the instalment plan.—Mr. Frank Karslake on his interesting and useful work "Notes from Sotheby's."

A "Paper" Prophecy about Newfoundland

IF Newfoundland continues her present policy of disposing of the trees on vast tracts of land, the result can be foretold with certainty. The attention of paper-makers has been drawn to this source of supply, and already an immense acreage of trees has been sold for pulp-wood, while negotiations for more timber are pending. Denude that island as some regions on the Continent have been denuded of timber, and it will indeed become a barren, desolate spot. Newfoundland will, on the other hand, become a recreation-ground for the two great English-speaking nations if her natural resources are conserved. With the establishment of improved facilities for the transportation and accommodation of sportsmen and anglers, the revenue from these sources alone will increase steadily, until it becomes an important item on the right side of the island's ledger. Her barrens and her streams are free to all, and ordinary precautions will ensure satisfactory caribou and ptarmigan hunting and salmon and trout fishing. The commercial fishermen will suffer no great hardship if prevented from jeopardising the salmon and trout supply by netting river mouths.—Forest and Stream.

The "Evergreen" Novels

WE have much pleasure in reproducing a block of one of the cover designs of Messrs. Alston Rivers' new Shilling "Evergreen" Novels. This new series of fiction is neatly bound in a delicate green cloth, with pictorial design. The stories given in these volumes will be really successful copyright works, possessing merit apart from the ordinary run of fiction, which is read and then put aside, of no further interest or use. We think that a list of the volumes which are now ready will be of use to the trade:—A London Girl—Closed Doors and The Rainy Day, from "Tales from the Great City"—A Pixy in Petticoats, by John Trevena—The House of Merrilees, an excellent mystery story, by Archibald Marshall—Peter Binny—Undergraduate, by Archibald Marshall, containing up-to-date and trustworthy information on University life—Hugh Rendal, a public school story, by Lionel Portman; and Mrs. Erricker's Reputation, by Thomas Cobb. The following books are in preparation:—Arminel of the West, by John Trevena—The Meddler, by H. de Vere Stacpoole—The Adventures of Count O'Connor, by Henry Stace; and The Wife, by Horace W. C. Newte.

Cricket in the Trade

Longman C.C. v. Hamlet C.C.

THE above match, played at E. Dulwich on Saturday last, ended in a victory for Longmans by 58 runs. Both teams were short. For the winners Hobbiss, Ainsworth and Wiltshire batted well, the latter also bowling excellently, taking 6 wickets for 27 runs, whilst Cutbush took the remaining 3 wickets at a cost of 10 runs. Scores:—Longman C.C., 103; Hamlet C.C., 45.

Sweetness and Light at Messrs. Methuen's

IT may be interesting to our readers to know that Messrs. Methuen, the well-known publishers, have already forestalled the operation of the Daylight Saving Bill. The whole of their staff, at their own request, begin work at 8 instead of 9 o'clock, and the office is closed at 5 instead of 6 o'clock. An extra hour is thus gained for recreation. More than one thousand other British firms have also adopted this method of utilising more free sunlight in place of costly artificial light. As it is not much use preaching what you do not practise, we are endeavouring to introduce Mr. Willett's very happy idea into our own offices and business.

The P.C. Adopts the Daylight Saving Idea

SINCE writing the previous note we put the matter to the vote of our staff, and it was unanimously carried that during the summer months we would work from eight to five, instead of from nine to six. So far, the arrangement works admirably.

A Sign of Decay in the French Novel

A SIGN of decay in the French novel (says The Chicago Dial) seems discernible in certain recent developments in literary Paris. To encourage writers of fiction and to stimulate their best endeavours—and, possibly, for a less disinterested purpose also—a literary periodical of that city has founded a prize of three thousand francs to be awarded annually to the young author who shall have produced the best novel in the preceding two years, the verdict to be rendered by a jury of Academicians. The degree of youthfulness necessary to entitle one to compete is not indicated in the report that has reached us. M. Paul Bourget, who has turned of late from fiction to the drama, and has produced two plays of merit, writes an interesting letter on the novelist's art as compared with the dramatist's. "At the time when I was entering upon a literary life," he tells us, "we all adopted a regular cult for the art of the novel, which was only equalled by our disdain for the art of the theatre; and we had no difficulty in showing what differences there were between the paintings of a Balzac, a Flaubert, a Goncourt, and those of their dramatic rivals. Our immediate predecessors, Zola, Daudet, Ferdinand Fabre and Cladel, thought as we did, and about 1880 all the youthful French exponents of literature seemed to be novelists exclusively. The wind has turned since then, and there has been an extraordinary growth of dramatic works, which shows how foolish was our former disdain of the dialogue form. And judging from signs, it seems to be the other form—the narrative—against which the injustice of the newcomers is now levelled."

"There are few to rival The People's Library of the House of Cassell, whether for price or for finish. The volumes are charmingly bound in cloth . . . and in a handsome cover of limp leather.—DAILY TELEGRAPH.

CASSELL & CO., Ltd., London, New York, Toronto & Melbourne.

A Defence of Classical Education

"Our Debt to Antiquity" is the title of a translation by Professor H. A. Strong, of the University of Liverpool, and Mr. Hugh Stewart, of Trinity College, Cambridge, of a course of lectures given by Professor Zielinski to the classical students of the University of St. Petersburg. It is a defence of classical education, and a forecast of the irreparable injury which the abolition of the study of antiquity would inflict upon modern culture. The interest of the book lies not merely in the novelty of the arguments of the Professor, but in the light which it throws upon Russian views of education, and on the arguments which appeal to Russian students. The naiveté with which these views are expressed is typically Russian; and the quaint similes and metaphors with which the author illustrates his subject add interest to the work. The translators have added some notes and explanations for the benefit of English students. The book will be published by Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., as a volume in their "English Library."

Cassell's Royal Academy Pictures and Sculpture

The Rembrandt-type photogravure of the picture by Frank Dicksee, R.A., "Flowers in June," a young woman carrying a bowl of roses, is a charming frontispiece to Messrs. Cassell's superb reproductions of Royal Academy pictures. The size of the work, 9 by 12 inches, permits of very adequate black and white reproductions, and the work itself has been very adequately done. It is certain to have a very hearty welcome from the art-loving public all over the Kingdom.

Centenary of the Autocrat of the Breakfast Table

The day of Oliver Wendell Holmes's birth was August 29th, 1809, and preparations are being made to celebrate the event at Cambridge, Massachusetts. It is a celebration which should have an international significance. The debt of British booklovers to the United States is nothing compared with the debt of the United States booklovers to this country, but we do owe them something for the author of the Breakfast Table Series. A venerable lady remarked to the writer the other day that she had been dipping recently into the Poet at the Breakfast Table, and she regretted to find that the years which bring the philosophic mind had not confirmed her earlier impression of the book. Doubtless the taste for O. W. H. is a phase, just as youth has its Carlyle phase, and its Wordsworth phase, but who among us cannot look back upon many delightful hours spent in the society of the occupants of that immortal boarding-house?—Edinburgh Evening Dispatch.

"Elizabeth Visits America"

The accompanying illustration is a picture of "Elizabeth" who will figure in Mrs. Glyn's new work, shortly to be published by Messrs. Duckworth & Co., as "The Marchioness of Valmond." With reference to this work the publishers say:—

"We shall soon renew acquaintance with Mrs. Eleanor Glyn's first and happiest creation. This writer's new book soon to be issued, with the title 'Elizabeth Visits America,' will offer an interesting comparison with its predecessor. Can Mrs. Glyn go back to the frivolous exuberance of her heroine after the realism of 'On the Rocks' and 'Three Weeks?' Elizabeth indulges in some frank criticisms, as may be gathered from a letter the author recently published, in which she says: 'Do not think that she is going to find fault with all Americans, she will presently see numbers of things to admire, but no picture of a country is good unless it shows all sides . . . so I hope they won't be offended and will understand that no offence anywhere is meant in the book. There are no actual portraits, though types are evolved from groups.'"

When authors send out a warning beforehand that they do not intend to offend anyone—look out for squalls.

American Book-Trade Notes

(From the New York Publishers' Weekly)

Tribute to Mr. Charles T. Dillingham

The American Booksellers' League on April 21st gave a big dinner to celebrate Mr. Charles T. Dillingham's fifty years of service in the book trade.

The tribute to Dillingham was as deserved as it was heartily tendered. Among the men who have served in the profession during the past half century, Mr. Dillingham has always been distinguished for his loyal devotion to the best interests of the trade, for his warm-hearted sympathy, for his helpfulness and inspiration to the younger men and for his generous and disinterested friendship. It was a happy thought of the Booksellers' League to call out this expression of regard and affection at a time when it still has the power to cheer the heart of the recipient, upon whose shoulders, we are pleased to note, the years of labour, trials and tribulations rest lightly. His hold upon the loving memories of his friends in the trade is as strong as ever and will endure long beyond his generation. We join his many friends in the trade throughout the country—the gathering the other night represented but a delegation of the host of his friends—in the hope that Mr. Dillingham may continue for many years to be the Charles T. Dillingham so dear to the book trade.

Mention the "P.C."—Our readers who order books &c., they see mentioned or advertised in The Publishers Circular will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

Russian Copyright Bill

The Copyright Bill, relating to works of literature, music, art and photography, passed the first and second readings in the Duma on April 20th. It extends protection to authors of countries with which Russia concludes literary conventions.

Personal Notes

George Edmund Platt, Publisher and European representative of The Reilly & Britton Co., has established permanent offices in Craven House, Kingsway, London, England.

A. D. Power, Manager of Isaac Pitman & Sons' London house, is paying a visit to the United States, and expects to arrive in New York on about May 14th. His address will be in care of Isaac Pitman & Sons, 31, Union Square. Mr. Power would be obliged if proofs of books, the English rights of which American publishers have for disposal, were sent to him at that address.

The following members of the book trade sailed for Europe, by the Carmania, on April 24th—Alexander Grosset, of Grosset & Dunlap; Edward J. Clode; George McLeod, of McLeod & Allen, and Mr. Kernochan, of T. Eaton & Co., Ltd., both of Toronto; Arthur Brentano, of Brentano's, and W. B. Hadley, American representative of Cassell & Co. Mr. Leadbeater sailed on the same day, also for London, by the Baltic of the White Star Line.

Sale of Rare Books and MSS.

The sale of rare books, MSS. and drawings held by Messrs. Hodgson, on April 29th and 30th, resulted in keen competition, and good prices were realised throughout the sale; the total amount being over £2,060. The chief prices realised on the Blofeld Collection were—Arnold's Chronicle, 1st edit., 1502, £60 (Maggs); a Fourteenth Century MSS. Liber Custumarum, £30 (Quaritch); a copy of "Great Britain's Treasures," by Sir Nicolas Halse [ca. 1640], £10 (Sotheran); Wallis' London's Armory, Presentation Copy, 1677, £12 5s. (Stevens); a small edition of Horace, Edinburgh, 1731, in a contemporary Scottish binding, £6 (Tregaskis); Boccaccio's Decameron, 5 vols., 1757–61, £18 (Maggs); Fielding's Tom Jones, first issue of the 1st edit., £7 (Bain); Beaumont and Fletcher's Works (wanting the portrait) 1647–52, £15 (Sabin); Boydell's Shakspeare Gallery, unbound, 1803, £19 5s. (J. Rimell); Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, 8 vols., 1817–30, £17 10s. (Thorp); Seven small Water-Colour drawings by J. Skelton, £23 10s. (Daniell), and seven drawings of Canterbury by the same, £13 8s. A Document signed by Oliver Cromwell, also from the Blofeld Collection, brought £7 (Maggs), and a Warrant bearing the sign manual of Henrietta Maria, £7 10s. (same buyer). The other properties included—Engravings from the Works of Sir Thomas Lawrence, £95 (Vicars); The Houghton Gallery, 2 vols., £25 10s. (Rimell); five volumes of Engravings by Piranesi, £24; Buck's Views in England and Wales, £31 (Quaritch); Le Sacre de Louis XV., in a morocco binding by Padeloup, £29 10s. (Edwards); the Luxembourg Gallery, 1701, contemporary French morocco, £17 15s. (Quaritch); Book of Architectural Designs by Barozzio de Vignole, 1767, £13 5s. (Leighton); Euclid, Editio Princeps, 1482, £23; Incunabula, on vellum [ca. 1490] £19 (Leighton); a Fifteenth Century Horæ, on vellum, with miniatures, £32 (Leighton); the 1511 Venice Edition of Ptolemy, £21 (Quaritch); two Rare Tracts on the Indian Wars, 1676, £30 (Sabin); Wood's New England's Prospect, 1635, £24 (Stevens); the Mohawk Prayer Book, 1787, £9 10s. (Maggs); and an early mezzotint Portrait of Washington, 1775, £12 15s. (Maggs). The copy of "King Glumpus" in the original wrapper brought £96, while a common edition of Johnson's Rasselas, fcap., 1818, with a painting on the fore-edge, was purchased by Messrs. Bumpus for £7 5s.

Some high prices were also realised at the sale by the same auctioneers on Tuesday last, when a volume of rare coloured plates by Alken sold for £40 (Spencer), and the Edinburgh Edition of Stevenson's Works, 30 vols., £40 10s. (private).

"The Jew and Human Sacrifice," "Bahaism," &c.

Early in May Messrs. Cope & Fenwick, of 16, Clifford's Inn, will publish an important volume entitled "The Jew and Human Sacrifice." This work, written by Dr. Strack, Regius Professor of Theology at the University of Berlin, excited enormous interest in Germany, where it ran through no less than eight editions. The English version published by Cope & Fenwick has been revised by the author, and contains much additional matter. Dr. Strack vindicates the Jewish race against the horrible charge of ritual murder, and enters upon an exhaustive examination of the questions connected with the sacrifice of the blood of men and of animals.

To their attractive series of Christian Liturgies Messrs. Cope & Fenwick are adding two new volumes, "The Mozarabic Liturgy" (translated and edited by F. C. Eeles, F.R.Hist.S., Secretary of the Alcuin Club) and "The Ambrosian Liturgy," by Dr. Cuthbert Atchley. Both these volumes are of special interest. "The Mozarabic Liturgy" was the national liturgy of the Spanish Church until the close of the 11th Century, when the Roman liturgy was imposed upon it. Its use, however, lingered on until, in the 16th Century, Cardinal Ximenes, anxious to prevent it becoming quite obsolete, had its books restored and printed, and founded a college of priests at Toledo to perpetuate its use. It survives now only in that and one other church in Spain. Its date and origin are uncertain. It is evidently not derived from the Roman liturgy. Its whole structure and every separate detail disprove such a parentage. Christianity existed in Spain from the earliest times. Probably St. Paul travelled there. It is probable, therefore, that the liturgy is of Pauline rather than Petrine, or Johannine origin. The liturgy is remarkable for the number and length of its hymns and for the majority of its collects being addressed to God the Son.

Messrs. Cope & Fenwick announce for publication this month two books on Bahaism — "The Universal Religion: Bahaism"—by Dr. Hippolyte Dreyfus, and "The Mysterious Forces of Civilisation," written in Persian by an eminent Bahai philosopher and now first put into English by Johanna Dawad of Kermanshah. The Bahai movement claims to be the Divine instrument for bringing religious unity into the world, and for that reason, if for no other, it deserves attention. Its regenerating influence in Persia, the fact that people of nearly every race, creed and sect have been attracted to it, and its progress in the Western world compel, if not admiration, at least interest.

"The New Education in China."

"The New Education in China" is the title of an important article by Paul S. Reinsch in the April number of the Atlantic Monthly (Constable & Co.). There can be little doubt that China is awakening, and that "a new and strong national spirit has arisen from the many ills that threaten China," and where that spirit arises in any nation it will go far.

Germany to the Front

"It is hardly necessary to say anything about the importance, to any nation, of leadership in the matter of Chinese scientific training. The German Government recently fitted out a travelling exhibition of school supplies, such as maps, models, scientific instruments, &c., which was sent through the provinces of China, and everywhere excited the interest of persons engaged in education."

Truly our German friends deserve their reward.

Another extremely interesting article on China's development, which ought to be read in connection with that in the Atlantic Monthly, is one by M. René Pinon in the Revue des Deux Mondes for May 1st, entitled "Une forme nouvelle des luttes Internationales — Le Boycottage." He points out how China, for so long powerless to resist outside aggression, was able suddenly in 1905 to inflict great injury first on Japan and then on the United States. On February 10th, 1905, a Chinese gunboat captured a Japanese steamer with a cargo of Mauser rifles and ammunition destined for the Kouang-Toung rebels. The Chinese Viceroy ordered the confiscation of ship and cargo. Japan haughtily demanded restitution, indemnity and apology. The Chinese Government, intimidated by Japan, surrendered to her; but the Chinese people, furious at the insult, declared a general boycott against everything Japanese, even the school children swore never to buy a Japanese toy, and ten thousand women and young girls, all dressed in white, met at a Temple to deplore in tears the national shame. All efforts of both the Chinese and the Japanese Governments to arrest the movement were in vain, and in a few months Japanese trade, to the extent of 16 million yen, was lost.

THE PARISH CHURCH ANTHEM BOOK

This Anthem Book is the outcome of a desire on the part of many parish churches for a COLLECTION OF WORDS of convenient size, permanent in character, representative as to selection, and moderate in price. It contains the words of printed in extenso; and many more are incorporated by means of reference letters. The Selection is prepared alphabetically, according to the names of the chief composers, and is so arranged that various settings by other composers of the same words, or of portions of them, may be used.

Messrs. Novello's collection of "Words of Anthem" has been used as a basis in the compilation of this work, but many anthems have been added both ancient and modern, which have not been previously published in a Standard Form.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

THE COUNCIL SCHOOL HYMN BOOK

The Hymns (150) chosen are those of proved value and reputation, including such hymns as embody principles like the love of country and the duty of good citizenship. New Hymns have been specially written for the book by the Bishop of Durham, Mr. Arthur C. Benson, Dr. T. W. Jex-Blake, and others.

Prayers for the opening and closing of schools form an Appendix to the book.

To meet the requirements of Education Authorities the publishers are prepared to issue the book with special name and title for different Councils and localities.

a. Words and Tunes with Accompaniment, price 2s. 6d. b. The Words with Melody only (Staff and Tonic Sol fa combined), for the use of children, price 1s. c. Words only (limp cloth), price 6d.

ADDITIONAL HYMNS WITH TUNES

For use with Hymns Ancient & Modern or any other Church Hymnal.

As its name implies, this book is designed for use with, and not in place of, other Church Hymnals. For this reason, the Hymns are numbered from 801, so that the numbers may not interfere with the use of any other hymn book, no other Church hymn book having as many as seven hundred hymns. Each hymn has its own distinctive tune, and no hymn or tune in this work is found in Hymns Ancient and Modern (Old Edition), so that, with the two books, no duplication occurs.

Imperial 16mo. Cloth boards, price 3s. 6d. Tonic Sol-fa, 2s. 6d. Hymns only. Imperial 32mo, cloth boards, 1s. Medium 32mo, Diamond Type, paper 3d.; cloth, 4d.

NOVELLO & CO., LTD., 160, WARDOUR STREET, LONDON, W.

In May of 1905, as a retaliation for the severe measures adopted by the Americans to prevent Chinese emigration into the United States and high duties on Chinese merchandise, China suddenly declared a boycott of American goods, and in seven months American trade suffered a loss of between three and four million sterling. China has at last discovered how to make the foreign devil's boot pinch, after being under its heel so long. M. Pinon's article goes a long way to prove the statement in the Atlantic that "a new and strong national spirit has arisen in China." It is to be hoped that our educational publishers and booksellers will not allow Germany to get all the advantage of it.

"Fighting Ships"

THE 1909 edition of Jane's "Fighting Ships" is announced to be published early in June by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co. Special interest attaches to the new "Fighting Ships," as Mr. Jane has succeeded in securing plans of the German Dreadnoughts, including those of which the Government has just confessed complete ignorance. There are altogether three distinct types of German Dreadnoughts building. None of them are more formidable than our own battleships of corresponding date. The latest designs for German Dreadnought cruisers are also given, including the famous "Von der Taun." The new edition contains a variety of other improvements and additions. A point of interest in connection with Part 2 is that Commander Hovgaard, the famous Danish-American expert on ship design, has joined the staff of "Fighting Ships," and contributes for the 1909 edition a remarkable article on underwater protection against torpedoes. Mr. Charles de Grave Sells, M.Inst.C.E., deals, as usual, with the progress of warship engineering in a very full manner.

An Illustrated Descriptive Atlas of the British Empire and Japan

THE following is a copy of the wording on the title page of the best atlas of its kind with which we are acquainted :—

> "The British Empire (and Japan): Its features, resources, commerce, industries and scenery; together with the physical and economic conditions of the world. A modern atlas having 213 maps in colour and 272 illustrations, numerous tables and diagrams, with text concerning the illustrations, commercial products, statistics, histories, &c., by W. Bisiker, F.R.G.S., Diplomé in Geography of Oxford University, author of "Across Iceland," &c. London: Geographical Publishing Company, Chichester Rents, Chancery Lane, W.C. 1909. Size of Maps 10½ by 17 inches. Price in the United Kingdom, 21s. net."

It is a pleasure to recommend such a piece of good work as this, it will be invaluable to all interested in our Empire.

Canada and Canards

CANADIAN booksellers would do well to import copies of La Grande Revue for April 10th, 1909; the English publisher is Mr. David Nutt, London. It contains a long article entitled "La Véritable Canada," which deserves the serious attention of Canadian statesmen and the Canadian Press. The object of the writer, M. J. E. Vignes, is to show that all the attractions held out by Canada to attract emigrants and capital are canards, and to warn those who think of settling there against the miserable fate which awaits them. Instead of finding Canada the Promised Land, the unhappy emigrant from Europe will find it, he says, a land of broken promise; instead of finding ease, comfort and happiness, he will find, for the most part, harsh treatment, dear living, dear lodging, a terrible climate, unemployment, misery and death.

Such a charge as this against Canada in this important French review, circulating all over France, and indeed all over Europe, quoted, as it will be, in hundreds of newspapers, cannot fail to have its effect. We have merely quoted the general charge—libel is, we are sure, a truer word for it—but M. Vignes attempts to substantiate it in over thirty pages of bitter denunciation. He says his sole object in writing is to "dire la vérité" about Canada "sans aucun parti pris." Is it a case of "sour grapes," Monsieur Vignes?

ABERDEEN

The Annual Meeting of the Aberdeen Booksellers' and Newsagents' Association was held in the Café Royal, 19, Broad Street, on April 28th, Mr. Lovie Murray (A. and R. Milne) presiding over a good attendance. The president and the vice-president entertained those present to tea, which was served at the outset. The business was then proceeded with, and the chairman made appropriate reference to the death of Mr. Francis Scott, bookseller, George Street. He was one of the oldest members of their Association and the father of their esteemed secretary, to whom he expressed on behalf of them all their deep sympathy—(applause). Mr. Scott, the secretary, appropriately replied. The executive's report was submitted, detailing the work done during the year, and on the motion of the chairman, seconded by Mr. Dickie, it was approved. In the absence of the treasurer through illness Mr. Dickie reported on the finances. The year was begun with a credit balance of £11 16s. 3d. The income since then amounted to £20 3s. 7d., and after deducting the expenditure there remained £11 3s. 1d. on hand. The hon. presidents were elected, as was also the executive, with the addition of Mr. James Hall. Reports were submitted by Mr. Dunlop on the Edinburgh Conference; by the president and Mr. J. G. Bisset on the meeting in Manchester of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain; and by Mr. A. Lovie Murray on the recent meeting in Glasgow of the Scottish Branch of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain. It was remitted to the executive to consider the proposed excursion of members of the Association to be held in the summer.—Aberdeen Free Press.

BIRMINGHAM

Mr. P. F. Bullivant, of 83, Station Street, has removed to new premises at 127, Brighton Road, one minute from Brighton Road Station.

BRISTOL

In the Daily Malta Chronicle of April 27th appears the following paragraph:—"H.M. the King on Saturday last accepted from Mr. John Ayscough a copy of his latest idealist romance, 'Dromina,' with the gracious phrase that it gave His Majesty special pleasure to receive the newest work of an author of whom he heard so much good." "Dromina" is published by Mr. J. W. Arrowsmith, of Quay Street.

EDINBURGH

With reference to the paragraph in our last issue re Messrs. E. and S. Livingstone, we are now informed that their late manager never had control of their publishing business. As he demanded the right to publish on his own account they decided to part with him, and a most competent manager has been appointed in his place. The business, in accordance with the wishes of the late Messrs. Livingstone, has descended to Mrs. Livingstone's brother, himself a medical man now retired from practice, and is being carried on at the same address as formerly—15, Teviot Place.

LEEDS

The discussion in your columns last week anent the Cheap Copyright Novel has an interest for Leeds readers, because the sixpenny and sevenpenny novel is very much to the fore just now. An "Expert" has been giving his views lately, and he states that the sixpenny novel cannot possibly pay until 15,000 copies have been sold—and it is no joke to sell 15,000 copies!

I quite concur; but I saw it stated in another journal "a famous novelist sells eight thousand copies. She's been translated into Russian, I believe." Now, it seems to me, all that the "Expert" need do is to secure the services of the famous novelist, and the thing is un fait accompli.

I wonder how many reports the bookseller got who advertised in your Books Wanted columns last week for "Seven Smiles and a Sneer"? Not so bad for a title, though yet not quite up to the level of "The Seven Sorrowful Sobs of a Sinful Soul"

Copyright Novels in Cloth at Sevenpence

SIR,—It is curious, as the years roll round, how history repeats itself, and the old maxim proved true that there is nothing new under the sun. The issue of copyright novels at 1s. or even 6d. was frequently tried and proved successful thirty years ago. Then the only possible chance for its success was that the work should not only be good, but that the author should already have made for himself a solid reputation by the issue of it in the three-volume form, and subsequently in one volume at 6s.; then success in any cheaper form, and the cheaper the better, was assured. It seems now to be assumed that the days of 6s. novels are over, and that sevenpence will be the ruling price for all novels. On the contrary, I maintain that nothing but a decided success in a superior form at 6s. could possibly justify the issue of a novel in that cheaper form. Certainly nine-tenths of the novels now published at 6s. would never be published at all (no great loss to the community, perhaps) if the publisher had to risk their first production at sevenpence or even a shilling.

As to the propriety of such issues, I think the publisher should be allowed to exercise his own judgment as to what he should produce in this form, and what he should not produce. To lay down an absolute time rule for a 6s. novel to run before the cheaper edition may be issued would be difficult to do, and difficult to enforce. In his own interests surely no publisher would use the cheaper edition when its sale could still injure the 6s. edition. Six shillings is a fair price for novels of the average length. It affords a reasonable chance for most novels, at the least risk for the producers, and gives a young author an opportunity of recognition whilst a first issue at sevenpence would certainly be denied to him.—Yours, &c., E. M.

A Portuguese Dictionary

DEAR SIR,—I have just purchased a copy of a Portuguese and English Dictionary (3s. net) published by Messrs. Siegle, Hill & Co. On the first page I looked at (page 181 of the Portuguese-English part) there are no fewer than ten gross errors, a list of which I append.

Now a dictionary, of all books, should be free from mistakes; that a single page should contain ten of them is disgraceful, and I call upon the publishers, in the interests of their own reputation and of British publishing, to suppress a book which absolutely bristles with errors and which should never have been published, and to call in all the copies that have been issued. If they must have their books printed abroad, the proofs should at least be read by someone who knows English.—Yours truly,

A. H. C. T.

Glasgow.

LIST OF ERRORS REFERRED TO:—

Line 3.—"Lofty" is spelt "loft";
" 26.—"Wedding" is twice spelt "weding";
" 38.—"Appointment" is spelt "appointement";
" 50.—"Trifle" is spelt "triffle";
" 53.—"Daughter" is spelt "daugther";
" 61.—"North eastern" should be "north-western."

Line 4.—"Account" is spelt "acount";
" 12.—"New" should be "news";
" 28.—"New" should be "news."

[Our correspondent's complaint is certainly well founded. Here are a few more errors discovered in a few minutes' haphazard search:—

Page 2.—"Drink" is given as "drinck"; "bachelor" is given as "barbler"; "length" is given as "lenght"; "discourse" is given as "discwises"; "awkward" is "aukward"; "sprout" is "spront"; "God bless you" is "Good bless you"; "wood" is "vood."

We do not know if "To become mad by lecture" is a correct translation of "Tresler," but it is a state to which the reader of this work might well be reduced.—ED. P.C.]

DEAR SIR,—We thank you for your letter re our Portuguese and English Dictionary (3s. net). We will, of course, be pleased to have the alterations as to spelling made in the new edition. We may mention that this is the first complaint we have had as to the Dictionary in question. There is no dictionary at anything like its value on the market, and it is also the cheapest published.

We have had a great many complimentary letters about this book, and we challenge the gentleman making these remarks.—Yours faithfully,

SIEGLE, HILL & CO.

[We are glad to hear Messrs. Siegle will have the little book corrected. The errors seem to be confined to the English equivalents for Portuguese words. The English-Portuguese part appears to be much more correct.—ED.]

Another Educational Bookseller wants School Books made Net

DEAR SIR,—Permit me a few lines in support of "Educational Bookseller" re Net School Books. It is quite time that the trade took up this very important matter, that we shall try to have school and educational books generally published at net prices, or there will be fewer booksellers in existence in a few years than there are now.

It is an utter impossibility to give 25 per cent off educational books and make a living wage profit out of the sales, and yet we go on in the old sweet (?) way, calmly submitting to these cutting prices to our own disadvantage. It is a huge mistake, and the sooner the system is ended the better.

At the present moment there are many school books published at net prices, and there is not the slightest difficulty whatever in selling them at the fixed prices; even teachers know when a book is published at a net price, that it's no use asking for discount, and never dream of asking for any. Then another very important item is, if the books were net booksellers would have a look-in for their own town educational authorities' supplies—whereas at present the bulk of the orders are sent out of the town, where the booksellers pay heavy rates, &c., and are supplied by outside firms who are smashing up all the smaller men as fast as they can, anticipating, of course, that as soon as they have cleared them out of the way, they will be able to put up their prices and redeem their loss later on. Then again, these contracting firms supply the books at prices that are positively ruinous to the great majority in the trade, and must be almost unprofitable to themselves in spite of extra special wholesale terms from some of the publishers.

What we must do is to induce our own Association to meet the Publishers' Association, and ask them to consider the suggestion, that all future new books, and new revised editions, for school use shall be published at net prices, and if they will agree to do this, then I believe there are brighter days in store for the struggling bookseller, and more satisfaction for all honourably minded men concerned in the selling of books.

Yours truly,

NORTHERN GENERAL BOOKSELLER.

[We have often expressed our faith in the soundness of the net book system, and our wish that it could be applied to all books and all publications.—ED.]

Net Prices for Fiction

SIR,—It is proposed, now that the 6s. novel is threatened, to issue new fiction of the better kind at 10s. 6d. net in three volumes, to run for not less (possibly longer) than six months; after that period a cheap edition at 5s. net at ordinary terms. We think this suggestion is by far the best and most practical that has yet been offered. It would safeguard both author and bookseller; it would kill off much of the unwanted trash now so common; and, further, there will be a direct prospect of profit for the languishing bookseller. Of course, some objectors will appear, but these will be ignored on the probably rapid success of this change.

The 10s. 6d. net will be a potent weapon in preventing hundreds of flimsy novels ever appearing at all, which should be a blessing indeed. Publishers would still have abundance of material on offer, but would only print the better novels.

Any unfledged writer can put together a tale of a sort nowadays; let us have fewer of this genus and more good writers.

Further, at the end of six months or more the 5s. net edition appears, unless (being a failure) the book is dropped. In certain cases this 5s. edition will have a large sale—sometimes an enormous one—and here comes the all-round profit to each party. These are one or two strong arguments which we hope your readers will kindly consider, and we commend the subject to the Publishers' Association.

In closing, let us point out to everyone that the great bulk of all retailers up and down Great Britain are dismayed at the glut of cheap editions from 7d. to 2s. 6d. for fiction, for obvious reasons, and will hail with delight any scheme to ensure their extinction or elimination.

Trusting that you will find space for these remarks, which are bound to interest the trade.—Believe me, yours faithfully,

Glasgow. BOOKSELLER.

The Booking Fee Question, &c.

DEAR SIR,—Permit me again to use your valuable columns for further consideration of this question and of matters arising out of it.

Whilst it would obviously be to the advantage of the bookseller not to be debited with the Booking Fee, would it not also be a pecuniary gain to the publisher, in this way—I understand that the collectors are allowed 5 per cent. more on daily orders than the booksellers are, and that frequently they take 13 for 12 of a book or series; consequently the publishers dealing direct with the booksellers save by so doing, even though the publishers themselves pay the booking fee. Of course, no bookseller would trouble a publisher with an order for a 1s. 6d. or 2s. 6d. book, but it ought to be worth the while of the latter to supply a 5s. book, or its equivalent, free of booking fee.

My plea is, therefore for the practical abolition of the booking fee.

Until recently I had overlooked the fact that Mr. John Murray (many thanks to him) has for eighteen months charged no booking fee on any of his parcels. Perhaps my fellow-booksellers have also failed to note this encouraging fact. All our orders for Mr. Murray's books, except the very small ones, will in future go direct—and may they be numerous!

The following firms charge the booking fee only on orders of under 5s. net:—H. R. Allenson, Ltd., Blackie & Son, Ltd., W. & R. Chambers, Ltd., Henry Frowde, Hodder & Stoughton, J. Nisbet & Co., Ltd., Methuen & Co. The Methodist Publishing House, Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier, Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Ltd., Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., Swan Sonnenschein & Co., Ltd., T. Fisher Unwin, F. Warne & Co., Ward, Lock & Co., Ltd. The Religious Tract Society charge it on orders under 4s. The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge charge it on orders under 2s. 6d. Cambridge University Press do not charge booking on orders for leather books (Bibles, &c.) of 5s. and upwards, or on cloth books of 7s. and upwards.

I am sorry if I have omitted the names of any publishers who already make a concession in relation to the booking fee, and shall be glad to have their names.

In case the question of increased packing be raised, may I remind such possible objectors that we, as a matter of course, pack up our customers' purchases, charging the cost to trade expenses, and if we out of our frequently less than 8 per cent. gross profit have to do it, the publishers can.

But, Sir, could not a better and cheaper method of despatch be adopted? The following way has occurred to me. Let each publisher provide strong cardboard boxes—say, in three sizes, one to take two or three books, another four or six, and the other seven or ten, and the booksellers return them empty once a month or as often as necessary to the publishers, cost of returns being paid by the latter, because it is to save them cost of packing paper, &c. Any boxes not returned would naturally be charged to the bookseller. All that would be necessary to save the books rubbing would be to use odd paper as wedges; no outer wrapper would be required. At all events, this system of packing would save the trouble and expense frequently caused by knocked corners, &c.

I earnestly hope the publishers, all of whom I believe want to see the booksellers prosper, will not dispose of all requests for better terms with the hackneyed remark: "If we give better terms to the booksellers they will simply let the public have the benefit of them."

Further, it is useless to say "the booksellers should give 2d. in the 1s. only on books ordered." Those of us in the cities and larger towns, at any rate, know how difficult it is to satisfy our customers with less than 25 per cent.

Lastly, I hope the publishers will not gauge the demand or need for concessions by the apparent apathy of the booksellers in relation to matters which so vitally affect their interests. We need increased profits none the less because of our comparative silence and endurance—in fact perhaps our need is greater because of these characteristics arising, as they do, from hope deferred.—Yours faithfully,

HENRY R. FIRMIN,
Manager.

From Messrs. Blackie & Son, Ltd.—"Essay on Sir William Temple," by Lord Macaulay. This essay, edited by Professor Rouse, contains a short life of Lord Macaulay. Sir William Temple, Macaulay shows, was an ambassador, a cabinet councillor, an essayist, and historian. As an ambassador he is celebrated for arranging with De Witt, the Dutch Prime Minister, in conjunction with Holland, the Triple Alliance, of which Macaulay has written: "It may be viewed in two lights, as a measure of foreign policy, and as a measure of domestic policy; and under both aspects it seems to us deserving of all the praise which has been bestowed upon it." Temple was the originator of the Alliance and chief mover in its formation. It only took five days to perfect. From fear of it France ceded Franche Comté, and it stayed Louis from going to war. Macaulay, as usual, is bitter in his character of this good man. In the summary of Temple's character he has written: "He was no profound thinker, only a man of letters, &c." Macaulay by his writings has shown that Sir William Temple was more than a man of letters.

From the Same.—"Essay on John Hampden," by Lord Macaulay. This essay is founded upon the work of Lord Nugent, entitled "Some Memorials of John Hampden, his Party and his Times, 1831." This essay commences with a short life of Lord Macaulay, and is one of Professor Rouse's English Text Series. It is worthy of a place in every library, and its small size and price should give it a place in every reading man's house.

From the Same.—"Captain Singleton's Early Adventures," by Daniel Defoe. To many of us this book is a stranger. To lovers of Robinson Crusoe, and who is too old to enjoy it? Many will doubtless be attracted to this work of Defoe's, one of the Professor Rouse series. Let us hope that in time Messrs. Blackie & Son will give the reading world "The True Story of the Apparition of Mrs. Veal," written 1705; "The History, Life, and Remarkable Adventures of the truly Honourable Colonel Jacque," a later work, and many others of this inimitable author.

From the Same.—"Essay on the War of the Succession in Spain," by Lord Macaulay. This small book, one of a series of Messrs. Blackie & Son, has a very good short life and criticism of character and style of writing of this great man, lawyer, member of Parliament, member of Supreme Council of India, and author. In this excellent treatise, one of the Professor Rouse series ("unabridged") of Spanish wars, principally during our Queen Anne's reign. Lord Macaulay is trenchant, as is usually the case in his writings, whether always correctly so, critics do not agree. In this work he finds fault with Lord Mahon. The value of good fighting and practical generals is shown in the accounts of Lord Peterborough on the English side, and the Duke of Vendome on the French. One regrets as one reads that they did not meet in battle.

TWO BOOKS ON GARDENING

THE FRENCH SYSTEM OF INTENSIVE CULTIVATION. By JOHN WEATHERS. With an Introduction by WILLIAM ROBINSON. With Illustrations.

From Messrs. Cassell & Co.—"Double Bonds," by Florinda McCall. A well-written story of Australian life with a particularly attractive heroine. It concerns her marriage as a young girl in the bush, her early widowhood and subsequent adoption by a rich aunt, who insists in the concealment of her story, her second marriage and its checkered course ending, however, in happiness. Readers surfeited with heroines of the New Woman or neurotic type will find the atmosphere of this book a refreshing change.

From Messrs. Digby, Long & Co.—"The Arbitrator," by Lucas Cleeve. Ada Marshall, after rejecting a proposal of marriage from Lord Kilverstoke, buys his "place" in the country at a fancy price in order to render him much-needed help. She falls in love with Kilverstoke's agent, David Inglestone, a hero of the proud, silent type. Together they experiment in the education of the villagers, much to the horror of the vicar and the gentry of the neighbourhood, and their confession of love is postponed to the last page. Lucas Cleeve's sentences are sometimes involved, and the writing generally is rather stiff and cramped; the plot, also, is conventional and not very interesting. The characters, however, are unusual and well drawn.

From the Same.—"The Dexter Entanglement," by G. W. Appleton. The rich uncle from Australia is the theme of Mr. Appleton's new novel, but the theme is played with variations. After an absence of twenty-five years, someone bearing his name comes to London and makes out a will in favour of his niece, Kate Forester, to the tune of £100,000. He is eccentric, and reveals his eccentricity by adding a codicil to his will stating that if she marries Dick Capper she must forfeit the money. He then goes to Scotland, and a few days later news comes of his death in a motor smash. Mysterious messages and still more mysterious personages follow thick upon the news, and the entanglement is such that only a skilled novelist like Mr. Appleton could hope to unravel it. The story is full of incident and excitement.

From Messrs. Eyre & Spottiswoode, Ltd.—"British National Finance," by J. W. Root. Written evidently by one who not only thoroughly understands his subject, but enjoys expounding its eccentricities, and this he does most clearly. The author touches also upon other subjects not financial, but coming into the field of his remarks, one is that bad liquor helps to fill gaols and asylums. We quite agree with him. And he says in another place that cigarette and cigar smokers absorb more nicotine into their systems in a day than a pipe smoker does in a week. We think the cigarette is by far the worst, especially with those who will smoke to the end and not throw half away. And he states that Scotland drinks more than half as much again as England. This we did not know. He is a brave lad the Scotchman, no doubt, and if Scotland drinks more than England, Ireland smokes more. In discussing "Protection of Wealth," he says, "The wage earner is not clamorous for a great increase in the Navy. Even in case of disaster he has not a great deal to lose. No victorious foe would seek to annex the country." But the unpatriotic man who will not vote for keeping up a strong navy would be very sorry when an enemy was foisted upon him. And if the country was not annexed he would have many years of repentance until the great war indemnity was paid off. British finance is a subject for the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and to him we leave the financial questions with which these pages teem. As we have said they are evidently written by one who thoroughly understands his subject. Certainly "British National Finance" is a book to study, especially as the subject is so much before us at the present day.

From Messrs. Forbes & Co. (Chicago).—"Happy School Days," by Margaret E. Sangster. We sincerely hope that this sensible book will have a large circulation in this country. It is addressed to the American schoolgirl, but her cousins in the old country need just the same advice, just the same wise hand; indeed, we are inclined to think they need it more. The tone of these thirty-seven papers is bright and free from cant. The author has a sense of humour and proportion, she shows an understanding of the necessity of moving with the times which is refreshing. Too many of the books for the young give one the idea of emanating either from venerable ecclesiastics or pious old maids. Both are invaluable in their proper place, but we never can persuade ourselves that their selection of the young as an audience is a happy one. Let mothers of schoolgirls and schoolmistresses themselves study Mrs. Sangster's point of view; they will learn almost as much from the book as the schoolgirl herself.

From The Gresham Publishing Co.—"Modern Electric Practice." Edited by Prof. Magnus Maclean, M.A., D.Sc. A new edition of this recognised standard work has just been issued by bringing it fully up to date, and including all the latest developments. This monumental work contains contributions by 38 specialists and is in six handsome volumes, well bound, fully indexed and illustrated, and covers the whole range of electrical practice. The plates and illustrations are admirable, and two composite models of an electric motor and a wireless telegraphic installation are included in each set. It would be almost impossible to produce anything better than this. The publishers will be pleased to send detailed prospectus on application.

From Health & Strength, Ltd.—"Larner's Text Book on Walking for Pleasure, Exercise and Sport," by C. E. Larner, the Olympic Champion. The contents are divided into 8 chapters. A definition of Walking, How to walk both fast and far, Road walking, Track walking, Training, On judging, Which deals with walking as a pastime, and a few suggested rambles, and the Care of the feet. Mr. Larner writes in an entertaining manner, and his book is full of useful information and reminiscences. The chapter entitled Walking as a Pastime and a few suggested rambles is exceedingly interesting, and will appeal to those walkers, not to mention cyclists, who live in and around London.

From the Same.—"Tricks of Self Defence," by W. H. Collingridge. In this book the most useful tricks of Ju-Jutsu have been clearly and concisely explained, and their ready comprehension aided by excellent photographs. This is a book we can heartily recommend.

From Mr. B. Herder, St. Louis, Mexico.—"Jack South," by the Rev. David Bearne, S.J. We have on several occasions drawn attention to the excellence of Father Bearne's stories of young people; so natural are they and so true to life, that they interest both old and young. His latest story relates the doings of Jack South "and some other Jacks": it is full of wholesome sentiment, good feeling and suggestive thought. Father Bearne has the happy and unusual knack of broaching religious and serious subjects without making the reader feel that he is preaching or moralising.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—"Moran of Kildally," by Lauchlan Maclean Watt. A story of life in a Scotch country town, and of a man of gentle birth and good natural capacities who ruins through drink not only his own life, but also that of his gifted and lovable daughter. The story and the characters are true to life, and the book has pathos as well as interest.

From Mr. John Long.—"Brittany to Whitehall," Life of Louise Renée de Kéroualle, Duchess of Portsmouth, by Mrs. Colquhoun Grant. Daughter of the Comte de Kéroualle, the head of an old French family, through the instigation of Louis XIV., for political reasons, she became one of the mistresses of Charles II., holding that position from 1670 to the time of his death in 1685. Her son, born 1672, was created by the King Duke of Portsmouth in England, and Duke of Lennox in Scotland. The Countess Louise, besides being very beautiful, had great mental power over Charles II., such as Gabrielle d'Estrées had over Henry IV. of France, and Madame de Pompadour over her royal lover. Of Gabrielle d'Estrées it has been written that Henry IV. "valued her judgment in important state matters, and asked her advice." She was not a mere beautiful woman, but a "dear companion." Such can be said of Countess Louise. Her policy, it is stated, for the most part was followed, often in spite of the efforts of the King's ministers, and happily so. To her credit she is said to have been fond of Charles II. to the day of his death, and it is added, accounting for the continuance of affection between them, that the King's "manner to all women was chivalrous and kind." We may add that "Brittany to Whitehall" is a credit to its publisher, as well as to its authoress.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—"A First Book of Botany," by Elizabeth Healey. As the school year now usually begins in September, a study of fruits is used as a starting point, and the arrangement of the little book is seasonal. It deals with the elementary facts and principles of the science; observation and experiment are the dominating notes, and the importance of sketching is insisted on. Miss Healey has a clear style, and there are numerous illustrations.

From the Same.—"Tales from Shakespeare," by Charles and Mary Lamb. Second series. Introduction and Notes by C. D. Punchard, B.A. Mr. Punchard has supplemented Lamb's work, and brought the young reader a little closer to the plays. Quotations are frequent, and a fair amount of information has been given about the players as well as about the stories they embody.

From the Same.—"Pocahontas," by Amédée Pichot. The latest addition to Siepmann's French Series for rapid reading is provided with notes and a vocabulary of words and phrases.

From the Same.—Messrs. Macmillan & Co. have issued in their "English Literature for Secondary School Series," "Selections from the Poems of Robert Browning," with Introduction and Notes by Mrs. Glazebrook. Both the latter strike us as singularly well done.

From Messrs. Marshall Bros., Ltd.—"Sidelights on Christian Doctrine," by the Rev. James Orr, D.D. Professor Orr, whose thoughtful works on Christian Dogmatics are widley known and studied, undertakes in this volume to give a series of more "popular" expositions of the same subject. The book is intended to serve as an introduction to more elaborate treatises. The writer tries to show what in its simplest form Theology is: and that under all the modern demand for "reconstruction" there is an essential body of Christian thought which does not and cannot change. He bases himself upon the Bible, and his point of view, while entirely orthodox and Scriptural, is put with so much clarity and freshness that it may be enjoyed and digested by any thoughtful Christian.

From Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co.—"The Widow—to say Nothing of the Man," by Helen Rowland. Of the school of Anthony Hope's "Dolly Dialogues," though not quite so witty and sparkling. The widow and the bachelor meet in various places, talk and flirt outrageously; at their last meeting they talk of marriage—seriously. The dialogue is smooth and easy, and both widow and bachelor are very charming and likeable people, who can turn a neat phrase and say a clever thing without conspicuous effort.

From the Same.—"Ballads of Brave Women: Records of the Heroic in Thought, Action, and Endurance," by Alfred H. Miles, and other writers. The aim of the compiler and Editor of this representative selection from the works of English and American poets has been accomplished with commendable judgment. The book is indeed "a repertoire of suitable pieces for recitation by women at women's meetings and at gatherings and entertainments of a more general character," as the preface denotes.

From Messrs. Paul (Kegan) Trench, Trübner, & Co., Ltd.—"War, and other Short Poems." This little volume, we are afraid, contains no real achievement and very little promise, though one or two sonnets and the rondeaux are neatly turned. "Narkissos," by W. This anonymous poet is capable of excellent thought and feeling, but his expression is rather poor. As an artist he is crude; e.g., "Hellas" is made to rhyme with "cellars," and "sat at" with "scattered."

From the Same.—"The Garden of Love and other Poems," by Immo S. Allen. We are not sure whether we entirely agree with the author's remark that "of all languages, ancient and modern, English is the best adapted for poetry of various kinds." He divides his own contributions to the field of Poesy into four sections—"Amatoria," "Miscellanea," "Religiosa," and "Dramatica." Many are quite short, consisting of but a few lines, some show considerable power of feeling and expression, and most have a certain note of distinction which besneaks the classical scholar. But the book would have gained by judicious weeding.

From Messrs. C. Arthur Pearson.—"The Romance of Smuggling," by Athol Forbes. These stories of smuggling are both varied and interesting. The author has had unusual facilities for producing this book, as he has lived all his life on a part of the coast that is nearest to Holland, and has been on intimate terms with the fishermen, and, last but not least, his grandfather was a preventitive officer. He has many good stories to tell and tells them well.

From Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd. "Native Life in East Africa" by Dr. Karl Weule. Translated by Alice Werner. This large volume contains the results of an ethnological research expedition in East Africa. Dr. Karl Weule spent only six months in that country, visiting the Makua, Yao, and Makonde districts, but he made excellent use of his time and brought back with him a body of experience and a fund of information not only interesting to the layman, but of value to the expert. He describes with a graphic pen what is visible and tangible in the life and customs of the people: he presents the reader with some of the results of his study of native languages, and prints various songs of which he took phonographic records; and he reproduces various native drawings of the greatest value. The book is of great general interest, and may be heartily recommended to the notice of those who like to read records of travel and exploration.

From Mr. Edward Ponsonby, Dublin.—"Sketches and Stories of the Royal Irish Constabulary," by C. W. Leatham, late Commissioner, R.I.C. Far too few are the pages of this pamphlet. After a forty-year service we opine that the author might have given us a longer time of amusement. It is regrettable, but true, as Mr. Leatham says, "modern legislation has had a dwindling effect upon the superannuation allowance." With such a splendid set of men of such valuable service the result for the Royal Irish Constabulary should have been upward instead of downward.

From Mr. Grant Richards.—"The Menace of Socialism," by W. Lawler Wilson. This is no political tract written in the heat of the moment for a purely ephemeral purpose; it is a logical, comprehensive, and well-considered examination of the principles of Socialism—an examination that is as unsparing as it is honest. Not only is it a complete history of the movement, both in England and abroad, but it includes also a forecast of the future developments of Socialism. The whole Socialist system is studied from a new point of view, and the book is one that should be in the hands of everyone who is engaged either in combating or advocating Socialism, particularly because of the able and lucid exposition of an alternative policy which the author offers to Socialists. There is an appendix giving the socialist expenditure on organisation and propaganda, and a number of ingenious and useful diagrams.

From Messrs. John F. Shaw & Co., Ltd.—"Mystery Island: A Tale of the Pacific," by Fred Whishaw. A most exciting tale of the life of a father and his two sons, and the crew of a ship, The Heart's Desire, wrecked on an island. Many of the incidents are so very strange and fresh in novel writing that the book can be thoroughly recommended, especially to young men.

From Messrs. G. Routledge & Sons.—"Auction Bridge, and How to Play it," by Captain Browning. This little book presents the game of Auction Bridge in a simple and definite form, according to the laws now settled by the Bath and Portland Club Committees, by the writer who uses the pseudonym of "Slambo" in The Westminster Gazette.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—"The Flying Months," by Frances M. Peard. The adventures of a quasi-governess, whose life is nearly wrecked by the unscrupulous and fascinating widow whose children she has the charge of. The scene is laid chiefly in Italy and India. The story is pleasantly told, and would be a good choice for a girl reader.

From Mr Fisher Unwin.—"Tales of Unrest," by Joseph Conrad. Mr. Unwin has reprinted in his Adelphi Library these half-dozen tales originally published ten years ago. Some of them may seem to many readers less delightful than Mr. Conrad's more recent works; but they are all permeated by his peculiar power of picturesque description and wild imaginativeness.

From the Same.—"Coillard of the Zambesi," the Lives of François and Christina Coillard, of the Paris Missionary Society in South and Central Africa, 1858–1904, by C. W. Macintosh. A most interesting account of these missionaries' lives, carrying one through the turbulent times of the wars between the Boers of the Free State and the Basutos, and the latter and the Zulus. Their strenuous forty years' missionary work should appeal to a large number, the book being a very interesting narrative of life amongst the Basutos, enriched by over seventy good illustrations.

From the Same—"Papers for Thinking Welshmen," by A. W. Wade-Evans. A booklet entirely for Welshmen, but there is no reason why an Englishman should not try to master its contents. It has been written with much thought.

From Mr. C. H. White.—"Peter Vandy," by Edwin Pugh. A "biography in outline" of a man who began life as a seller of newspapers in the street, and progressed to enormous wealth, viâ the turf, the Stock Exchange and company promoting. Peter Vandy was a hard, a cruel and a merciless money lender. He never took a holiday, he never wasted an hour, he never loved anyone save his boy, Cuthie. And Cuthie died as an indirect result of his father's heartlessness. The last few pages of Mr. Pugh's book are not pleasant reading. A man commits suicide, a boy dies, and another man goes hopelessly insane. "His slack foolish mouth dribbles saliva that dries and scintillates upon his beard." Realistic touches of this kind are violent rather than powerful, and they remind us of Mr. Pugh's first novel, "A Man of Straw."

From Messrs. John Wright & Sons, Ltd., Bristol.—"Health, Morals and Longevity," by George A. Cresswell, M.A., Oxford, and Albert Cresswell, M.A., M.D., Ch.Ch. Oxford. This book is to throw light upon some of the problems concerned with the avoidance of disease, debility, and early death—in short, the way to live a healthy life and not to die early. The probable lifetime, the authors state, for a man is forty-four, for a female forty-seven. In our ignorance we thought the man had usually the longest innings. To those anxious how to live the full span we recommend this work.

From Messrs. E. Woodhouse & Co., London.—"Inez, The King's Page," by Arthur Maltby. A story of the Court of Queen Mary, "Bloody Mary" the name she is known by in England. But in these pages we learn that Queen Mary had a loving kindly heart. It was her unscrupulous advisers, principally Gardiner and Bonner, that led her to sacrifice so many Protestants at the stake. Had she not been a religious fanatic and led by advisers, she would have been nearly equal as a Queen as her sister, Elizabeth, who succeeded her. Inez, the page, was King Philip's morganatic wife. Curious to relate his regal wife Mary never seems to have suspected that Inez the page was a woman, possibly because she was a Spaniard and of marked Spanish features. The book is full of accounts of cleverly arranged traps to ensnare persons suspected by the Court, or by Gardiner or Bonner, or to release those captured. And we learn how skilful a swordsman was Philip, and how having killed Lord North (recognised as a spy) he sent his body in a box to Bishop Bonner. This historical story is full of interest and of exciting incidents.

New Editions.—Messrs. G. Routledge & Sons, in their "Oval" series have issued a revised edition of "Hockey and Lacrosse." Every kind of practical information about the games, outfit, clubs, &c., is contained in the volume. Messrs. Allenson have issued a second edition of that deservedly popular book, "A Mountain Path," by John A. Hamilton. Mr. Hamilton in these forty-four talks to

ONE SHILLING NET.

A New Departure!

MESSRS. GREENING beg to inform the trade that they are inaugurating a new departure in SIXPENNY NOVELS, which takes a somewhat different line to the present accepted form

The publishers believe that the present form of the sixpenny reprint, i.e. the large 8vo size, is not of a convenient form for general use, so they are issuing a series in a Crown 8vo size, which is practically equivalent to that of the average Six Shilling Novel without its bulk.

The volumes will be done up in a neat Paper Wrapper, with a cover design by the well-known artist, Mr. H. M. BROCK, and will be sold to the public at SIXPENCE NET.

The first volumes in the series are

THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL.	By Baroness Orczy
THE MASCOTTE OF PARK LANE.	By Lucas Cleeve
UNCLE PEACEABLE.	By Reginald Turner

A REMARKABLE NOVEL OF HIGH LITERARY QUALITIES AND ALREADY AN ASSURED SUCCESS

THE ROMANCE OF A NUN

By ALIX KING, Author of "The Little Novice."

A LEADING LITERARY CRITIC who has read the M.S. tells us there has been nothing finer since Olive Schreiner's "Story of an African Farm." If this be so, it will be the book not only of the coming season, but of many seasons.

The International Publisher and Stationer says: "This remarkable book . . . . . cannot be too widely circulated and read. As a novel it is all that can be asked for, exciting, palpitating with pathos and passion and sympathy, with the highest instincts of the human heart."

READY MAY 10th. In two demy 8vo vols. Over 1,000 pp. Price 21s. net.

PROGRESSIVE CREATION

A RECONCILIATION OF RELIGION WITH SCIENCE

By Rev. HOLDEN E. SAMPSON.

This book is of the deepest interest to many classes of readers and thinkers. It appeals to so many sections of human society, being a serious contribution to published thought in current scientific research. It is a definite and positive advance of the Evolutionary theory which started from the publication of Darwin's memorable books "The Origin of Species" and "The Descent of Man"; and it guides the scientific mind through the portals of psychology (as, in effect, Darwin himself prophesied would be the case) into the wider regions of the so-called "Supernatural" and the spiritual planes, breaking down the time-worn barriers which for so many ages have been reared up between the Spiritual and the Material, and between Science and Religion. It affords a theory of the Origin of Life, of Being, of Nature and Forms, of Evil, and of the Earth and Heavenly Bodies, which has never before in the history of modern literature been propounded; a theory of the deepest interest and importance.

READY ABOUT END OF MAY, 1909. Demy 8vo, about 400 pp. Subscription price, 6s. net.

SCIENTIFIC IDEALISM:

Or, MATTER AND FORCE, AND THEIR RELATION TO LIFE AND CONSCIOUSNESS. By WILLIAM KINGSLAND, Author of "The Mystic Quest," "The Esoteric Basis of Christianity," &c.

RECENTLY ISSUED. Demy 8vo, 736 pp., cloth, including Bibliography and copious Index. Price 12s. 6d. net.

THE HIDDEN CHURCH OF THE HOLY GRAAL:

ITS LEGENDS AND SYMBOLISM. Considered in their Affinity with Certain Mysteries of Initiation and other traces of a secret Tradition in Christian Times. By ARTHUR EDWARD WAITE.

". . . this entrancing book . . . is one which no lover of romance, of our old literature, of the Celtic spirit, or, more particularly, of the Graal Legend can afford to leave unread. . . . His book is a conspectus, as it were, of the whole subject, and stands alone as a magazine of information concerning the Sangraal. The reader . . . will find all the materials significant to the problem laid before him in this encyclopædic treatise."—Nation.

NOW READY. Royal 8vo, 700 pp., cloth. Price 21s. net.

VITALITY, FASTING and NUTRITION.

A Physiological Study of the Curative Power of Fasting, together with a New Theory of the Relation of Food to Human Vitality. By HEREWARD CARRINGTON, Member of the Society for Psychical Research, &c.

MONISM?

An Antidote to Professor Haeckel's book, "The Riddle of the Universe." By S. PH. MARCUS, M.D., Spa Physician at Pyrmont, Germany. Translated by R. W. FELKIN, M.D., F.R.S.E., &c., Author of "Tropical Diseases in Africa," &c. Crown 8vo. paper covers, 1s. net; by post, 1s. 2d.

This little volume has been written with the object of stimulating men and women to think. Materialism is spreading far and wide to-day, and it seems to me that this is largely due to want of sound thinking. The rush and hurry of modern life too often prevents deep or sound thinking, and leads many people to take their views of life and faith ready-made. A great name leads, or misleads, the popular ideas as to what is false and what is true. In this small book the author has sought to provide, as it were, thought tabloids containing an antidote.

Descriptive Circulars of these and other important Books post free on request.

MR. JOHN LONG'S NEW BOOKS

GENERAL LITERATURE

BRITTANY TO WHITEHALL: Life of Louise Renée de Kéroualle, Duchess of Portsmouth. By Mrs. COLQUHOUN GRANT, Author of "French Noblesse of the Eighteenth Century," "Mother of Czars," "Queen and Cardinal," "Quaker and Courtier" With Photogravure Portrait and other rare Portraits and Illustrations Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net (Illustrated Prospectus post free)

The BOOKMAN says:—"From Brittany to Whitehall came the lovely maid-of-honour who was to serve France's interests while delighting an English king; and as interesting and full of incident as a novel is this life-story of the celebrated Louise Renée de Kéroualle The beautiful Breton girl, mistress of King Charles II., and afterwards Duchess of Portsmouth, was unlike many of the Sovereign's favourites, for she was of ancient and noble birth Mrs. Grant has presented a moving and vivid picture of the Breton girl's loveliness and dignity, lovableness and power"

THE MAGIC OF SPORT: Mainly Autobiographical. By NAT GOULD. With Photogravure Portrait and over 50 Illustrations of notable Sportsmen, Horses, and Places Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net (Illustrated Prospectus post free)

The FIELD:—"There is no better known novelist at the present day than Nat Gould 'The Magic of Sport' is full of interest from start to finish, and at times one follows the course of his story almost greedily. The book should appeal not only to those who follow racing, but the community at large"

The WORLD:—"'The Magic of Sport' is an indispensable addition to every sportsman's book shelves"

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

NAT GOULD'S New NOVELS at 1s. Net

Owing to the "Yellowback" style of binding having fallen into disfavour, Mr. John Long has decided to publish at the outset all this author's New Novels, commencing June, 1909, at the price of 1/- net per copy, in paper; and the cloth edition hitherto published at 2/6, will now be issued at 2/- ordinary, in attractive pictorial design.

SIZE AND STYLE

These novels will contain about 280 pp. of reading matter and will be crown 8vo in size, printed on good feather-weight antique wove paper. The cover designs will be by Mr. Harington Bird, the well-known horse painter. They will be printed in three colours on a fine art paper by the three-colour process

LARGELY INCREASED SALES

Mr. John Long is confident that, large as is already Mr. Nat Gould's public, it will be enormously increased by the new issue, and the trade are urged to bear this in mind when making up their orders.

TERMS TO THE TRADE

Mr. John Long has decided to issue the new series to the trade on terms that will admit of a good profit, and he is confident that the trade will be well advised to push this line, as the author in the past has been so profitable to them, and cannot fail to be still more so in the future, the more especially as Mr. Long, being the sole publisher of all Mr. Nat Gould's new novels, will constantly keep this author well to the front. Please write for advertising matter and terms, either to the publisher or the wholesale agent.

THE CHARM OF THE ENGLISH VILLAGE

Illustrated by SYDNEY R. JONES.

With 120 attractive Illustrations, many full-page, reproduced from the Artist's charming Pen-and-Ink Sketches, with a Frontispiece in Coloured Photogravure.

THE TIMES.—"A DELIGHTFUL VOLUME FOR LOVERS OF RURAL ENGLAND. Mr. Ditchfield discourses of all the characteristic features of the village; while Mr. Jones adds immensely to the charm of the volume by his copious illustrations, which, both in technique and in conception, take a high rank among specimens of the modern art of landscape in pen and ink."

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Mr. Jones is a skilful artist, and Mr. Ditchfield deals in village life as centred in the church, in manor houses and farms, in cottages and inns, and gives much varied information in a series of chapters informed with a proper degree of enthusiasm. IT IS A VOLUME WHICH NO LOVER OF OUR BEAUTIFUL OLD HOMELY COUNTRY PLACES SHOULD FAIL TO SEE AND READ."

THE DAILY MAIL.—"This book was well worth writing, for Englishmen have still to realise the beauty of their own country. We are glad that Mr. Ditchfield insists upon the truth that in the picturesqueness of her villages England excels all other countries. Both author and artist have done their work well in A BOOK WHICH SHOULD APPEAL TO ALL ENGLISHMEN WHO ARE INTERESTED IN THEIR OWN COUNTRY."

THE SPECTATOR.—"This is a very pleasing book. Mr. Ditchfield has rendered the 'charm' very successfully, Mr. Jones contributing not a little to the result by his very attractive drawings."

The Realities of WAR
READ
THE GREEN CURVE
And other Stories. By OLE-LUK-OIE. 6s.

The author of these stories has the true prophetic gift: his vivid pictures of what modern warfare means in no way outrage the bounds of possibility. He shows us what a terrible toll the conditions of modern warfare will levy on combatants and non-combatants alike. "Ole-Luk-Oie's" story, "The Kite," when it first appeared in Blackwood's Magazine, was at once accepted as a masterpiece of descriptive writing.

SIDE TRACKS and BRIDLE PATHS

By LIONEL JAMES ("The Intelligence Officer"), Author of "On the Heels of De Wet." 6s. Illustrated.

Mr. James has used his wide travels to the best advantage. In this book he covers ground in Persia, India, Russia, South Africa, Germany, Turkey, and England.

"The book has a welcome up-to-dateness and provides a very readable volume of varied adventure, observation, and anecdote."—Observer.

"A book of much worldly wisdom, enriched by the best of all wisdom's concomitants, a merry sense of humour."—Daily Telegraph.

SECOND EDITION.

THE SHORT CUT TO INDIA.

The Record of a Journey along The Route of the Baghdad Railway.

By DAVID FRASER, Author of "A Modern Campaign" and "The Marches of Hindustan." With 83 Illustrations, demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

"A most readable book."—Times.
"Should be read widely."—Morning Post.

THE ENGLISHWOMAN IN INDIA.

By MAUD DIVER, Author of "Captain Desmond, V.C." 7s. net.

There are few qualified to write with greater authority upon Indian Life than Mrs. Maud Diver, the popular novelist, author of "Captain Desmond, V.C.," &c. In her new book she details with much skill and in a most interesting manner the scope of the Englishwoman's Life in India as Maid, Wife, Mother, Hostess, and Housekeeper, and its duties in contact with Eastern Womanhood and Female Medical Aid. The second portion of the book is devoted to sketches of the lives of the Pioneer (native) women of India.

THE PLACE OF HISTORY IN EDUCATION.

By J. W. ALLEN, Formerly Brakenbury Exhibitioner, Hulsean Professor of Modern History at Bedford College, University of London. 5s. net.

A brilliant attempt to frame a theory and to define a system of Education, and a discussion of the place of History in this ideal. History as a Science is examined and contrasted with History as a Pageant, and a basis of reconciliation found in the realisation by each of what is irrelevant to its purpose. Concludes with an illustration, in three summary treatments of the Reformation, of the adoption of unscientific standpoints, bringing out the kind of differences in the presentation of correlated facts that may be made by an alteration of the point of view.

Sure to be widely read and discussed.
